DON JUAN.

CANTO VII.

I.

OH Love ! O Glory ! what are ye who fly
Around us ever, rarely to alight ?
There's not a meteor in the Polar sky
Of such transcendant and more fleeting flight.
Chill, and chained to cold earth, we lift on high
Our eyes in search of either lovely light ;
A thousand and a thousand colours they
Assume, then leave us on our freezing way.

II.

And such as they are, such my present tale is,
A non-descript and ever varying rhyme,
A versified Aurora Borealis,
Which flashes o'er a waste and icy clime.
When we know what all are, we must bewail us,
But, ne'ertheless, I hope it is no crime
To laugh at all things---for I wish to know
What after all, are all things---but a Show ?

III.

They accuse me---Me---the present writer of
The present poem---of---I know not what,---
A tendency to under-rate and scoff
At human power and virtue, and all that :
And this they say in language rather rough.
Good God ! I wonder what they would be at !
I say no more than has been said in Dante's
Verse, and by Solomon and by Cervantes ;

IV.

By Swift, by Machiavel, by Rochefoucault,
By Fenelon, by Luther, and by Plato ;
By Tillotson, and Wesley, and Rousseau,
Who knew this life was not worth a potato,
Tis not their fault, nor mine, if this be so---
For my part, I pretend not to be Cato,
Nor even Diogenes---We live and die,
But which is best, you know no more than I.

V.

Socrates said, our only knowledge was
“ To know that nothing could be known ; ” a pleasant
Science enough, which levels to an ass
Each Man of Wisdom, future, past, or present.
Newton (that Proverb of the Mind) alas !
Declared, with all his grand discoveries recent,
That he himself felt only “ like a youth
“ Picking up shells by the great Ocean---Truth.”

VI.

Ecclesiastes said, that all is vanity---

Most modern preachers say the same, or show it
By their examples of true Christianity ;

In short, all know, or very soon may know it ;
And in this scene of all-confessed inanity,

By saint, by sage, by preacher, and by poet,
Must I restrain me, through the fear of strife,
From holding up the Nothingness of life ?

VII.

Dogs, or Men ! (for I flatter you in saying
That ye are dogs—your betters far) ye may
Read, or read not, what I am now essaying
To show ye what ye are in every way.

As little as the Moon stops for the baying
Of wolves, will the bright Muse withdraw one ray
From out her skies—then howl your idle wrath !
While she still silvers o'er your gloomy path.

VIII.

“ Fierce loves and faithless wars”—I am not sure
If this be the right reading—’tis no matter ;
The fact’s about the same, I am secure ;
I sing them both, and am about to batter
A town which did a famous siege endure,
And was beleaguer’d both by land and water
By Suvaroff, or Anglieè Suwarrow,
Who loved blood as an Alderman loves marrow.

IX.

The Fortress is called Ismail, and is placed
 Upon the Danube's left branch and left bank,
 With buildings in the Oriental taste,
 But still a fortress of the foremost rank,
 Or was at least, unless 'tis since defaced,
 Which with your conquerors is a common prank :
 It stands some eighty versts from the high sea,
 And measures round of toises thousands three.

X.

Within the extent of this fortification
 A Borough is comprised along the height
 Upon the left, which from its loftier station
 Commands the city, and upon its scite
 A Greek had raised around this elevation
 A quantity of palisades upright,
 So placed as to impede the fire of those
 Who held the place, and to assist the foe's.

XI.

This circumstance may serve to give a notion
 Of the high talents of this new Vauban :
 But the town ditch below was deep as Ocean,
 The rampart higher than you'd wish to hang :
 But then there was a great want of precaution,
 (Prithee, excuse this engineering slang)
 Nor work advanced, nor covered way was there,
 To hint at least "Here is no thoroughfare."

XII.

But a stone bastion, with a narrow gorge,
And walls as thick as most sculls born as yet;
Two batteries, cap-a-pee, as our St. George,
Case-mated one, and t'other "a barbette,"
Of Danube's bank took formidable charge;
While two-and-twenty cannon duly set
Rose over the town's right side, in bristling tier,
Forty feet high upon a cavalier.

XIII.

But from the river the town's open quite,
Because the Turks could never be persuaded
A Russian vessel e'er would heave in sight;
And such their creed was, till they were invaded,
When it grew rather late to set things right.
But as the Danube could not well be waded,
They looked upon the Muscovite flotilla,
And only shouted, "Allah!" and "Bis Millah!"

XIV.

The Russians now were ready to attack;
But oh, ye Goddesses of war and glory!
How shall I spell the name of each Cossacque
Who were immortal, could one tell their story?
Alas! what to their memory can lack?
Achilles' self was not more grim and gory
Than thousands of this new and polished nation,
Whose names want nothing but—pronunciation.

XV.

Still I'll record a few, if but to encrease
 Our euphony—there was Strongenoff, and Strokonoff,
 Meknop, Serge Lwdw, Arseniew of modern Greece,
 And Tschitshakoff, and Roguenoff, and Chokenoff,
 And others of twelve consonants a-piece :
 And more might be found out, if I could poke enough
 Into gazettes ; but Fame (capricious strumpet)
 It seems, has got an ear as well as trumpet,

XVI.

And cannot tune those discords of narration,
 Which may be names at Moscow, into rhyme ;
 Yet there were several worth commemoration,
 As e'er was virgin of a nuptial chime ;
 Soft words too fitted for the peroration
 Of Londonderry, drawling against time,
 Ending in “ischskin,” “ouskin,” “iffskhy,” “ouski,”
 Of whom we can insert but Rousamouski.

XVII.

Scherematoft and Chrematoff, Koklophti,
 Koclobski, Kourakin, and Mouskin Pouskin,
 All proper men of weapons, as e'er scoffed high
 Against a foe, or ran a sabre through skin :
 Little cared they for Mahomet or Mufti,
 Unless to make their kettle drums a new skin
 Out of their hides, if parchment had grown dear,
 And no more handy substitute been near.

XVIII.

Then there were foreigners of much renown,
 Of various nations, and all volunteers ;
 Not fighting for their country or its crown,
 But wishing to be one day brigadiers ;
 Also to have the sacking of a town ;
 A pleasant thing to young men at their years.
 'Mongst them were several Englishmen of pith,
 Sixteen called Thomson, and nineteen named Smith.

XIX.

Jack Thomson and Bill Thomson ;— all the rest
 Had been called “ Jemmy,” after the great bard ;
 I don’t know whether they had arms or crest,
 But such a godfather’s as good a card.
 Three of the Smiths were Peters ; but the best
 Amongst them all, hard blows to inflict or ward,
 Was he, since so renowned “ in country quarters
 At Halifax ;” but now he served the Tartars.

XX.

The rest were Jacks and Gills and Wills and Bills ;
 But when I’ve added that the elder Jack Smith
 Was born in Cumberland among the hills,
 And that his father was an honest blacksmith,
 I’ve said all I know of a name that fills
 Three lines of the despatch in taking “ Schmacksmith,”
 A village of Moldavia’s waste, wherein
 He fell, immortal in a bulletin.

XXI.

I wonder (although Mars no doubt's a God I Praise) if a man's name in a bulletin
May make up for a bullet in his body?

I hope this little question is no sin,
Because, though I am but a simple noddy,

I think one Shakespeare puts the same thought in
The mouth of some one in his plays so doating,
Which many people pass for wits by quoting.

XXII.

Then there were Frenchmen, gallant, young and gay :

But I'm too great a patriot to record
Their Gallic names upon a glorious day;
I'd rather tell ten lies than say a word
Of truth ;---such truths are treason ; they betray

Their country ; and as traitors are abhorred
Who name the French in English, save to show
How Peace should make John Bull the Frenchman's foe.

XXIII.

The Russians, having built two batteries on
An Isle near Ismail, had two ends in view ;
The first was to bombard it and knock down
The public buildings, and the private too,

No matter what poor souls might be undone.
The City's shape suggested this, 'tis true ;

Formed like an amphitheatre, each dwelling
Presented a fine mark to throw a shell in.

XXIV.

The second object was to profit by
The moment of the general consternation,
To attack the Turk's flotilla, which lay nigh
Extremely tranquil, anchored at its station ;
But a third motive was as probably
To frighten them into capitulation ;
A phantasy which sometimes seizes warriors,
Unless they are game as Bull-dogs and Fox terriers.

XXV.

A habit rather blameable, which is
That of despising those we combat with,
Common in many cases, was in this
The cause of killing Tchitchitzkoff and Smith ;
One of the valourous "Smiths" whom we shall miss
Out of those nineteen who late rhymed to "pith;"
But 'tis a name so spread o'er "Sir" and "Madam,"
That one would think the FIRST who bore it "ADAM."

XXVI.

The Russian batteries were incomplete,
Because they were constructed in a hurry ;
Thus the same cause which makes a verse want feet,
And throws a cloud o'er Longman and John Murray,
When the sale of new books is not so fleet
As they who print them think is necessary,
May likewise put off for a time what story
Sometimes calls "murder," and at others "glory."

XXVII.

Whether it was their engineer's stupidity,
Their haste, or waste, I neither know nor care,
Or some contractor's personal cupidity,
Saving his soul by cheating in the ware
Of homicide, but there was no solidity
In the new batteries erected there ;
They either missed, or they were never missed,
And added greatly to the missing list.

XXVIII.

A sad miscalculation about distance
Made all their naval matters incorrect ;
Three fireships lost their amiable existence
Before they reached a spot to take effect :
The match was lit too soon, and no assistance
Could remedy this lubberly defect ;
They blew up in the middle of the river,
While, though 'twas dawn, the Turks slept fast as ever.

XXIX.

At seven they rose, however, and surveyed
The Russ flotilla getting under way ;
'Twas nine, when still advancing undismayed,
Within a cable's length their vessels lay
Off Ismail, and commenced a cannonade,
Which was returned with interest, I may say,
And by a fire of musquetry and grape
And shells and shot of every size and shape.

XXX.

For six hours bore they without intermission
The Turkish fire, and aided by their own
Land batteries, worked their guns with great precision ;
At length they found mere canonade alone
By no means would produce the town's submission,
And made a signal to retreat at one.
One bark blew up, a second near the works
Running aground was taken by the Turks.

XXXI.

The Moslein too had lost both ships and men ;
But when they saw the enemy retire,
Their Delhis manned some boats, and sailed again
And galled the Russians with a heavy fire,
And tried to make a landing on the main ;
But here the effect fell short of their desire :
Count Damas drove them back into the water
Pell mell, and with a whole gazette of slaughter.

XXXII.

“ If” (says the historian here) “ I could report
“ All that the Russians did upon this day,
“ I think that several volumes would fall short,
“ And I should still have many things to say ;”
And so he says no more—but pays his court
To some distinguished strangers in that fray ;
The Prince de Ligne, and Langeron, and Damas,
Names great as any that the roll of Fame has.

XXXIII.

This being the case, may show us what fame is
For out of these three "preux Chevaliers," how
Many of common readers give a guess
That such existed? (and they may live now
For aught we know.) Renown's all hit or miss;
There's Fortune even in fame, we must allow.
'Tis true, the Memoirs of the Prince de Ligne
Have half withdrawn from him oblivion's screen.

XXXIV.

But here are men who fought in gallant actions
As gallantly as ever heroes fought,
But buried in the heap of such transactions
Their names are rarely found, nor often sought.
Thus even good fame may suffer sad contractions,
And is extinguished sooner than she ought:
Of all our modern battles, I will bet
You can't repeat nine names from each Gazette.

XXXV.

In short, this last attack, though rich in glory,
Showed that somewhere, somehow, there was a fault,
And Admiral Ribas (known in Russian story)
Most strongly recommended an assault;
In which he was opposed by young and hoary,
Which made a long debate; but I must halt,
For if I wrote down every warrior's speech,
I doubt few readers e'er would mount the breach.

XXXVI.

There was a man, if that he was a man,
Not that his manhood could be called in question,
For had he not been Hercules, his span
Had been as short in youth as indigestion
Made his last illness, when, all worn and wan,
He died beneath a tree, as much unblest on
The soil of the green province he had wasted,
As e'er was locust on the land it blasted.

XXXVII.

This was Potemkin—a great thing in days
When homicide and harlotry made great;
If stars and titles could entail long praise,
His glory might half equal his estate.
This fellow, being six foot high, could raise
A kind of phantasy proportionate
In the then Sovereign of the Russian people,
Who measured men as you would do a steeple.

XXXVIII.

While things were in abeyance, Ribas sent
A courier to the Prince, and he succeeded
In ordering matters after his own bent;
I cannot tell the way in which he pleaded,
But shortly he had cause to be content.
In the mean time, the batteries proceeded,
And fourscore cannon on the Danube's border
Were briskly-fired and answered in due order.

XXXIX.

But on the thirteenth, when already part
 Of the troops were embarked, the siege to raise,
 A courier on the spur inspired new heart
 Into all panters for newspaper praise,
 As well as dilettanti in war's art,
 By his despatches couched in pithy praise ;
 Announcing the appointment of that lover of Battles, to the command, Field Marshal Souvaroff.

XL.

The letter of the Prince to the same Marshal
 Was worthy of a Spartan, had the cause
 Been one to which a good heart could be partial—
 Defence of freedom, country, or of laws ;
 But as it was mere lust of power to o'er-arch all
 With its proud brow, it merits slight applause,
 Save for its style, which said, all in a trice,
 “ You will take Ismail at whatever price.”

XLI.

“ Let there be light ! said God, and there was light !”
 “ Let there be blood !” says man, and there's a sea !
 The fiat of this spoiled child of the Night
 (For Day ne'er saw his merits) could decree
 More evil in an hour, than thirty bright
 Summers could renovate, though they should be
 Lovely as those which ripened Eden's fruit,
 For war cuts up not only branch, but root.
 3

XLII.

Our friends the Turks, who with loud “Allah’s” now
Began to signalize the Russ retreat,
Were damnable mistaken ; few are slow
In thinking that their enemy is beat,
(Or beaten, if you insist on grammar, though
I never think about it in a heat)
But here I say the Turks were much mistaken,
Who hating hogs, yet wished to save their bacon.

XLIII.

For, on the sixteenth, at full gallop, drew
In sight two horsemen, who were deemed Cossacques
For some time, till they came in nearer view.
They had but little baggage at their backs,
For there were but three shirts between the two ;
But on they rode upon two Ukraine hacks,
Till, in approaching, were at length descried
In this plain pair, Suwarrow and his guide.

XLIV.

“Great joy to London now !” says some great fool,
When London had a grand illumination,
Which to that bottle-conjurer, John Bull,
Is of all dreams the first hallucination ;
So that the streets of coloured lamps are full,
That Sage (said John) surrenders at discretion
His purse, his soul, his sense, and even his nonsense,
To gratify, like a huge moth, this one sense.

XLV.

'Tis strange that he should further "damn his eyes,"
 For they are damned; that once all famous oath
 Is to the devil now no further prize,
 Since John has lately lost the use of both.
 Debt he calls wealth, and taxes, Paradise;
 And Famine, with her gaunt and bony growth,
 Which stare him in the face, he won't examine,
 Or swears that Ceres hath begotten Famine.

XLVI.

But to the tale;—great joy unto the camp!
 To Russian, Tartar, English, French, Cossacque,
 O'er whom Suwarrow shone like a gas lamp,
 Presaging a most luminous attack,
 Or like a wisp, along the marsh so damp,
 Which leads beholders on a boggy walk,
 He flitted to and fro a dancing light,
 Which all who saw it followed, wrong or right.

XLVII.

But certes matters took a different face;
 There was enthusiasm and much applause,
 The fleet and camp saluted with great grace,
 And all pressaged Good Fortune to their cause.
 Within a cannon-shot length of the place
 They drew, constructed ladders, repaired flaws
 In former works, made new, prepared fascines,
 And all kinds of benevolent machines.

XLVIII.

'Tis thus the spirit of a single mind
Makes that of multitudes take one direction,
As roll the waters to the breathing wind,
Or roams the herd beneath the bull's protection ;
Or as a little dog will lead the blind,
Or a bell-wether form the flock's connection
By tinkling sounds, when they go forth to victual ;
Such is the sway of your great men o'er little.

XLIX.

The whole camp rung with joy ; you would have thought
That they were going to a marriage feast ;
(This metaphor, I think, holds good as aught,
Since there is discord after both at least.)
There was not now a luggage boy but sought
Danger and spoil with ardour much encreased ;
And why ? because a little—odd—old man,
Stript to his shirt, was come to lead the van.

L.

But so it was ; and every preparation
Was made with all alacrity : the first
Detachment of three columns took its station,
And waited but the signal's voice to burst
Upon the foe : the second's ordination
Was also in three columns, with a thirst
For Glory gaping o'er a sea of slaughter :
The third, in columns two, attacked by water.

LI.

New batteries were erected, and was held
 A general council, in which Unanimity,
 That stranger to most councils, here prevailed,
 As sometimes happens in a great extremity ;
 And every difficulty being dispelled,
 Glory began to dawn with due Sublimity,
 While Souvaroff, determined to obtain it,
 Was teaching his recruits to use the bayonet.*

LII.

It is an actual fact, that he, Commander-
 In-Chief, in proper person deigned to drill
 The awkward squad, and could afford to squander
 His time, a corporal's duty to fulfil ;
 Just as you'd break a sucking salamander
 To swallow flame, and never take it ill ;
 He showed them how to mount a ladder (which
 Was not like Jacob's) or to cross a ditch.

LIII.

Also he dressed up, for the nonce, fascines
 Like men with turbans, scymitars and dirks,
 And made them charge with bayonet these machines
 By way of lesson against actual Turks ;
 And when well practised in these mimic scenes,
 He judged them proper to assail the works ;
 At which your wise men sneered in phrases witty :
 He made no answer ; but he took the city.

* Fact : Souvaroff did this in person.

LIV.

Most things were in this posture on the eve
Of the assault, and all the camp was in
A stern repose ; which you would scarce conceive ;
Yet men, resolved to dash through thick and thin,
Are very silent when they once believe,
That all is settled :—there was little din,
For some were thinking of their home and friends,
And others of themselves and latter ends.

LV.

Suwarrow chiefly was on the alert,
Surveying, drilling, ordering, jesting, pondering,
For the man was, we safely may assert,
A thing to wonder at beyond most wondering ;
Hero, buffoon, half-demon and half-dirt,
Praying, instructing, desolating, plundering ;
Now Mars, now Momus ; and when bent to storm
A fortress, Harlequin in uniform.

LVI.

The day before the assault, while upon drill,
For this great Conqueror played the corporal,
Some Cossacques hovering like hawks round a hill,
Had met a party towards the twilight's fall,
One of whom spoke their tongue or well or ill,
'Twas much that he was understood at all ;
But whether from his voice, or speech, or manner,
They found that he had fought beneath their banner.

LVII.

Whereon immediately at his request
 They brought him and his comrades to head-quarters;
 Their dress was Moslem, but you might have guessed
 That these were merely masquerading Tartars,
 And that beneath each Turkish-fashioned vest
 Lurked Christianity, who sometimes barters
 Her inward grace for outward show, and makes
 It difficult to shun some strange mistakes.

LVIII.

Suwarrow, who was standing in his shirt
 Before a company of Calmucks, drilling,
 Exclaiming, fooling, swearing at the inert,
 And lecturing on the noble art of killing,—
 For deeming human clay but common dirt,
 This great philosopher was thus instilling
 His maxims, which to martial comprehension
 Proved death in battle equal to a pension,—

LIX.

Suwarrow, when he saw this company
 Of Cossacques and their prey, turned round and cast
 Upon them his slow brow and piercing eye :—
 “ Whence come ye?”—“ From Constantinople last,
 “ Captives just now escaped,” was the reply.
 “ What are ye?”—“ What you see us.” Briefly past
 This dialogue ; for he who answered knew
 To whom he spoke, and made his words but few.

LX.

“ Your names ?”—“ Mine’s Johnson, and my comrade’s Juan.

“ The other two are women, and the third
 “ Is neither man nor woman ” The Chief threw on
 The party a slight glance, then said : “ I have heard
 “ Your name before, the second is a new one ?
 “ To bring the other three here was absurd ;
 “ But let that pass ;—I think I have heard your name
 “ In the Nikolaiew regiment ?”—“ The same.”

LXI.

“ You served at Widin ?”—“ Yes.”—“ You led the attack ?”
 “ I did.”—“ What next ?”—“ I really hardly know.”
 “ You were the first i’ the breach ?”—“ I was not slack
 “ At least to follow those who might be so.”
 “ What followed ?”—“ A shot laid me on my back,
 “ And I became a prisoner to the foe.”
 “ You shall have vengeance, for the town surrounded
 “ Is twice as strong as that where you were wounded.

LXII.

“ Where will you serve ?”—“ Where’er you please.”—
 “ I know
 “ You like to be the hope of the forlorn,
 “ And doubtless would be foremost on the foe
 “ After the hardships you’ve already borne.
 “ And this young fellow—say what can he do ?
 “ He with the beardless chin and garments torn ?”
 “ Why, General, if he hath no greater fault
 “ In war than love, he had better lead the assault.”

LXIII.

“ He shall if that he dare.” — Here Juan bowed
 Low as the compliment deserved. Suwarrow
 Continued ; “ Your old regiment’s allowed,
 “ By special providence, to lead to-morrow,
 “ Or it may be, to-night, the assault, I have vowed
 “ To several saints, that shortly plough or harrow
 “ Shall pass o’er what was Ismail, and its tusk
 “ Be unimpeded by the proudest Mosque.

LXIV.

“ So now, my lads, for Glory !”— Here he turned
 And drilled away in the most classic Russian,
 Until each high, heroic bosom burned
 For cash and conquest, as if from a cushion
 A preacher had held forth (who nobly spurned
 All earthly goods save tithes) and bade them push on
 To slay the Pagans, who resisted battering
 The armies of the Christian Empress Catherine.

LXV.

Johnson, who knew by this long colloquy
 Himself a favourite, ventured to address
 Suwarrow, though engaged with accents high
 In his resumed amusement. “ I confess
 “ My debt in being thus allowed to die
 “ Among the foremost; but if you’d express
 “ Explicitly our several posts, my friend
 “ And self would know what duty to attend.”
<sub>1</sub>

LXVI.

“ Right! I was busy, and forgot. Why, you
“ Will join your former regiment, which should be “ Now under arms. Ho! Katskoff, take him to—
  (Here he called up a Polish orderly)
“ His post I mean, the regiment Nikolaiew;
“ The stranger stripling may remain with me;
“ He’s a fine boy. The women may he sent
“ To the other baggage, or to the sick tent.”

LXVII.

But here a sort of scene began to ensue;
The ladies,—who by no means had been bred
To be disposed of in a way so new,
Although their harem education led
Doubtless to that of doctrines the most true,
Passive obedience,—now raised up the head,
With flashing eyes and starting tears, and flung
Their arms, as hens their wings about their young,

LXVIII.

O’er the promoted couple of brave men
Who were thus honoured by the greatest Chief
That ever peopled hell with heroes slain,
Or plunged a province or a realm in grief.
Ob, foolish mortals! Always taught in vain!
Oh, glorious laurel! since for one sole leaf
Of thine imaginary deathless tree,
Of blood and tears must flow the unebbing sea.

LXIX.

Suwarrow, who had small regard for tears,
 And not much sympathy for blood, surveyed
 The women with their hair about their ears
 And natural agonies, with a slight shade
 Of feeling; for however habit sears
 Men's hearts against whole millions, when their trade
 Is butchery, sometimes a single sorrow
 Will touch even Heroes, and such was Suwarrow.

LXX.

He said,—and in the kindest Calmuck tone,—
 “ Why, Johnson, what the devil do you mean
 “ By bringing women here? They shall be shown
 “ All the attention possible, and seen
 “ In safety to the waggons, where alone
 “ In fact they can be safe. You should have been “ Aware this kind of baggage never thrives;
 “ Save wed a year, I hate recruits with wives.”

LXXI.

“ May it please your Excellency,” thus replied
 Our British friend, “ these are the wives of others,
 “ And not our own. I am too qualified
 “ By service with my military brothers,
 “ To break the rules by bringing one's own bride
 “ Into a camp: I know that nought so bothers
 “ The hearts of the heroic on a charge,
 “ As leaving a small family at large.

LXXII.

“ But these are but too Turkish ladies, who
    “ With their attendant aided our escape,
“ And afterwards accompanied us through
    “ A thousand perils in this dubious shape.
“ To me this kind of life is not so new ;
    “ To them, poor things, it is an awkward step :
“ I therefore, if you wish me to fight freely,
“ Request that they may both be used genteelly.”

LXXIII.

Meantime these two poor girls, with swimming eyes,
    Looked on as if in doubt if they could trust
Their own protectors ;—nor was their surprise
    Less than their grief (and truly not less just)
To see an old man, rather wild than wise
    In aspect, plainly clad, besmeared with dust,
Stript to his waistcoat, and that not too clean,
More feared than all the Sultans ever seen.

LXXIV.

For every thing seemed resting on his nod,
    As they could read in all eyes. Now to them
Who were accustomed, as a sort of God,
    To see the Sultan, rich in many a gem,
Like an Imperial Peacock stalk abroad,
    (That royal bird, whose tail’s a diadem)
With all the Pomp of Power, it was a doubt
How Power could condescend to do without.

LXXV.

John Johnson, seeing their extreme dismay,
 Though little versed in feelings Oriental,
 Suggested some slight comfort in his way:
 Don Juan, who was much more sentimental,
 Swore they should see him by the dawn of day,
 Or that the Russian army should repent all:
 And, strange to say, they found some consolation
 In this, for females like exaggeration.

LXXVI.

And then with tears, and sighs, and some slight kisses,
 They parted for the present, these to await,
 According to the artillery's hits or misses,
 What Sages call Chance, Providence, or Fate—
 Uncertainty is one of many blisses,
 A mortgage on Humanity's estate—
 While their beloved friends began to arm,
 To burn a town which never did them harm.

LXXVII.

Suwarow,—who but saw things in the gross,
 Being much too gross to see them in detail,
 Who calculated life as so much dross,
 And as the wind a widowed nation's wail,
 And cared as little for his army's loss
 (So that their efforts should at length prevail)
 As wife and friends did for the boils of Job,—
 What was't to him to hear two women sob?

LXXVIII.

Nothing.—The work of Glory still went on
In preparations for a cannonade
As terrible as that of Ilion,
If Homer had found mortars ready made ;
But now, instead of slaying Priam's son,
We only can but talk of escalade,
Bombs, drums, guns, bastions, batteries, bayonets, bullets,
Hard words, which stick in the soft Muses' gullets.

LXXIX.

Oh, thou eternal Homer ! who couldst charm
All ears, though long ; all ages, though so short,
By merely wielding with poetic arm,
Arms to which men will never more resort,
Unless gun-powder should be found to harm
Much less than is the hope of every Court,
Which now is leagued young Freedom to annoy ;
But they will not find Liberty a Troy :—

LXXX.

Oh, thou eternal Homer ! I have now
To paint a siege, wherein more men were slain,
With deadlier engines and a speedier blow,
Than in thy Greek gazette of that campaign ;
And yet, like all men else, I must allow,
To vie with thee would be about as vain
As for a brook to cope with Ocean's flood ;
But still we Moderns equal you in blood ;

LXXXI.

If not in poetry, at least in fact,
And fact is truth, the grand desideratum !
Of which, howe'er the Muse describes each act,
There should be ne'ertheless a slight substratum.
But now the town is going to be attacked,
Great deeds are doing — how shall I relate 'em !
Souls of immortal generals ! Phœbus watches
To colour up his rays from your despatches.

LXXXII.

Oh, ye great bulletins of Bonaparte !
Oh, ye less grand long lists of killed and wounded !
Shade of Leonidas, who fought so hearty,
When my poor Greece was once, as now, surrounded !
Oh, Cæsar's Commentaries ! now impart ye,
Shadows of glory ! (lest I be confounded)
A portion of your fading twilight hues,
So beautiful, so fleeting, to the Muse.

LXXXIII.

When I call “ fading ” martial immortality,
I mean, that every age and every year,
And almost every day, in sad reality,
Some sucking hero is compelled to rear,
Who, when we come to sum up the totality
Of deeds to human happiness most dear,
Turns out to be a butcher in great business,
Afflicting young folks with a sort of dizziness.

LXXXIV.

Medals, ranks, ribbons, lace, embroidery, scarlet,
Are things immortal to immortal man,
As purple to the Babylonian harlot :
An uniform to boys, is like a fan
To women ; there is scarce a crimson varlet
But deems himself the first in Glory's van.
But Glory's Glory ; and if you would find
What that is—ask the pig who sees the wind !

LXXXV.

At least he feels it, and some say he sees,
Because he runs before it like a pig ;
Or, if that simple sentence should displease,
Say that he scuds before it like a brig,
A schooner, or—but it is time to ease
This Canto, ere my Muse perceives fatigue,
The next shall ring a peal to shake all people,
Like a bob-major from a village steeple.

LXXXVI.

Hark ! through the silence of the cold, dull night,
The hum of armies gathering rank on rank !
Lo ! dusky masses steal in dubious sight
Along the leaguered wall and bristling bank
Of the armed river, while with straggling light
The stars peep through the vapours dim and dank,
Which curl in curious wreaths—How soon the smoke
Of Hell shall pall them in a deeper cloak !

LXXXVII.

Here pause we for the present—as even then
That awful pause, dividing life from death,
Struck for an instant on the hearts of men,
Thousands of whom were drawing their last breath !
A moment ! and all will be life again !
The march ! the charge ! the shouts of either faith !
Hurra ! and Allah ! and, one moment more,
The Death-cry drowning in the battle's roar.

CANTO VIII.

DON JUAN.

---

CANTO VIII.

---

I.

OH blood and thunder! and oh blood and wounds!—
These are but vulgar oaths, as you may deem,
Too gentle reader! and most shocking sounds:
And so they are; yet thus is Glory's dream
Unriddled, and as my true Muse expounds
At present such things, since they are her theme,
So be they her inspirers! Call them Mars,
Bellona, what you will—they mean but wars.

II.

All was prepared—the fire, the sword, the men
To wield them in their terrible array.
The army, like a lion from his den,
Marched forth with nerve and sinews bent to slay,—
A human Hydra, issuing from its fen
To breathe destruction on its winding way,
Whose heads were heroes, which cut off in vain
Immediately in others grew again.

III.

History can only take things in the gross ;
But could we know them in detail, perchance
In balancing the profit and the loss,
War's merit it by no means might enhance,
To waste so much gold for a little dross,
As hath been done, mere conquest to advance.
The drying up a single tear has more
Of honest fame, than shedding seas of gore.

IV.

And why?—because it brings self-approbation ;
Whereas the other, after all its glare,
Shouts, bridges, arches, pensions from a nation,—
Which (it may be) has not much left to spare,—
A higher title, or a loftier station,
Though they may make Corruption gape or stare,
Yet, in the end, except in Freedom's battles,
Are nothing but a child of Murder's rattles.

V.

And such they are—and such they will be found.
Not so Leonidas and Washington,
Whose every battle-field is holy ground,
Which breathes of nations saved, not worlds undone.
How sweetly on the ear such echoes sound !
While the mere victor's may appal or stun
The servile and the vain, such names will be
A watchword till the future shall be free.

VI.

The night was dark, and the thick mist allowed
Nought to be seen save the artillery's flame,
Which arched the horizon like a fiery cloud,
And in the Danube's waters shone the same—
A mirrored Hell! The volleying roar, and loud
Long booming of each peal on peal, o'ercame
The ear far more than thunder; for Heaven's flashes
Spare, or smite rarely—Man's make millions ashes!

VII.

The column ordered on the assault scarce passed
Beyond the Russian batteries a few toises,
When up the bristling Moslem rose at last,
Answering the Christian thunders with like voices;
Then one vast fire, air, earth and stream embraced,
Which rocked as 'twere beneath the mighty noises;
While the whole rampart blazed like Etna, when
The restless Titan hiccupps in his den.

VIII.

And one enormous shout of “Allah!” rose
In the same moment, loud as even the roar
Of War's most mortal engines, to their foes
Hurling defiance: city, stream, and shore,
Resounded “Allah!” and the clouds which close
With thick'ning canopy the conflict o'er,
Vibrate to the Eternal name. Hark! through
All sounds it pierceth “Allah! Allah! Hu!” (!)

IX.

The columns were in movement one and all,
 But of the portion which attacked by water,
 Thicker than leaves the lives began to fall,
 Though led by Arseniew, that great son of Slaughter,
 As brave as ever faced both bomb and ball.
 “Carnage” (so Wordsworth tells you) “is God’s daughter :” (2)
 If he speak truth, she is Christ’s sister, and
 Just now behaved as in the Holy Land.

X.

The Prince de Ligne was wounded in the knee:
 Count Chapeau-Bras too had a ball between
 His cap and head, which proves the head to be
 Aristocratic as was ever seen,
 Because it then received no injury
 More than the cap; in fact the ball could mean
 No harm unto a right legitimate head:
 “Ashes to ashes”—why not lead to lead?

XI.

Also the General Markow, Brigadier,
 Insisting on removal of the Prince
 Amidst some groaning thousands dying near,—
 All common fellows, who might writhe, and wince,
 And shriek for water into a deaf ear,—
 The General Markow, who could thus evince
 His sympathy for rank, by the same token,
 To teach him greater, had his own leg broken.

XII.

Three hundred cannon threw up their emetic,
And thirty thousand musquets flung their pills
Like hail, to make a bloody diuretic.
Mortality! thou hast thy monthly bills;
Thy Plagues, thy Famines, thy Physicians, yet tick,
Like the death-watch, within our ears the ills
Past, present, and to come; but all may yield
To the true portrait of one battle field.

XIII.

There the still varying pangs, which multiply
Until their very number makes men hard
By the infinities of agony,
Which meet the gaze, whate'er it may regard—
The groan, the roll in dust, the all-white eye
Turned back within its socket,—these reward
Your rank and file by thousands, while the rest
May win perhaps a ribbon at the breast!

XIV.

Yet I love Glory;—glory's a great thing;—
Think what it is to be in your old age
Maintained at the expense of your good king:
A moderate pension shakes full many a sage,
And heroes are but made for bards to sing,
Which is still better; thus in verse to wage
Your wars eternally, besides enjoying
Half-pay for life, make mankind worth destroying.

XV.

The troops, already disembarked, pushed on
 To take a battery on the right ; the others,
 Who landed lower down, their landing done,
 Had set to work as briskly as their brothers :
 Being grenadiers they mounted one by one,
 Cheerful as children climb the breasts of mothers,
 O'er the entrenchment and the palisade,
 Quite orderly, as if upon parade.

XVI.

And this was admirable ; for so hot
 The fire was, that were red Vesuvius loaded,
 Besides its lava, with all sorts of shot
 And shells or hells, it could not more have goaded.
 Of officers a third fell on the spot,
 A thing which victory by no means boded
 To gentlemen engaged in the assault :
 Hounds, when the huntsman tumbles, are at fault.

XVII.

But here I leave the general concern,
 To track our hero on his path of fame :
 He must his laurels separately earn ;
 For fifty thousand heroes, name by name,
 Though all deserving equally to turn
 A couplet, or an elegy to claim,
 Would form a lengthy lexicon of glory,
 And what is worse still, a much longer story :

XVIII.

And therefore we must give the greater number
To the Gazette—which doubtless fairly dealt
By the deceased, who lie in famous slumber
In ditches, fields, or wheresoe'er they felt
Their clay for the last time their souls encumber;—
Thrice happy he whose name has been well spelt
In the dispatch: I knew a man whose loss
Was printed Grove, although his name was Grose. (3)

XIX.

Juan and Johnson joined a certain corps,
And fought away with might and main, not knowing
The way which they had never trod before,
And still less guessing where they might be going;
But on they marched, dead bodies trampling o'er,
Firing, and thrusting, slashing, sweating, glowing,
But fighting thoughtlessly enough to win,
To their two selves, one whole bright bulletin.

XX.

Thus on they wallowed in the bloody mire
Of dead and dying thousands,—sometimes gaining
A yard or two of ground, which brought them nigher
To some odd angle for which all were straining;
At other times, repulsed by the close fire,
Which really poured as if all Hell were raining,
Instead of Heaven, they stumbled backwards o'er
A wounded comrade, sprawling in his gore.

XXI.

Though 'twas Don Juan's first of fields, and though
 The nightly muster and the silent march
 In the chill dark, when courage does not glow
 So much as under a triumphal arch,
 Perhaps might make him shiver, yawn, or throw
 A glance on the dull clouds (as thick as starch,
 Which stiffened Heaven) as if he wished for day;—
 Yet for all this he did not run away.

XXII.

Indeed he could not. But if he had?
 There have been and are heroes who begun
 With something not much better or as bad:
 Frederick the Great from Molwitz deigned to run,
 For the first and last time; for, like a pad,
 Or hawk, or bride, most mortals after one
 Warm bout are broken into their new tricks,
 And fight like fiends for pay or politics.

XXIII.

He was what Erin calls, in her sublime
 Old Erse or Irish, or it may be Punic;—
 (The Antiquarians who can settle Time,
 Which settles all things, Roman, Greek or Runie,
 Swear that Pat's language sprung from the same clime
 With Hannibal, and wears the Tyrian tunic
 Of Dido's alphabet; and this is rational
 As any other notion, and not national;)—(4)

XXIV.

But Juan was quite “ a broth of a boy,”
 A thing of impulse and a child of song ;
 Now swimming in the sentiment of joy,
 Or the sensation (if that phrase seem wrong)
 And afterwards, if he must needs destroy,
 In such good company as always throng
 To battles, sieges, and that kind of pleasure,
 No less delighted to employ his leisure ;

XXV.

But always without malice ; if he warr’d
 Or loved, it was with what we call “ the best
 Intentions,” which form all mankind’s trump card,
 To be produced when brought up to the test.
 The statesman, hero, harlot, lawyer---ward
 Off each attack, when people are in quest
 Of their designs, by saying they meant well ;
 Tis pity “ that such meaning should pave Hell.” (5)

XXVI.

I almost lately have begun to doubt
 Whether Hell’s pavement—if it be so paved--
 Must not have latterly been quite worn out,
 Not by the numbers Good Intent hath saved,
 But by the mass who go below without
 Those ancient good intentions, which once shaved
 And smoothed the brimstone of that street of Hell
 Which bears the greatest likeness to Pall Mall.

XXVII.

Juan, by some strange chance, which oft divides
 Warrior from warrior in their grim career,
 Like chaste wives from constant husbands' sides
 Just at the close of the first bridal year,
 By one of those odd turns of Fortune's tides,
 Was on a sudden rather puzzled here,
 When, after a good deal of heavy firing,
 He found himself alone, and friends retiring.

XXVIII.

I don't know how the thing occurred---it might
 Be that the greater part were killed or wounded,
 And that the rest had faced unto the right
 About ; a circumstance which has confounded
 Cæsar himself, who in the very sight
 Of his whole army, which so much abounded
 In courage, was obliged to snatch a shield
 And rally back his Romans to the field.

XXIX.

Juan, who had no shield to snatch, and was
 No Cæsar, but a fine young lad, who fought
 He knew not why, arriving at this pass,
 Stopped for a minute, as perhaps he ought
 For a much longer time ; then like an ass---
 (Start not, kind reader, since great Homer thought
 This simile enough for Ajax, Juan
 Perhaps may find it better than a new one) :---

XXX.

Then, like an ass, he went upon his way,
And, what was stranger, never looked behind ;
But seeing, flashing forward, like the day
Over the hills, a fire enough to blind
Those who dislike to look upon a fray,
He stumbled on, to try if he could find
A path, to add his own slight arm and forces
To corps, the greater part of which were corses.

XXXI.

Perceiving then no more the commandant
Of his own corps, nor even the corps, which had Quite disappeared---the Gods know how ! (I can't Account for every thing which may look bad
In history ; but we at least may grant
It was not marvellous that a mere lad,
In search of glory, should look on before,
Nor care a pinch of snuff about his corps) :---

XXXII.

Perceiving nor commander nor commanded,
And left at large, like a young heir, to make
His way to---where he knew not---single handed ;
As travellers follow over bog and brake
An "Ignis fatuus ;" or as sailors stranded
Unto the nearest hut themselves betake ;
So Juan, following honour and his nose,
Rushed where the thickest fire announced most foes.

XXXIII.

He knew not where he was, nor greatly cared,
 For he was dizzy, busy, and his veins
 Filled as with lightning---for his Spirit shared
 The hour, as is the case with lively brains ;
 And where the hottest fire was seen and heard,
 And the loud cannon pealed his hoarsest strains,
 He rushed, while Earth and Air were sadly shaken
 By thy humane discovery, Friar Bacon ! (6)

XXXIV.

And as he rushed along, it came to pass he
 Fell in with what was late the second column,
 Under the orders of the General Lascy,
 But now reduced, as is a bulky volume
 Into an elegant extract (much less massy)
 Of heroism, and took his place with solemn
 Air 'midst the rest, who kept their valiant faces
 And levelled weapons still against the glacis.

XXXV.

Just at this crisis up came Johnson too,
 Who had "retreated," as the phrase is when
 Men run away much rather than go through
 Destruction's jaws into the devil's den ;
 But Johnson was a clever fellow, who
 Knew when and how "to cut and come again,"
 And never ran away, except when running
 Was nothing but a valourous kind of cunning.

XXXVI.

And so, when all his corps were dead or dying,
Except Don Juan, a mere novice, whose
More virgin valour never dreamt of flying,
From ignorance of danger, which induces
Its votaries, like Innocence relying
On its own strength, with careless nerves and thews,—
Johnson retired a little, just to rally
Those who catch cold in “ shadows of Death’s valley.”

XXXVII.

And there, a little sheltered from the shot
Which rained from bastion, battery, parapet,
Rampart, wall, casement, house—for there was not
In this extensive city, sore beset
By Christian soldiery, a single spot
Which did not combat like the devil, as yet,—
He found a number of Chasseurs, all scattered
By the resistance of the chase they battered.

XXXVIII.

And these he called on ; and, what’s strange, they came Unto his call, unlike “ the Spirits from
The vasty deep,” to whom you may exclaim,
Says Hotspur, long ere they will leave their home.
Their reasons were uncertainty, or shame
At shrinking from a bullet or a bomb,
And that odd impulse, which in wars or creeds
Makes men, like cattle, follow him who leads.

XXXIX.

By Jove ! he was a noble fellow, Johnson,
 And though his name, than Ajax or Achilles
 Sounds less harmonious, underneath the sun soon
 We shall not see his likeness : he could kill his
 Man quite as quietly as blows the Monsoon
 Her steady breath (which some months the same still is) :
 Seldom he varied feature, hue, or muscle,
 And could be very busy without bustle ;

XL.

And therefore, when he ran away, he did so
 Upon reflection, knowing that behind
 He would find others who would fain be rid so
 Of idle apprehensions, which like wind
 Trouble heroic stomachs. Though their lids so
 Oft are soon closed, all heroes are not blind,
 But when they light upon immediate death,
 Retire a little, merely to take breath.

XLI.

But Johnson only ran off, to return
 With many other warriors, as we said,
 Unto that rather somewhat misty bourn,
 Which Hamlet tells us is a pass of dread.
 To Jack however this gave but slight concern :
 His soul (like Galvanism upon the dead)
 Acted upon the living as on wire,
 And led them back into the heaviest fire.

XLII.

Egad ! they found the second time what they
The first time thought quite terrible enough
To fly from, malgré all which people say
Of glory, and all that immortal stuff
Which fills a regiment (besides their pay),
That daily shilling which makes warriors tough---
They found on their return the self-same welcome,
Which made some think, and others know, a Hell come.

XLIII.

They fell as thick as harvests beneath hail,
Grass before scythes, or corn below the sickle,
Proving that trite old truth, that life's as frail
As any other boon for which men stickle.
The Turkish batteries thrashed them like a flail
Or a good boxer, into a sad pickle,
Putting the very bravest, who were knocked
Upon the head, before their guns were cocked.

XLIV.

The Turks behind the traverses and flanks
Of the next bastion, fired away like devils,
And swept, as gales sweep foam away, whole ranks :
However, Heaven knows how, the Fate who levels
Towns, nations, worlds, in her revolving pranks,
So ordered it, amidst these sulphury revels,
That Johnson and some few who had not scampered,
Reached the interior talus of the rampart.

XLV.

First one or two, then five, six, and a dozen
 Came mounting quickly up, for it was now
 All neck or nothing, as, like pitch or rosin,
 Flame was showered forth above as well's below,
 So that you scarce could say who best had chosen,
 The gentlemen that were the first to show
 Their martial faces on the parapet,
 Or those who thought it brave to wait as yet.

XLVI.

But those who scaled, found out that their advance
 Was favoured by an accident or blunder :
 The Greek or Turkish Cohorn's ignorance
 Had palisadoed in a way you'd wonder
 To see in forts of Netherlands or France---
 (Though these to our Gibraltar must knock under)---
 Right in the middle of the parapet
 Just named, these palisades were primly set :

XLVII.

So that on either side some nine or ten
 Paces were left, whereon you could contrive
 To march : a great convenience to our men,
 At least to all those who were left alive,
 Who thus could form a line and fight again ;
 And that which further aided them to strive
 Was, that they could kick down the palisades,
 Which scarcely rose much higher than grass blades. (7)

XLVIII.

Among the first,---I will not say the first,
 For such precedence upon such occasions
 Will oftentimes make deadly quarrels burst
 Out between friends as well as allied nations :
 The Briton must be bold who really durst
 Put to such trial John Bull's partial patience,
 As say that Wellington at Waterloo
 Was beaten---though the Prussians say so too ;---

XLIX.

And that if Blücher, Bulow, Gneisenau,
 And God knows who besides in "au" and "ou,"
 Had not come up in time to cast an awe
 Into the hearts of those who fought till now
 As tigers combat with an empty craw,
 The Duke of Wellington had ceased to show
 His orders, also to receive his pensions,
 Which are the heaviest that our history mentions.

L.

But never mind ;---"God save the king!" and kings !
 For if he don't, I doubt if men will longer---
 I think I hear a little bird, who sings
 The people by and bye will be the stronger :
 The veriest jade will wince whose harness wrings
 So much into the raw as quite to wrong her
 Beyond the rules of posting,—and the Mob
 At last fall sick of imitating Job :

LI.

At first it grumbles, then it swears, and then,
 Like David, flings smooth pebbles 'gainst a giant ;
 At last it takes to weapons such as men
     Snatch when despair makes human hearts less pliant.
 Then comes "the tug of war;"—'twill come again,
     I rather doubt; and I would fain say, " fie on't,"
 If I had not perceived that Revolution
     Alone can save the Earth from Hell's pollution.

LII.

But to continue ;—I say not the first,
     But of the first, our little friend Don Juan
 Walked o'er the walls of Ismail, as if nurst
     Amidst such scenes—though this was quite a new one
 To him, and I should hope to most. The thirst
     Of Glory, which so pierces through and through one,
 Pervaded him—although a generous creature,
     As warm in heart as feminine in feature.

LIII.

And here he was—who upon woman's breast,
     Even from a child, felt like a child; howe'er
 The man in all the rest might be confess,
     To him it was Elysium to be there ;
 And he could even withstand that awkward test
     Which Rousseau points out to the dubious fair,
     " Observe your lover when he leaves your arms ;"
 But Juan never left them, while they had charms,

LIV.

Unless compelled by fate, or wave, or wind,
Or near relations, who are much the same.
But here he was!—where each tie that can bind
Humanity must yield to steel and flame:
And he whose very body was all Mind,
Flung here by fate, or circumstance, which tame
The loftiest, hurried by the time and place,
Dashed on like a spurred blood-horse in a race.

LV.

So was his blood stirred while he found resistance,
As is the hunter's at the five-bar gate,
Or double post and rail, where the existence
Of Britain's youth depends upon their weight,
The lightest being the safest; at a distance
He hated cruelty, as all men hate
Blood, until heated—and even there his own
At times would curdle o'er some heavy groan.

LVI.

The General Lacey, who had been hard prest,
Seeing arrive an aid so opportune
As were some hundred youngsters all abreast,
Who came as if just dropped down from the moon,
To Juan, who was nearest him, addressed
His thanks, and hopes to take the city soon,
Not reckoning him to be a “base Bezonian,”
(As Pistol calls it) but a young Livonian.

LVII.

Juan, to whom he spoke in German, knew
As much of German as of Sanscrit, and
In answer made an inclination to
The General who held him in command ;
For seeing one with ribbons, black and blue,
Stars, medals, and a bloody sword in hand,
Addressing him in tones which seemed to thank,
He recognized an officer of rank.

LVIII.

Short speeches pass between two men who speak
No common language ; and besides, in time
Of war and taking towns, when many a shriek
Rings o'er the dialogue, and many a crime
Is perpetrated ere a word can break
Upon the ear, and sounds of horror chime
In like church bells, with sigh, howl, groan, yell, prayer,
There cannot be much conversation there.

LIX.

And therefore all we have related in
Two long octaves, passed in a little minute ;
But in the same small minute, every sin
Contrived to get itself comprised within it.
The very cannon, deafened by the din,
Grew dumb, for you might almost hear a linnet,
As soon as thunder, 'midst the general noise
Of human Nature's agonizing voice !

LX.

The town was entered. Oh Eternity!—

“ God made the country, and man made the town,”
So Cowper says—and I begin to be
Of his opinion, when I see cast down
Rome, Babylon, Tyre, Carthage, Nineveh,
All walls men know, and many never known ;
And pondering on the present and the past,
To deem the woods shall be our home at last :—

LXI.

Of all men, saving Sylla the Man-slayer,
Who passes for in life and death most lucky,
Of the great names which in our faces stare,
The General Boon, back-woodsman of Kentucky,
Was happiest amongst mortals any where ;
For killing nothing but a bear or buck, he
Enjoyed the lonely, vigorous, harmless days
Of his old age in wilds of deepest maze.

LXII.

Crime came not near him—she is not the child
Of Solitude; health shrank not from him—for
Her home is in the rarely-trodden wild,
Where if men seek her not, and death be more
Their choice than life, forgive them, as beguiled
By habit to what their own hearts abhor—
In cities caged. The present case in point I
Cite is, that Boon lived hunting up to ninety;

LXIII.

And what's still stranger, left behind a name
 For which men vainly decimate the throng,
 Not only famous, but of that good fame,
 Without which glory's but a tavern song—
 Simple, serene, the antipodes of shame,
 Which hate nor envy c'er could tinge with wrong ;
 An active hermit, even in age the child
 Of Nature, or the Man of Ross run wild.

LXIV.

'Tis true he shrank from men even of his nation,
 When they built up unto his darling trees,—
 He moved some hundred miles off, for a station
 Where there were fewer houses and more ease ;
 The inconvenience of civilization
 Is, that you neither can be pleased nor please ;
 But where he met the individual man,
 He shewed himself as kind as mortal can.

LXV.

He was not all alone : around him grew
 A Sylvan tribe of children of the chace,
 Whose young, unwakened world was ever new,
 Nor sword nor sorrow yet had left a trace
 On her unwrinkled brow, nor could you view
 A frown on Nature's or on human face ;—
 The free-born forest found and kept them free,
 And fresh as is a torrent or a tree.

LXVI.

And tall and strong and swift of foot were they,
Beyond the dwarfing city's pale abortions,
Because their thoughts had never been the prey
Of care or gain : the green woods were their portions ;
No sinking spirits told them they grew grey,
No fashion made them apes of her distortions ;
Simple they were, not savage ; and their rifles,
Though very true, were not yet used for trifles.

LXVII.

Motion was in their days, Rest in their slumbers,
And Cheerfulness the handmaid of their toil ;
Nor yet too many nor too few their numbers ;
Corruption could not make their hearts her soil ;
The Lust which stings, the Splendour which encumbers,
With the free foresters divide no spoil ;
Serene, not sullen, were the solitudes
Of this unsighing people of the woods.

LXVIII.

So much for Nature :—by way of variety,
Now back to thy great joys, Civilization !
And the sweet consequence of large society,
War, Pestilence, the despot's desolation,
The kingly scourge, the Lust of Notoriety,
The millions slain by soldiers for their ration,
The scenes like Catherine's boudoir at three-score,
With Ismail's storm to soften it the more.

LXIX.

The town was entered: first one column made
 Its sanguinary way good—then another;
 The reeking bayonet and the flashing blade
 Clashed 'gainst the scymitar, and babe and mother
 With distant shrieks were heard Heaven to upbraid;—
 Still closer sulphury clouds began to smother
 The breath of Morn and Man, where foot by foot
 The maddened Turks their city still dispute.

LXX.

Koutousow, he who afterwards beat back
 (With some assistance from the frost and snow)
 Napoleon on his bold and bloody track,
 It happened was himself beat back just now:
 He was a jolly fellow, and could crack
 His jest alike in face of friend or foe,
 Though life, and death, and victory were at stake,
 But here it seemed his jokes had ceased to take:

LXXI.

For having thrown himself into a ditch,
 Followed in haste by various grenadiers,
 Whose blood the puddle greatly did enrich,
 He climbed to where the parapet appears;
 But there his project reached its utmost pitch,
 ('Mongst other deaths the General Ribaupierre's
 Was much regretted) for the Moslem Men
 Threw them all down into the ditch again.

LXXII.

And had it not been for some stray troops, landing
They knew not where, being carried by the stream
To some spot, where they lost their understanding,
And wandered up and down as in a dream,
Until they reached, as day-break was expanding,
That which a portal to their eyes did seem,—
The great and gay Koutousow might have lain
Where three parts of his column yet remain.

LXXIII.

And scrambling round the rampart, these same troops,
After the taking of the “Cavalier,”
Just as Koutousow’s most “Forlorn” of “Hopes”
Took like cameleons some slight tinge of fear,
Opened the gate called “Kilia” to the groups
Of baffled heroes, who stood shyly near,
Sliding knee-deep in lately frozen mud,
Now thawed into a marsh of human blood.

LXXIV.

The Kozacks, or if so you please, Cossacques—
(I don’t much pique myself upon orthography,
So that I do not grossly err in facts,
Statistics, tactics, polities and geography)—
Having been used to serve on horses’ backs,
And no great dilettanti in topography
Of fortresses, but fighting where it pleases
Their chiefs to order,—were all cut to pieces.

LXXV.

Their column, though the Turkish batteries thundered
Upon them, ne'ertheless had reached the rampart,
And naturally thought they could have plundered
The city, without being further hamper'd;
But as it happens to brave men, they blundered—
The Turks at first pretended to have scampered,
Only to draw them 'twixt two bastion corners,
From whence they sallied on those Christian scorner's.

LXXVI.

Then being taken by the tail—a taking
Fatal to bishops as to soldiers—these
Cossacques were all cut off as day was breaking,
And found their lives were let at a short lease—
But perished without shivering or shaking,
Leaving as ladders their heaped carcases,
O'er which Lieutenant Colonel Yesouskoi
Marched with the brave battalion of Polouzki :—

LXXVII.

This valiant man killed all the Turks he met,
But could not eat them, being in his turn
Slain by some Mussulmans, who would not yet,
Without resistance, see their city burn.
The walls were won, but 'twas an even bet
Which of the armies would have cause to mourn :
'Twas blow for blow, disputing inch by inch,
For one would not retreat, nor t'other flinch.

LXXVIII.

Another column also suffered much:—

And here we may remark with the Historian,
You should but give few cartridges to such
Troops as are meant to march with greatest glory on:
When matters must be carried by the touch
Of the bright bayonet, and they all should hurry on,
They sometimes, with a hankering for existence,
Keep merely firing at a foolish distance.

LXXIX.

A junction of the General Meknop's men
(Without the General, who had fallen some time
Before, being badly seconded just then)

Was made at length with those who dared to climb
The death-disgorging rampart once again;
And though the Turk's resistance was sublime,
They took the bastion, which the Seraskier
Defended at a price extremely dear.

LXXX.

Juan and Johnson, and some volunteers
Among the foremost, offered him good quarter,
A word which little suits with Seraskiers,
Or at least suited not this valiant Tartar.
He died, deserving well his country's tears,
A savage sort of military martyr.
An English naval officer, who wished
To make him prisoner, was also dishe'd.

LXXXI.

For all the answer to his proposition
 Was from a pistol-shot that laid him dead ;
 On which the rest, without more intermission,
 Began to lay about with steel and lead—
 The pious metals most in requisition
 On such occasions : not a single head
 Was spared,—three thousand Moslems perished here,
 And sixteen bayonets pierced the Seraskier.

LXXXII.

The city's taken—only part by part—
 And Death is drunk with gore : there's not a street
 Where fights not to the last some desperate heart
 For those for whom it soon shall cease to beat.
 Here War forgot his own destructive Art
 In more destroying Nature ; and the heat
 Of Carnage, like the Nile's sun-sodden Slime,
 Engendered monstrous shapes of every Crime.

LXXXIII.

A Russian officer, in martial tread
 Over a heap of bodies, felt his heel
 Seized fast, as if 'twere by the serpent's head
 Whose fangs Eve taught her human seed to feel :
 In vain he kicked, and swore, and writhed, and bled,
 And howled for help as wolves do for a meal—
 The teeth still kept their gratifying hold,
 As do the subtle snakes described of old.

LXXXIV.

A dying Moslem, who had felt the foot
Of a foe o'er him, snatched at it, and bit
The very tendon, which is most acute
(That which some ancient Muse or modern Wit
Named after thee, Achilles) and quite through 't
He made the teeth meet, nor relinquish'd it
Even with his life—for (but they lie) 'tis said
To the live leg still clung the severed head.

LXXXV.

However this may be, 'tis pretty sure
The Russian officer for life was lamed,
For the Turk's teeth stuck faster than a skewer,
And left him 'midst the invalid and maimed :
The regimental surgeon could not cure
His patient, and perhaps was to be blamed
More than the head of the inveterate foe,
Which was cut off, and scarce even then let go.

LXXXVI.

But then the fact's a fact—and 'tis the part
Of a true poet to escape from fiction
Whene'er he can ; for there is little art
In leaving verse more free from the restriction
Of truth than prose, unless to suit the mart
For what is sometimes called poetic diction,
And that outrageous appetite for lies
Which Satan angles with, for souls like flies.

LXXXVII.

The city's taken, but not rendered!—No!
There's not a Moslem that hath yielded sword:
The blood may gush out, as the Danube's flow
Rolls by the city wall; but deed nor word
Acknowledge aught of dread of death or foe:
In vain the yell of victory is roared
By the advancing Muscovite—the groan
Of the last foe is echoed by his own.

LXXXVIII.

The bayonet pierces and the sabre cleaves,
And human lives are lavished every where,
As the year closing whirls the scarlet leaves
When the stript forest bows to the bleak air,
And groans; and thus the peopled city grieves,
Shorn of its best and loveliest, and left bare;
But still it falls with vast and awful splinters,
As oaks blown down with all their thousand winters.

LXXXIX.

It is an awful topic—but 'tis not
My cue for any time to be terrific:
For chequered as is seen our human lot
With good, and bad, and worse, alike prolific
Of melancholy merriment, to quote
Too much of one sort would be soporific;—
Without, or with, offence to friends or foes,
I sketch your world exactly as it goes.

XC.

And one good action in the midst of crimes
 Is “ quite refreshing,” in the affected phrase
 Of these ambrosial, Pharisaic times,
 With all their pretty milk-and-water ways,
 And may serve therefore to bedew these rhymes,
 A little scorched at present with the blaze
 Of conquest and its consequences, which
 Make Epic poesy so rare and rich.

XCI.

Upon a taken bastion where there lay
 Thousands of slaughtered men, a yet warm group
 Of murdered women, who had found their way
 To this vain refuge, made the good heart droop
 And shudder ;—while, as beautiful as May,
 A female child of ten years tried to stoop
 And hide her little palpitating breast
 Amidst the bodies lulled in bloody rest.

XCII.

Two villainous Cossacques pursued the child
 With flashing eyes and weapons : matched with them
 The rudest brute that roams Siberia’s wild
 Has feelings pure and polished as a gem,—
 The bear is civilized, the wolf is mild :
 And whom for this at last must we condemn ?
 Their natures ? or their sovereigns, who employ
 All arts to teach their subjects to destroy ?

XCIII.

Their sabres glittered o'er her little head,
Whence her fair hair rose twining with affright,
Her hidden face was plunged amidst the dead :
When Juan caught a glimpse of this sad sight,
I shall not say exactly what he said,
Because it might not solace “ears polite;”
But what he did, was to lay on their backs,
The readiest way of reasoning with Cossacques.

XCIV.

One's hip he slashed, and split the other's shoulder,
And drove them with their brutal yells to seek
If there might be chirurgeons who could solder
The wounds they richly merited, and shriek
Their baffled rage and pain; while waxing colder
As he turned o'er each pale and gory cheek,
Don Juan raised his little captive from
The heap a moment more had made her tomb.

XCV.

And she was chill as they, and on her face
A slender streak of blood announced how near
Her fate had been to that of all her race;
For the same blow which laid her Mother here,
Had scarred her brow, and left its crimson trace
As the last link with all she had held dear;
But else unhurt, she opened her large eyes,
And gazed on Juan with a wild surprise.

XCVI.

Just at this instant, while their eyes were fixed
Upon each other, with dilated glance,
In Juan's look, pain, pleasure, hope, fear, mixed
With joy to save, and dread of some mischance
Unto his protégée; while her's transfixed
With infant terrors, glared as from a trance,
A pure transparent, pale, yet radiant face,
Like to a lighted alabaster vase;—

XCVII.

Up came John Johnson: (I will not say "Jack,"
For that were vulgar, cold, and common place
On great occasions, such as an attack
On cities, as hath been the present case:)
Up Johnson came, with hundreds at his back,
Exclaiming:—"Juan! Juan! On, boy! brace
"Your arm, and I'll bet Moscow to a dollar
"That you and I will win St. George's collar." (8)

XCVIII.

"The Seraskier is knocked upon the head,
"But the stone bastion still remains, wherein
"The old Pacha sits among some hundreds dead,
"Smoking his pipe quite calmly 'midst the din
"Of our artillery and his own: 'tis said
"Our killed, already piled up to the chin,
"Lie round the battery; but still it batters,
"And grape in volleys, like a vineyard, scatters.

XCIX.

“ Then up with me !”—But Juan answered, “ Look “ Upon this child—I saved her—must not leave
     “ Her life to chance ; but point me out some nook
         “ Of safety, where she less may shrink and grieve,
     “ And I am with you.”—Whereon Johnson took
         A glance around—and shrugged—and twitched his sleeve
 And black silk neck-cloth—and replied, “ You’re right ;
 “ Poor thing ! what’s to be done ? I’m puzzled quite.”

C.

Said Juan—“ Whatsoever is to be “ Done, I’ll not quit her till she seems secure
     “ Of present life a good deal more than we.”—
     Quoth Johnson—“ Neither will I quite ensure ;
     “ But at the least you may die gloriously.”—
     Juan replied—“ At least I will endure
     “ Whate’er is to be borne---but not resign
     “ This child, who is parentless and therefore mine.”

CI.

Johnson said---“ Juan, we’ve no time to lose ;
     “ The child’s a pretty child---a very pretty---
     “ I never saw such eyes---but hark ! now choose
         “ Between your fame and feelings, pride and pity;---
     “ Hark ! how the roar increases !---no excuse
         “ Will serve when there is plunder in a city ;---
     “ I should be loth to march without you, but,
     “ By God ! we’ll be too late for the first cut.”

CII.

But Juan was immoveable ; until
Johnson, who really loved him in his way,
Picked out amongst his followers with some skill
Such as he thought the least given up to prey ;
And swearing if the infant came to ill
That they should all be shot on the next day :
But if she were delivered safe and sound,
They should at least have fifty roubles round :

CIII.

And all allowances besides of plunder
In fair proportion with their comrades ;—then
Juan consented to march on through thunder,
Which thinned at every step their ranks of men :
And yet the rest rushed eagerly---no wonder,
For they were heated by the hope of gain,
A thing which happens every where each day—
No Hero trusteth wholly to half-pay.

CIV.

And such is victory, and such is man !
At least nine-tenths of what we call so ;—God
May have another name for half we scan
As human beings, or his ways are odd,
But to our subject : a brave Tartar Khan,—
Or “ Sultan,” as the author (to whose nod
In prose I bend my humble verse) doth call
This chieftain—somehow would not yield at all :

CV.

But flanked by five brave sons (such is Polygamy,
That she spawns warriors by the score, where none
Are prosecuted for that false crime bigamy)
He never would believe the city won
While courage clung but to a single twig.—Am I
Describing Priam's, Peleus', or Jove's son?
Neither, but a good, plain, old temperate man,
Who fought with his five children in the van.

CVI.

To take him was the point. The truly brave,
When they behold the brave oppressed with odds,
Are touched with a desire to shield and save;—
A mixture of wild beasts and demi-gods
Are they now—furious as the sweeping wave,
Now moved with pity: even as sometimes nods
The rugged tree unto the summer wind,
Compassion breathes along the savage mind.

CVII.

But he would not be taken, and replied
To all the propositions of surrender
By mowing Christians down on every side,
As obstinate as Swedish Charles at Bender.
His five brave boys no less the foe defied;
Whereon the Russian pathos grew less tender,
As being a virtue, like terrestrial patience,
Apt to wear out on trifling provocations.

CVIII.

And spite of Johnson and of Juan, who
Expended all their Eastern phraseology
In begging him for God's sake, just to show
So much less fight as might form an apology
For them in saving such a desperate foe—
He hewed away, like doctors of theology
When they dispute with sceptics ; and with curses
Struck at his friends, as babies beat their nurses.

CIX.

Nay, he had wounded, though but slightly, both
Juan and Johnson ; whereupon they fell,
The first with sighs, the second with an oath,
Upon his angry Sultanship, pell-mell,
And all around were grown exceeding wroth
At such a pertinacious Infidel,
And poured upon him and his sons like rain,
Which they resisted like a sandy plain

CX.

That drinks and still is dry. At last they perished—
His second son was levelled by a shot ;
His third was sabred : and the fourth, most cherished
Of all the five, on bayonets met his lot ;
The fifth, who, by a Christian mother nourished,
Had been neglected, ill-used, and what not,
Because deformed, yet died all game and bottom,
To save a sire who blushed that he begot him.

CXI.

The eldest was a true and tameless Tartar,
 As great a scorner of the Nazarene
 As ever Mahomet picked out for a martyr,
 Who only saw the black-eyed girls in green,
 Who make the beds of those who won't take quarter
 On Earth, in Paradise ; and when once seen
 Those Houris, like all other pretty creatures,
 Do just whate'er they please, by dint of features.

CXII.

And what they pleased to do with the young Khan
 In heaven I know not, nor pretend to guess ;
 But doubtless they prefer a fine young man
 To tough old heroes, and can do no less ;
 And that's the cause no doubt why, if we scan
 A field of battle's ghastly wilderness,
 For one rough, weather-beaten, veteran body,
 You'll find ten thousand handsome coxcombs bloody.

CXIII.

Your Houris also have a natural pleasure
 In lopping off your lately married men,
 Before the bridal Hours have danced their measure,
 And the sad, second moon grows dim again,
 Or dull Repentance hath had dreary leisure
 To wish him back a bachelor now and then.
 And thus your Houri (it may be) disputes
 Of these brief blossoms the immediate fruits.

CXIV.

Thus the young Khan, with Houris in his sight,
Thought not upon the charms of four young brides,
But bravely rushed on his first heavenly night,
In short, howe'er our better Faith derides,
These black-eyed virgins make the Moslems fight,
As though there were one Heaven and none besides—
Whereas, if all be true we hear of Heaven
And Hell, there must at least be six or seven.

CXV.

So fully flashed the phantom on his eyes,
That when the very lance was in his heart,
He shouted “ Allah !” and saw Paradise
With all its veil of mystery drawn apart,
And bright Eternity without disguise
On his soul, like a ceaseless sunrise, dart ;---
With Prophets, Houris, Angels, Saints, descreed
In one voluptuous blaze,---and then he died :

CXVI.

But, with a heavenly rapture on his face,
The good old Khan, who long had ceased to see
Houris, or aught except his florid race
Who grew like cedars round him gloriously--
When he beheld his latest hero grace
The earth, which he became like a felled tree,
Paused for a moment from the fight, and cast
A glance on that slain son, his first and last.

CXVII.

The soldiers, who beheld him drop his point,
 Stopt as if once more willing to concede
 Quarter, in case he bade them not “ aroint !”
 As he before had done. He did not heed
 Their pause nor signs : his heart was out of joint,
 And shook (till now unshaken) like a reed,
 As he looked down upon his children gone,
 And felt—though done with life—he was alone.

CXVIII.

But 'twas a transient tremor ;--with a spring
 Upon the Russian steel his breast he flung,
 As carelessly as hurls the moth her wing
 Against the light wherein she dies : he clung
 Closer, that all the deadlier they might wring,
 Unto the bayonets which had pierced his young ;
 And throwing back a dim look on his sons,
 In one wide wound poured forth his soul at once.

CXIX.

'Tis strange enough—the rough, tough soldiers, who
 Spared neither sex nor age in their career
 Of carnage, when this old man was pierced through,
 And lay before them with his children near,
 Touched by the heroism of him they slew,
 Were melted for a moment ; though no tear
 Flowed from their blood-shot eyes, all red with strife,
 They honoured such determined scorn of life.

CXX.

But the stone bastion still kept up its fire,
Where the chief Pacha calmly held his post :
Some twenty times he made the Russ retire,
And baffled the assaults of all their host ;
At length he condescended to enquire
If yet the city's rest were won or lost ;
And being told the latter, sent a Bey
To answer Ribas' summons to give way.

CXXI.

In the mean time, cross-legged, with great sang froid,
Among the scorching ruins he sat smoking
Tobacco on a little carpet ;—Troy
Saw nothing like the scene around ;—yet looking
With martial stoicism, nought seemed to annoy
His stern philosophy ; but gently stroking
His beard, he puffed his pipe's ambrosial gales,
As if he had three lives as well as tails.

CXXII.

The town was taken—whether he might yield
Himself or bastion, little mattered now ;
His stubborn valour was no future shield.
Ismail's no more ! The crescent's silver bow
Sunk, and the crimson cross glared o'er the field,
But red with no redeeming gore : the glow
Of burning streets, like moonlight on the water,
Was imaged back in blood, the sea of slaughter.

CXXIII.

All that the mind would shrink from of excesses ;
 All that the body perpetrates of bad ;
 All that we read, hear, dream, of man's distresses ;
 All that the Devil would do if run stark mad ;
 All that defies the worst which pen expresses ;
 All by which Hell is peopled, or as sad
 As Hell—mere mortals who their power abuse,—
 Was here (as heretofore and since) let loose.

CXXIV.

If here and there some transient trait of pity
 Was shown, and some more noble heart broke through
 Its bloody bond, and saved perhaps some pretty
 Child, or an aged, helpless man or two—
 What's this in one annihilated city,
 Where thousand loves, and ties, and duties grow?
 Cockneys of London ! Muscadins of Paris !
 Just ponder what a pious pastime war is :

CXXV.

Think how the joys of reading a Gazette
 Are purchased by all agonies and crimes :
 Or if these do not move you, don't forget
 Such doom may be your own in after times.
 Meantime the taxes, Castlereagh, and debt,
 Are hints as good as sermons, or as rhymes.
 Read your own hearts and Ireland's present story,
 Then feed her famine fat with Wellesley's glory.

CXXVI.

But still there is unto a patriot nation,
Which loves so well its country and its King,
A subject of sublimest exultation—
Bear it, ye Muses, on your brightest wing !
Howe'er the mighty locust, Desolation,
Strip your green fields, and to your harvests cling,
Gaunt Famine never shall approach the throne—
Though Ireland starve, great George weighs twenty stone

CXXVII.

But let me put an end unto my theme :
There was an end of Ismail—hapless town !
Far flashed her burning towers o'er Danube's stream,
And redly ran his blushing waters down.
The horrid war-whoop and the shriller scream
Rose still ; but fainter were the thunders grown :
Of forty thousand who had manned the wall,
Some hundreds breathed—the rest were silent all !

CXXVIII.

In one thing ne'ertheless 'tis fit to praise
The Russian army upon this occasion,
A virtue much in fashion now-a days,
And therefore worthy of commemoration :
The topic's tender, so shall be my phrase—
Perhaps the season's chill, and their long station
In winter's depth, or want of rest and victual,
Had made them chaste ;—they ravish'd very little.

CXXIX.

Much did they slay, more plunder, and no less
 Might here and there occur some violation
 In the other line ;—but not to such excess
 As when the French, that dissipated nation,
 Take towns by storm : no causes can I guess,
 Except cold weather and commiseration ;
 But all the ladies, save some twenty score,
 Were almost as much virgins as before.

CXXX.

Some odd mistakes too happened in the dark,
 Which showed a want of lanthorns, or of taste—
 Indeed the smoke was such they scarce could mark
 Their friends from foes,—besides such things from haste
 Occur, though rarely ,when there is a spark
 Of light to save the venerably chaste :—
 But six old damsels, each of seventy years,
 Were all deflowered by different Grenadiers.

CXXXI.

But on the whole their continence was great ;
 So that some disappointment there ensued
 To those who had felt the inconvenient state
 Of “ single blessedness,” and thought it good
 (Since it was not their fault, but only fate,
 To bear these crosses) for each waning prude
 To make a Roman sort of Sabine wedding,
 Without the expence and the suspense of bedding.

CXXXII.

Some voices of the buxom middle-aged
Were also heard to wonder in the din
(Widows of forty were these birds long caged)
“ Wherefore the ravishing did not begin !”
But while the thirst for gore and plunder raged,
There was small leisure for superfluous sin ;
But whether they escaped or no, lies hid
In darkness—I can only hope they did.

CXXXIII.

Suwarro now was conqueror—a match
For Timour or for Zinghis in his trade.
While mosques and streets, beneath his eyes, like thatch
Blazed, and the cannon’s roar was scarce allayed,
With bloody hands he wrote his first dispatch ;
And here exactly follows what he said :—
“ Glory to God and to the Empress !” (Powers
Eternal! such names mingled!) “ Ismail’s ours.” (9)

CXXXIV.

Methinks these are the most tremendous words,
Since “ Menè, Menè, Tekel,” and “ Upharsin,”
Which hands or pens have ever traced of swords.
Heaven help me ! I’m but little of a parson :
What Daniel read was short-hand of the Lord’s,
Severe, sublime ; the Prophet wrote no farce on
The fate of Nations ;—but this Russ so witty
Could rhyme, like Nero, o’er a burning city.

CXXXV.

He wrote this Polar melody, and set it,
 Duly accompanied by shrieks and groans,
 Which few will sing, I trust, but none forget it—
 For I will teach, if possible, the stones
 To rise against Earth's tyrants. Never let it
 Be said that we still truckle unto thrones;---
 But ye —our children's children! think how we
 Showed what things were before the world was free!

CXXXVI.

That hour is not for us, but 'tis for you :
 And as, in the great joy of your millenium,
 You hardly will believe such things were true
 As now occur, I thought that I would pen you 'em ;
 But may their very memory perish too !---
 Yet if perchance remembered, still disdain you 'em
 More than you scorn the savages of yore,
 Who painted their bare limbs, but not with gore.

CXXXVII.

And when you hear historians talk of thrones,
 And those that sate upon them, let it be
 As we now gaze upon the Mammoth's bones,
 And wonder what old world such things could see,
 Or hieroglyphics on Egyptian stones,
 The pleasant riddles of Futurity---
 Guessing at what shall happily be hid,
 As the real purpose of a Pyramid.

CXXXVIII.

Reader! I have kept my word,—at least so far
As the first Canto promised. You have now
Had sketches of love, tempest, travel, war—
All very accurate, you must allow,
And Epic, if plain truth should prove no bar;
For I have drawn much less with a long bow
Than my forerunners. Carelessly I sing,
But Phœbus lends me now and then a string,

CXXXIX.

With which I still can harp, and carp, and fiddle,
What further hath befallen or may befall
The Hero of this grand poetic riddle,
I by and bye may tell you, if at all:
But now I choose to break off in the middle,
Worn out with battering Ismail's stubborn wall,
While Juan is sent off with the dispatch,
For which all Pittsburgh is on the watch.

CXL.

This special honour was conferred, because
He had behaved with courage and humanity;
Which last, men like, when they have time to pause
From their ferocities produced by vanity.
His little captive gained him some applause
For saving her amidst the wild insanity
Of Carnage,—and I think he was more glad in her
Safety, than his new order of St. Vladimir.

CXLI.

The Moslem orphan went with her protector,
For she was homeless, houseless, helpless : all
Her friends, like the sad family of Hector,
Had perished in the field or by the wall :
Her very place of birth was but a spectre
Of what it had been ; there the Muezzin's call
To prayer was heard no more !---And Juan wept,
And made a vow to shield her, which he kept.

NOTES TO CANTO VIII.

Note 1, page 37, stanza viii.

“ Allah ! Allah ! Hu !”

Allah Hu ! is properly the war cry of the Mussulmans, and they dwell long on the last syllable, which gives it a very wild and peculiar effect.

Note 2, page 38, stanza ix.

“ Carnage” (so Wordsworth tells you) is God’s daughter.”

“ But thy* most dreaded instrument

“ In working out a pure intent,

“ Is man arrayed for mutual slaughter ;

“ Yea, Carnage is thy daughter !”

WORDSWORTH’S Thanksgiving Ode.

Note 3, page 41, stanza xviii.

Was printed Grove, although his name was Grose.

A fact : see the Waterloo Gazettes. I recollect remarking at the time to a friend :—“ There is fame ! a man is killed, [his name is Grose, and they print it Grove.]” I was at College with the deceased, who was a very amiable and clever man, and his society in great request for his wit, gaiety, and “ chansons à boire.”

* To wit, the Deity’s : this is perhaps as pretty a pedigree for murder as ever was found out by Garter King at Arms,—What would have been said, had any free-spoken people discovered such a lineage ?

Note 4, page 42, stanza xxiii.

*And this is rational
As any other notion, and not national.*

See Major Vallency and Sir Lawrence Parsons.

Note 5, page 43, stanza xxv.

'Tis pity "that such meanings should pave Hell."

The Portuguese proverb says, that "Hell is paved with good intentions."

Note 6, page 46, stanza xxxiii.

Thy humane a scovery, Friar Bacon!

Gunpowder is said to have been discovered by this Friar.

Note 7, page 50, stanza xlvii.

Palisades,

Which scarcely rose much higher than grass blades.

They were but two feet high above the level.

Note 8, page 67, stanza xcvii.

St. George's collar.

The Russian military order.

Note 9, page 79, stanza cxxxiii.

Glory to God and to the Empress!" (Powers

Eternal! such names mingled!) "Ismail's our's!"

In the original Russian---

"Slava bogu! slava vam!

"Krepost Vzala, y iā tam."---

A kind of couplet; for he was a poet.

CANTO IX.

---

I.

Oh, Wellington ! (or “ Vilainton,”—for Fame
Sounds the heroic syllables both ways ;
France could not even conquer your great name,
But punned it down to this facetious phrase)—
Beating or beaten she will laugh the same)—
You have obtained great pensions and much praise ;
Glory like yours should any dare gainsay,
Humanity would rise, and thunder “ Nay !” (1)

II.

I don’t think that you used K—n—rd quite well
In Marinêt’s affair—in fact ’twas shabby,
And like some other things won’t do to tell
Upon your tomb in Westminster’s old abbey.
Upon the rest ’tis not worth while to dwell,
Such tales being for the tea hours of some tabby ;
But though your years as man tend fast to zero,
In fact your Grace is still but a young Hero.

III.

Though Britain owes (and pays you too) so much,
Yet Europe doubtless owes you greatly more :
You have repaired Legitimacy's crutch—
A prop not quite so certain as before :
The Spanish, and the French, as well as Dutch,
Have seen, and felt, how strongly you restore ;
And Waterloo has made the world your debtor—
(I wish your bards would sing it rather better.)

IV.

You are “the best of cut-throats :”—do not start ;
The phrase is Shakspeare’s and not misapplied :—
War’s a brain-spattering, windpipe-slitting art,
Unless her cause by Right be sanctified.
If you have acted once a generous part,
The World, not the World’s masters, will decide,
And I shall be delighted to learn who,
Save you and yours, have gained by Waterloo ?

V.

I am no flatterer—you’ve supped full of flattery :
They say you like it too—’tis no great wonder :
He whose whole life has been assault and battery,
At last may get a little tired of thunder ;
And swallowing eulogy much more than satire, he
May like being praised for every lucky blunder ;
Called “Saviour of the Nations”—not yet saved,
And Europe’s Liberator—still enslaved.

VI.

I've done. Now go and dine from off the plate
Presented by the Prince of the Brazils,
And send the sentinel before your gate (2)
A slice or two from your luxurious meals :
He fought, but has not fed so well of late.

Some hunger too they say the people feels :—
There is no doubt that you deserve your ration,
But pray give back a little to the nation.

VII.

I don't mean to reflect—a man so great as
You, my Lord Duke ! is far above reflection.
The high Roman fashion too of Cincinnatus,
With modern history has but small connection ,
Though as an Irishman you love potatoes,
You need not take them under your direction
And half a Million for your Sabine farm
Is rather dear !--I'm sure I mean no harm.

VIII.

Great men have always scorned great recompenses :
Epaminondas saved his Thebes, and died,
Not leaving even his funeral expenses :
George Washington had thanks and nought beside,
Except the all-cloudless Glory (which few men's is)
To free his country : Pitt too had his pride,
And as a high-soul'd Minister of State, is Renowned for ruining Great Britain gratis.

IX.

Never had mortal Man such opportunity,
 Except Napoleon, or abused it more :
 You might have freed fall'n Europe from the Unity
 Of Tyrants, and been blest from shore to shore ;
 And now—what is your fame ? Shall the Muse tune it ye ?
Now—that the rabble's first vain shouts are o'er ?
 Go, hear it in your famished Country's cries !
 Behold the World ! and curse your victories !

X.

As these new Cantos touch on warlike feats,
 To you the unflattering Muse deigns to inscribe
 Truths that you will not read in the Gazettes,
 But which, 'tis time to teach the hireling tribe
 Who fatten on their Country's gore and debts,
Must be recited, and—without a bribe.
 You did great things ; but not being great in mind,
 Have left undone the greatest—and mankind.

XI.

Death laughs---Go ponder o'er the skeleton
 With which men image out the unknown thing
 That hides the past world, like to a set sun
 Which still elsewhere may rouse a brighter spring---
 Death laughs at all you weep for ; - look upon
 This hourly dread of all, whose threatened sting
 Turns life to terror, even though in its sheath !
 Mark ! how its lipless mouth grins ! without breath !

XII.

Mark ! how it laughs and scorns at all you are !

And yet was what you are : from ear to ear
It laughs not—there is now no fleshy bar
So called ; the Antic long hath ceased to hear,
But still he smiles ; and whether near or far

He strips from man that mantle (far more dear
Than even the tailor's) his incarnate skin,
White, black, or copper--the dead bones will grin.

XIII.

And thus Death laughs,---it is sad merriment,
But still it is so ; and with such example
Why should not Life be equally content,
With his Superior, in a smile to trample
Upon the nothings which are daily spent
Like bubbles on an ocean much less ample
Than the eternal deluge, which devours
Suns as rays---worlds like atoms---years like hours ?

XIV.

“ To be or not to be ! that is the question,”
Says Shakspeare, who just now is much in fashion.
I am neither Alexander nor Hephæstion,
Nor ever had for abstract fame much passion ;
But would much rather have a sound digestion,
Than Buonaparte's cancer :---could I dash on
Through fifty victories to shame or fame,
Without a stomach---what were a good name ?

XV.

" Oh dura ilia messorum!"---" Oh
Ye rigid guts of reapers!"---I translate
For the great benefit of those who know
What Indigestion is---that inward fate
Which makes all Styx through one small liver flow.
A peasant's sweat is worth his Lord's estate:
Let this one toil for bread---that rack for rent,
He who sleeps best, may be the most content.

XVI.

" To be or not to be?"---Ere I decide,
I should be glad to know that which is being?
'Tis true we speculate both far and wide,
And deem, because we see, we are all seeing:
For my part, I'll enlist on neither side,
Until I see both sides for once agreeing.
For me, I sometimes think that Life is Death,
Rather than Life a mere affair of breath.

XVII.

" Que sçais-je?" was the motto of Montaigne,
As also of the first Academicians;
That all is dubious which Man may attain,
Was one of their most favourite positions.
There's no such thing as certainty, that's plain
As any of Mortality's Conditions:
So little do we know what we're about in
This world, I doubt if doubt itself be doubting.

XVIII.

It is a pleasant voyage perhaps to float
Like Pyrrho, on a sea of speculation
But what if carrying sail capsize the boat?
Your wise men don't know much of navigation ;
And swimming long in the abyss of thought
Is apt to tire : a calm and shallow station
Well nigh the shore, where one stoops down and gathers
Some pretty shell, is best for moderate bathers.

XIX.

“ But Heaven,” as Cassio says, “ is above all,---
“ No more of this then,---let us pray !” We have
Souls to save, since Eve’s slip and Adam’s fall,
Which tumbled all mankind into the grave,
Besides fish, beasts, and birds. “ The Sparrow’s fall
“ Is special providence,” though how it gave
Offence, we know not ; probably it perched
Upon the tree which Eve so fondly searched.

XX.

Oh, ye immortal Gods ! what is Theogony ?
Oh, thou too mortal Man ! what is Philanthropy ?
Oh, World, which was and is ! what is Cosmogony ?
Some people have accused me of Misanthropy ;
And yet I know no more than the mahogany
That forms this desk, of what they mean ;—Lykanthrop
I comprehend, for without transformation
Men become wolves on any slight occasion.

XXI.

But I, the mildest, meekest of mankind,
 Like Moses, or Melanethon, who have ne'er
 Done any thing exceedingly unkind,—
 And (though I could not now and then forbear
 Following the bent of body or of mind)
 Have always had a tendency to spare,—
 Why do they call me misanthrope? Because
They hate me, not I them:---And here we'll pause.

XXII.

'Tis time we should proceed with our good poem,
 For I maintain that it is really good,
 Not only in the body, but the proem,
 However little both are understood
 Just now,—but by and bye the Truth will show 'em
 Herself in her sublimest attitude:
 And till she doth, I fain must be content
 To share her Beauty and her Banishment.

XXIII.

Our hero (and, I trust, kind reader! yours)---
 Was left upon his way to the chief City
 Of the immortal Peter's polished boors,
 Who still have shown themselves more brave than witty.
 I know its mighty Empire now allures
 Much flattery --even Voltaire's, and that's a pity.
 For me, I deem an absolute Autocrat
 Not a Barbarian, but much worse than that.

XXIV.

And I will war, at least in words (and---should
My chance so happen---deeds) with all who war
With Thought;---and of thought's foes by far most rude,
Tyrants and Sycophants have been and are.
I know not who may conquer: if I could
Have such a prescience, it should be no bar
To this my plain, sworn, downright detestation
Of every despotism in every nation.

XXV.

It is not that I adulate the people:
Without me, there are Demagogues enough,
And infidels, to pull down every Steeple
And set up in their stead some proper stuff.
Whether they may sow Scepticism to reap Hell,
As is the Christian dogma rather rough,
I do not know;---I wish men to be free
As much from mobs as kings---from you as me.

XXVI.

The consequence is, being of no party,
I shall offend all parties:—never mind!
My words, at least, are more sincere and hearty
Than if I sought to sail before the wind.
He who has nought to gain can have small art: he
Who neither wishes to be bound nor bind,
May still expatriate freely, as will I,
Nor give my voice to Slavery's Jackall cry.

XXVII.

That's an appropriate simile, that Jackall ;---
 I've heard them in the Ephesian ruins howl
 By night, as do that mercenary pack all,
 Power's base purveyors, who for pickings prowl,
 And scent the prey their masters would attack all,
 However, the poor Jackalls are less foul
 (As being the brave Lions' keen providers)
 Than human Insects, catering for Spiders.

XXVIII.

Raise but an arm ! 'twill brush their web away,
 And without that, their poison and their claws
 Are useless. Mind, good People ! what I say—
 (Or rather Peoples) go on without pause!
 The web of these Tarantulas each day
 Increases, till you shall make common cause :
 None, save the Spanish Fly and Attic Bee,
 As yet are strongly stinging to be free.

XXIX.

Don Juan, who had shone in the late slaughter,
 Was left upon his way with the dispatch,
 Where Blood was talked of as we would of Water ;
 And carcases that lay as thick as thatch
 O'er silenced cities, merely served to flatter
 Fair Catherine's pastime---who looked on the match
 Between these nations as a main of cocks,
 Wherein she liked her own to stand like rocks.

XXX.

And there in a kibitka he rolled on,
(A cursed sort of carriage without springs,
Which on rough roads leaves scarcely a whole bone)
Pondering on glory, chivalry, and kings,
And orders, and on all that he had done—
And wishing that post horses had the wings
Of Pegasus, or at the least post chaises
Had feathers, when a traveller on deep ways is.

XXXI.

At every jolt—and they were many—still
He turned his eyes upon his little charge,
As if he wished that she should fare less ill
Than he, in these sad highways left at large
To ruts, and flints, and lovely Nature's skill,
Who is no paviour, nor admits a barge
On her canals, where God takes sea and land,
Fishery and farm, both into his own hand.

XXXII.

At least he pays no rent, and has best right
To be the first of what we used to call
“Gentlemen Farmers”—a race worn out quite,
Since lately there have been no rents at all,
And “Gentlemen” are in a piteous plight
And “Farmers” can't raise Ceres from her fall:
She fell with Buonaparte:—What strange thoughts
Arise, when we see Emperors fall with oats!

XXXIII.

But Juan turned his eyes on the sweet child
 Whom he had saved from slaughter—what a trophy !
 Oh ! ye who build up monuments, defiled
 With gore, like Nadir Shah, that costive Sophy,
 Who, after leaving Hindostan a wild,
 And scarce to the Mogul a cup of coffee
 To soothe his woes withal, was slain, the sinner !
 Because he could no more digest his dinner ;—(3)

XXXIV.

Oh ye ! or we ! or he ! or she ! reflect,
 That one life saved, especially if young
 Or pretty, is a thing to recollect
 Far sweeter than the greenest laurels sprung
 From the manure of human clay, though decked
 With all the praises ever said or sung :
 Though hymned by every harp, unless within
 Your heart joins chorus, Fame is but a din.

XXXV.

Oh, ye great Authors luminous, voluminous !
 Ye twice ten hundred thousand daily scribes !
 Whose pamphlets, volumes, newspapers illumine us !
 Whether you're paid by Government in robes,
 To prove the public debt is not consuming us—
 Or, roughly treading on the “Courtier's kibes”
 With clownish heel, your popular circulation
 Feeds you by printing half the realm's starvation ;—

XXXVI.

Oh, ye great Authors!—“Apropos des bottes”—
I have forgotten what I meant to say,
As sometimes have been greater Sages’ lots;—
’Twas something calculated to allay
All wrath in barracks, palaces, or cots:
Certes it would have been but thrown away,
And that’s one comfort for my lost advice,
Although no doubt it was beyond all price.

XXXVII.

But let it go:—it will one day be found
With other reliques of “a former world,”
When this world shall be former, underground,
Thrown topsy-turvy, twisted, crisped, and curled,
Baked, fried, or burnt, turned inside-out, or drowned,
Like all the worlds before, which have been hurled
First out of and then back again to Chaos,
The superstratum which will overlay us.

XXXVIII.

So Cuvier says;—and then shall come again
Unto the new Creation, rising out
From our old crash, some mystic, ancient strain
Of things destroyed and left in airy doubt
Like to the notions we now entertain
Of Titans, Giants, fellows of about
Some hundred feet in height, not to say miles,
And Mammoths, and your winged Crocodiles.

XXXIX.

Think if then George the Fourth should be dug up !
 How the new worldlings of the then new East
 Will wonder where such animals could sup !
 (For they themselves will be but of the least :
 Even worlds miscarry, when too oft they pup,
 And every new Creation hath decreased
 In size, from overworking the material—
 Men are but maggots of some huge Earth's burial.)

XL.

How will---to these young people just thrust out
 From some fresh Paradise, and set to plough,
 And dig, and sweat, and turn themselves about,
 And plant, and reap; and spin, and grind, and sow,
 Till all the Arts at length are brought about,
 Especially of war and taxing,---how,
 I say, will these great reliques, when they see 'em,
 Look like the monsters of a new Museum ?

XLI.

But I am apt to grow too metaphysical :
 “ The time is out of joint,”—and so am I;
 I quite forget this poem's merely quizzical,
 And deviate into matters rather dry.
 I ne'er decide what I shall say, and this I call
 Much too poetical : Men should know why
 They write, and for what end : but, note or text,
 I never know the word which will come next.

XLII.

So on I ramble, now and then narrating,
Now pondering:—it is time we should narrate:
I left Don Juan with his horses baiting—
Now we'll get o'er the ground at a great rate.
I shall not be particular in stating
His journey, we've so many tours of late:
Suppose him then at Pittsburgh; suppose
That pleasant capital of painted snows;]

XLIII.

Suppose him in a handsome uniform;
A scarlet coat, black facings, a long plume,
Waving, like sails new shivered in a storm,
Over a cocked hat in a crowded room,
And brilliant breeches, bright as a Cairn Gorme,
Of yellow cassimere we may presume,
White stockings drawn uncurdled as new milk
O'er limbs whose symmetry set off the silk:

XLIV.

Suppose him sword by side, and hat in hand,
Made up by Youth, Fame, and an Army tailor—
That great Enchanter, at whose rod's command
Beauty springs forth, and Nature's self turns paler,
Seeing how Art can make her work more grand,
(When she don't pin men's limbs in like a jailor)—
Behold him placed as if upon a pillar! He Seems Love turned a Lieutenant of Artillery!

XLV.

His Bandage slipped down into a cravāt ;
 His Wings subdued to epaulettes ; his Quiver
 Shrunk to a scabbard, with his Arrows at
 His side as a small sword, but sharp as ever ;
 His Bow converted into a cocked hat ;
 But still so like, that Psyche were more clever
 Than some wives (who make blunders no less stupid)
 If she had not mistaken him for Cupid.

XLVI.

The courtiers stared, the ladies whispered, and
 The Empress smiled ; the reigning favourite frowned —
 I quite forget which of them was in hand
 Just then, as they are rather numerous found,
 Who took by turns that difficult command
 Since first her Majesty was singly crowned :
 But they were mostly nervous six-foot fellows,
 All fit to make a Patagonian jealous.

XLVII.

Juan was none of these, but slight and slim,
 Blushing and beardless ; and yet ne'ertheless
 There was a something in his turn of limb,
 And still more in his eye, which seemed to express,
 That though he looked one of the Seraphim
 There lurked a Man beneath the Spirit's dress.
 Besides, the Empress sometimes liked a boy,
 And had just buried the fair-faced Lanskoi. (4)

XLVIII.

No wonder then that Yermoloff, or Momonoff,
 Or Scherbatoff, or any other off
 Or on, might dread her Majesty had not room enough
 Within her bosom (which was not too tough)
 For a new flame; a thought to cast a gloom enough
 Along the aspect whether smooth or rough
 Of him who, in the language of his station,
 Then held that “high official situation.”

XLIX.

Oh, gentle ladies! should you seek to know
 The import of this diplomatic phrase,
 Bid Ireland’s Londonderry’s Marquess (5) show
 His parts of speech; and in the strange displays
 Of that odd string of words, all in a row,
 Which none divine, and every one obeys,
 Perhaps you may pick out some queer no-meaning,
 Of that weak wordy harvest the sole gleanings.

L.

I think I can explain myself without
 That sad inexplicable beast of prey—
 That Sphinx, whose words would ever be a doubt,
 Did not his deeds unriddle them each day—
 That monstrous Hieroglyphic---that long spout
 Of blood and water, leaden Castlereagh!
 And here I must an anecdote relate,
 But luckily of no great length or weight.

LI.

An English lady asked of an Italian,
 What were the actual and official duties
 Of the strange thing, some Women set a value on,
 Which hovers oft about some married Beauties,
 Called "Cavalier Servente?"---a Pygmalion
 Whose statues warm (I fear, alas! too true 'tis)
 Beneath his Art. The dame, pressed to disclose them,
 Said--"Lady, I beseech you to suppose them."

LII.

And thus I supplicate your supposition,
 And mildest, Matron-like interpretation
 Of the Imperial Favourite's condition.
 'Twas a high place, the highest in the nation
 In fact, if not in rank; and the suspicion
 Of any one's attaining to his station,
 No doubt gave pain, where each new pair of shoulders,
 If rather broad, made stocks rise and their holders.

LIII.

Juan, I said, was a most beauteous boy,
 And had retained his boyish look beyond
 The usual hirsute seasons which destroy,
 With beards and whiskers and the like, the fond
Parisian aspect which upset old Troy
 And founded Doctor's Commons:---I have conned
 The history of divorces, which, though chequered,
 Calls Ilion's the first damages on record.

LIV.

And Catherine, who loved all things (save her lord,
Who was gone to his place) and passed for much,
Admiring those (by dainty dames abhorred)

Gigantic Gentlemen, yet had a touch
Of Sentiment; and he she most adored
Was the lamented Lanskoi, who was such
A lover as had cost her many a tear,
And yet but made a middling grenadier.

LV.

Oh thou “teterima Causa” of all “belli”---
Thou gate of Life and Death---thou nondescript!
Whence is our exit and our entrance,---well I
May pause in pondering how all souls are dipt
In thy perennial fountain:---how man fell, I
Know not, since knowledge saw her branches stript
Of her first fruit; but how he falls and rises
Since, Thou hast settled beyond all surmises.

LVI.

Some call thee “the worse Cause of war,” but I
Maintain thou art the best: for after all
From thee we come, to thee we go, and why
To get at thee not batter down a wall,
Or waste a world? Since no one can deny
Thou dost replenish worlds both great and small:
With, or without thee, all things at a stand
Are, or would be, thou Sea of Life’s dry Land!

LVII.

Catherine, who was the grand Epitome
 Of that great cause of war, or peace, or what
 You please (it causes all the things which be,
 So you may take your choice of this or that)---
 Catherine, I say, was very glad to see
 The handsome herald, on whose plumage sat
 Victory; and, pausing as she saw him kneel
 With his dispatch, forgot to break the seal.

LVIII.

Then recollecting the whole Empress, nor Forgetting quite the woman (which composed
 At least three parts of this great whole) she tore
 The letter open with an air which posed
 The Court, that watched each look her visage wore,
 Until a royal smile at length disclosed
 Fair weather for the day. Though rather spacious,
 Her face was noble, her eyes fine, mouth gracious.

LIX.

Great joy was hers, or rather joys; the first
 Was a ta'en city, thirty thousand slain.
 Glory and triumph o'er her aspect burst,
 As an East Indian Sunrise on the main.
 These quenched a moment her Ambition's thirst—
 So Arab Deserts drink in Summer's rain:
 In vain!—As fall the dews on quenchless sands,
 Blood only serves to wash Ambition's hands!

LX.

Her next amusement was more fanciful ;

She smiled at mad Suwarow's rhymes, who threw
Into a Russian couplet rather dull

The whole gazette of thousands whom he slew.

Her third was feminine enough to annul

The shudder which runs naturally through
Our veins, when things called Sovereigns think it best
To kill, and Generals turn it into jest.

LXI.

The two first feelings ran their course complete,

And lighted first her eye and then her mouth : ]
The whole court looked immediately most sweet,

Like flowers well watered after a long drouth : —
But when on the Lieutenant at her feet -

Her Majesty, who liked to gaze on youth
Almost as much as on a new dispatch,
Glanced mildly, all the world was on the watch.

LXII.

Though somewhat large, exuberant, and truculent,

When wroth ; while pleased, she was as fine a figure
As those who like things rosy, ripe and succulent,

Would wish to look on, while they are in vigour.
She could repay each amatory look you lent

With interest, and in turn was wont with rigour
To exact of Cupid's bills the full amount
At sight, nor would permit you to discount.

LXIII.

With her the latter, though at times convenient,
 Was not so necessary; for they tell
 That she was handsome, and though fierce looked lenient,
 And always used her favourites too well.
 If once beyond her boudoir's precincts in ye went,
 Your "Fortune" was in a fair way "to swell
 A Man," as Giles says: (6) for though she would widow all Nations, she liked man as an individual.

LXIV.

What a strange thing is man! and what a stranger
 Is woman! What a whirlwind is her head,
 And what a whirlpool full of depth and danger
 Is all the rest about her! Whether wed,
 Or widow, maid or mother, she can change her
 Mind like the wind: whatever she has said
 Or done, is light to what she'll say or do;—
 The oldest thing on record, and yet new!

LXV.

Oh Catherine! (for of all interjections
 To thee both oh! and ah! belong of right
 In love and war) how odd are the connections
 Of human thoughts, which jostle in their flight!
 Just now your's were cut out in different sections:
First Ismail's capture caught your fancy quite;
Next of new knights, the fresh and glorious batch;
And thirdly he who brought you the dispatch!

LXVI.

Shakspeare talks of “the Herald Mercury
“ New lighted on a Heaven-kissing hill;”
And some such visions crossed her Majesty,
While her young Herald knelt before her still.
'Tis very true the hill seemed rather high
For a lieutenant to climb up; but skill
Smoothed even the Simplon’s steep, and by God’s blessing
With Youth and Health all kisses are “heaven-kissing.”

LXVII.

Her Majesty looked down, the Youth looked up—
And so they fell in love;—She with his face,
His grace, his God-knows-what: for Cupid’s cup
With the first draught intoxicates apace,
A quintessential laudanum or “black drop,”
Which makes one drunk at once, without the base
Expedient of full bumpers; for the eye
In love drinks all life’s fountains (save tears) dry.

LXVIII.

He, on the other hand, if not in love,
Fell into that no less imperious passion,
Self-love---which, when some sort of thing above
Ourselves, a singer, dancer, much in fashion,
Or duchess, princess, Empress, “deigns to prove”
('Tis Pope’s phrase) a great longing, tho’ a rash one,
For one especial person out of many,
Makes us believe ourselves as good as any.

LXIX.

Besides, he was of that delighted age
Which makes all female ages equal---when
We don't much care with whom we may engage,
As bold as Daniel in the Lion's den,
So that we can our native Sun assuage
In the next Ocean, which may flow just then,
To make a twilight in, just as Sol's heat is Quenched in the lap of the salt Sea, or Thetis.

LXX.

And Catherine (we must say thus much for Catherine)
Though bold and bloody, was the kind of thing
Whose temporary Passion was quite flattering,
Because each lover looked a sort of king,
Made up upon an amatory pattern,
A royal husband in all save the ring--
Which, being the damn'dest part of matrimony,
Seemed taking out the sting to leave the honey.

LXXI.

And when you add to this, her womanhood
In its meridian, her blue eyes, or grey--
(The last, if they have soul, are quite as good,
Or better as the best examples say :
Napoleon's, Mary's (Queen of Scotland) should
Lend to that colour a transcendent ray ;
And Pallas also sanctions the same hue,
Too wise to look through Optics black or blue)---

LXXII.

Her sweet smile, and her then majestic figure,
    Her plumpness, her imperial condescension,
Her preference of a boy to men much bigger,
    (Fellows whom Messalina's self would pension)
Her prime of life, just now in juicy vigour,
    With other extras, which we need not mention, --
All these, or any one of these, explain
Enough to make a stripling very vain.

LXXIII.

And that's enough, for love is vanity,
    Selfish in its beginning as its end,
Except where 'tis a mere insanity,
    A maddening spirit which would strive to blend
Itself with beauty's frail inanity,
    On which the passion's self seems to depend .
And hence some heathenish philosophers.
    Make love the main spring of the universe.

LXXIV.

Besides Platonic love, besides the love
    Of God, the love of Sentiment, the loving
Of faithful pairs—(I needs must rhyme with dove,
    That good old steam-boat which keeps verses moving
'Gainst Reason—Reason ne'er was hand-and-glove
    With rhyme, but always leant less to improving
The sound than sense)—besides all these pretences
    To love, there are those things which words name
Senses;

LXXV.

Those movements, those improvements in our bodies,
 Which make all bodies anxious to get out
 Of their own sand-pits to mix with a Goddess,
 For such all women are at first no doubt.
 How beautiful that moment! .and how odd is
 That fever which precedes the languid rout
 Of our sensations ! What a curious way
 The whole thing is of clothing souls in clay !

LXXVI.

The noblest kind of Love is Love Platonical,
 To end or to begin with; the next grand
 Is that which may be christened Love Canonical,
 Because the clergy take the thing in hand ;
 The third sort to be noted in our Chronicle
 As flourishing in every Christian land,
 Is, when chaste Matrons to their other ties
 Add what may be called Marriage in Disguise.

LXXVII.

Well, we won't analyze—our story must
 Tell for itself: the Sovereign was smitten,
 Juan much flattered by her love, or lust ;—
 I cannot stop to alter words once written,
 And the two are so mixed with human dust,
 That he who names one, both perchance may hit on:
 But in such matters Russia's mighty Empress
 Behaved no better than a common sempstress.

LXXXVIII.

The whole Court melted into one wide whisper,
 And all lips were applied unto all ears !
 The elder ladies' wrinkles curled much crisper
   As they beheld ; the younger cast some leers
 On one another, and each lovely lisper
   Smiled as she talked the matter o'er ; but tears
 Of rivalship rose in each clouded eye
 Of all the standing army who stood by.

LXXIX.

All the Ambassadors of all the Powers
 Inquired, Who was this very new young man,
 Who promised to be great in some few hours ?
   Which is full soon (though life is but a span).
 Already they beheld the silver showers
   Of rubles rain, as fast as specie can,
 Upon his cabinet, besides the presents
 Of several ribbons and some thousand peasants.

LXXX.

Catherine was generous,—all such ladies are :
   Love, that great opener of the heart and all
 The ways that lead there, be they near or far,
   Above, below, by turnpikes great or small,—
 Love—(though she had a cursed taste for war,
   And was not the best wife, unless we call
 Such Clytemnestra ; though perhaps 'tis better
 That one should die, than two drag on the fetter)

LXXXI.

Love had made Catherine make each lover's fortune,
Unlike our own half-chaste Elizabeth,
Whose avarice all disbursements did importune,
If History, the grand liar, ever saith
The truth ; and though grief her old age might shorten,
Because she put a favourite to death,
Her vile, ambiguous method of flirtation,
And stinginess, disgrace her sex and station.

LXXXII.

But when the levee rose, and all was 'bustle
In the dissolving circle, all the nations ;
Ambassadors began as 'twere to hustle
Round the young man with their congratulations ;
Also the softer silks were heard to rustle
Of gentle dames, among whose recreations
It is to speculate on handsome faces,
Especially when such lead to high places.

LXXXIII.

Juan, who found himself, he knew not how,
A general object of attention, made
His answers with a very graceful bow,
As if born for the ministerial trade.
Though modest, on his unembarrassed brow
Nature had written "gentleman." He said
Little, but to the purpose ; and his manner
Flung hovering graces o'er him like a banner.

LXXXIV.

An order from her Majesty consigned
Our young Lieutenant to the genial care
Of those in office : all the world looked kind
(As it will look sometimes with the first stare,
Which youth would not act ill to keep in mind)
As also did Miss Protasoff then there,
Named from her mystic office “ l'Eprouveuse,”
A term inexplicable to the Muse.

LXXXV.

With her then, as in humble duty bound,
Juan retired,—and so will I, until
My Pegasus shall tire of touching ground.
We have just lit on a “ Heaven-kissing hill,”
So lofty that I feel my brain turn round,
And all my fancies whirling like a mill ;
Which is a signal to my nerves and brain,
To take a quiet ride in some green lane.

CANTO X.

DON JUAN.

---

CANTO X.

---

I.

WHEN Newton saw an apple fall, he found
In that slight startle from his contemplation—
'Tis said (for I'll not answer above ground
For any sage's creed or calculation)—
A mode of proving that the earth turned round
In a most natural whirl, called "Gravitation;"
And thus is the sole mortal who could grapple,
Since Adam, with a fall, or with an apple.

II.

Man fell with apples, and with apples rose,
If this be true; for we must deem the mode
In which Sir Isaac Newton could disclose
Through the then unpaved stars the turnpike road,
A thing to counterbalance human woes;
For ever since immortal man hath glowed
With all kinds of mechanics, and full soon
Team-engines will conduct him to the Moon.

III.

And wherefore this exordium?—Why, just now,
 In taking up this paltry sheet of paper,
 My bosom underwent a glorious glow,
 And my internal spirit cut a caper:
 And though so much inferior, as I know,
 To those who, by the dint of glass and vapour,
 Discover stars, and sail in the wind's eye,
 I wish to do as much by poesy.

IV.

In the wind's eye I have sailed, and sail; but for
 The stars, I own my telescope is dim;
 But at the least I have shunned the common shore,
 And leaving land far out of sight, would skim
 The ocean of Eternity: the roar
 Of breakers has not daunted my slight, trim,
 But still sea-worthy skiff; and she may float
 Where ships have foundered, as doth many a boat.

V.

We left our hero, Juan, in the bloom
 Of favouritism, but not yet in the blush;—
 And far be it from my Muses to presume
 (For I have more than one Muse at a push)
 To follow him beyond the drawing-room:
 It is enough that fortune found him flush
 Of youth, and vigour, beauty, and those things
 Which for an instant clip Enjoyment's wings.

VI.

But soon they grow again and leave their nest.

“ Oh !” saith the Psalmist, “ that I had a dove’s
“ Pinions to flee away, and be at rest !”

And who, that recollects young years and loves,—
Though hoary now, and with a withering breast,

And palsied fancy, which no longer roves
Beyond its dimmed eye’s sphere,—but would much rather

Sigh like his son, than cough like his grandfather ?

VII.

But sighs subside, and tears (even widows’) shrink,

Like Arno in the summer, to a shallow,
So narrow as to shame their wintry brink,

Which threatens inundations deep and yellow !
Such difference doth a few months make. You’d think
Grief a rich field which never would lie fallow ;
No more it doth, its ploughs but change their boys,
Who furrow some new soil to sow for joys.

VIII.

But coughs will come when sighs depart—and now

And then before sighs cease ; for oft the one
Will bring the other, ere the lake-like brow

Is ruffled by a wrinkle, or the Sun
Of life reached ten o’clock : and while a glow,
Hectic and brief as summer’s day nigh done,
O’erspreads the cheek which seems too pure for clay,
Thousands blaze, love, hope, die—how happy they !---

IX.

But Juan was not meant to die so soon.
 We left him in the focus of such glory
 As may be won by favour of the Moon
 Or ladies' fancies—rather transitory
 Perhaps ; but who would scorn the month of June,
 Because December, with his breath so hoary,
 Must come ? Much rather should he court the ray,
 To hoard up warmth against a wintry day.

X.

Besides, he had some qualities which fix
 Middle-aged ladies even more than young :
 The former know what's what ; while new-fledged chicks
 Know little more of love than what is sung
 In rhymes, or dreamt (for Fancy will play tricks)
 In visions of those skies from whence Love sprung.
 Some reckon women by their suns or years,
 I rather think the Moon should date the dears.

XI.

And why ? because she's changeable and chaste.
 I know no other reason, whatsoe'er
 Suspicious people, who find fault in haste,
 May choose to tax me with ; which is not fair,
 Nor flattering to " their temper or their taste,"
 As my friend Jeffery writes with such an air
 However, I forgive him, and I trust
 He will forgive himself ;--if not, I must.

XII.

Old enemies who have become new friends
Should so continue---'tis a point of honour;
And I know nothing which could make amends
For a return to hatred : I would shun her
Like garlick, howsoever she extends
Her hundred arms and legs, and fain outrun her.
Old flames, new wives, become our bitterest foes---
Converted foes should scorn to join with those.

XIII.

This were the worst desertion :---renegadoes,
Even shuffling Southey, that incarnate lie,
Would scarcely join again the "reformadoes," (1)
Whom he forsook to fill the Laureate's sty :
And honest men, from Iceland to Barbadoes,
Whether in Caledon or Italy,
Should not veer round with every breath, nor seize,
To pain, the moment when you cease to please.

XIV.

The lawyer and the critic but behold
The baser sid s of literature and life,
And nought remains unseen, but much untold,
By those who scour those double vales of strife.
While common men grow ignorantly old,
The lawyers brief is like the surgeon's knife,
Dissecting the whole inside of a question,
And with it all the process of digestion.

XV.

A legal broom's a moral chimney-sweeper,
 And that's the reason he himself's so dirty ;
 The endless soot (2) bestows a tint far deeper
     Than can be hid by altering his shirt ; he
 Retains the sable stains of the dark creeper,
     At least some twenty-nine do out of thirty,
 In all their habits :---Not so you I own ;
 As Cæsar wore his robe you wear your gown.

XVI.

And all our little feuds, at least all mine,
 Dear Jeffery, once my most redoubted foe,
 (As far as rhyme and criticism combine
     To make such puppets of us things below)
 Are over : Here's a health to "Auld Lang Syne!"
     I do not know you, and may never know
 Your face,---but you have acted on the whole
 Most nobly, and I own it from my soul.

XVII.

And when I use the phrase of "Auld Lang Syne!"
     'Tis not addressed to you---the more's the pity
 For me, for I would rather take my wine
     With you, than aught (save Scott) in your proud city.
 But somehow,---it may seem a schoolboy's whine,
     And yet I seek not to be grand nor witty,
 But I am half a Scot by birth, and bred
     A whole one, and my heart flies to my head,---

XVIII.

As “Auld Lang Syne” brings Scotland, one and all,
Scotch plaids, Scotch snoods, the blue hills and clear
streams,
The Dee, the Don, Balgounie’s Brig’s black wall, (3)
All my boy feelings, all my gentler dreams
Of what I then dreamt, clothed in their own pall,
Like Banquo’s offspring ;---floating past me seems
My childhood in this childishness of mine :
I care not---’tis a glimpse of “Auld Lang Syne.”

XIX.

And though, as you remember, in a fit
Of wrath and rhyme, when juvenile and curly,
I railed at Seots to show my wrath and wit,
Which must be owned was sensitive and surly,
Yet ’tis in vain such sallies to permit,
They cannot quench young feelings fresh and early :
I “scotched not killed” the Scotchman in my blood,
And love the land of “mountain and of flood.”

XX.

Don Juan, who was real or ideal,---
For both are much the same, since what men think
Exists when the once thinkers are less real,
Than what they thought, for mind can never sink,
And ’gainst the body makes a strong appeal ;
And yet ’tis very puzzling on the brink
Of what is called Eternity, to stare,
And know no more of what is here and there .—

XXI.

Don Juan grew a very polished Russian—
How we won't mention, why we need not say;
 Few youthful minds can stand the strong concussion
 Of any slight temptation in their way :
 But his just now were spread as is a cushion
 Smoothed for a monarch's seat of honour: gay
 Damsels, and dances, revels, ready money,
 Made ice seem Paradise, and winter sunny.

XXII.

The favour of the Empress was agreeable ;
 And though the duty waxed a little hard,
 Young people at his time of life should be able
 To come off handsomely in that regard.
 He now was growing up like a green tree, able
 For love, war, or ambition, which reward
 Their luckier votaries, till old age's tedium.
 Make some prefer the circulating medium.

XXIII.

About this time, as might have been anticipated,
 Seduced by youth and dangerous examples,
 Don Juan grew, I fear, a little dissipated ;
 Which is a sad thing, and not only tramples
 On our fresh feelings, but—as being participated
 With all kinds of incorrigible samples
 Of frail humanity—must make us selfish,
 And shut our souls up in us like a shell-fish.

XXIV.

This we pass over. We will also pass
The usual progress of intrigues between
Unequal matches, such as are, alas !
A young Lieutenant's with a not old Queen,
But one who is not so youthful as she was
In all the royalty of sweet seventeen.
Sovereigns may sway materials, but not matter,
And wrinkles (the d—d democrats) wont flatter.

XXV.

And Death, the sovereign's Sovereign, though the great
Gracchus of all mortality, who levels
With his Agrarian laws, the high estate
Of him who feasts, and fights, and roars, and revels,
To one small grass-grown patch (which must await Corruption for its crop) with the poor devils
Who never had a foot of land till now,—
Death's a reformer, all men must allow.

XXVI.

He lived (not Death but Juan) in a hurry
Of waste, and haste, and glare, and gloss, and glitter,
In this gay clime of bear-skins black and furry—
Which (though I hate to say a thing that's bitter)
Peep out sometimes, when things are in a flurry,
Through all the “purple and fine linen,” fitter
For Babylon's than Russia's royal harlot—
And neutralize her outward show of scarlet.

XXVII.

And this same state we won't describe : we would
 Perhaps from hearsay, or from recollection ;
 But getting nigh grim Dante's "obscure wood,"
 That horrid equinox, that hateful section
 Of human years, that half-way house, that rude
 Hut, whence wise travellers drive with circumspection
 Life's sad post-horses o'er the dreary frontier
 Of age, and looking back to youth, give one tear ;—

XXVIII.

I won't describe—that is, if I can help
 Description ; and I won't reflect—that is,
 If I can stave off thought, which—as a whelp
 Clings to its teat—sticks to me through the abyss
 Of this odd labyrinth ; or as the kelp
 Holds by the rock ; or as a lover's kiss
 Drains its first draught of lips :—but, as I said,
 I won't philosophize, and will be read.

XXIX.

Juan, instead of courting courts, was courted,
 A thing which happens rarely : this he owed
 Much to his youth, and much to his reported
 Valour; much also to the blood he showed,
 Like a race-horse ; much to each dress he sported,
 Which set the beauty off in which he glowed,
 As purple clouds befringe the sun ; but most
 He owed to an old woman and his post.

XXX.

He wrote to Spain:—and all his near relations,
Perceiving he was in a handsome way
Of getting on himself, and finding stations
For cousins also, answered the same day.
Several prepared themselves for emigrations;
And, eating ices, were o'erheard to say,
That with the addition of a slight pelisse,
Madrid's and Moscow's cliques were of a-piece.

XXXI.

His mother, Donna Inez, finding too
That in the lieu of drawing on his banker,
Where his assets were waxing rather few,
He had brought his spending to handsome anchor,—
Replied, “that she was glad to see him through “Those pleasures after which wild youth will hanker;
“As the sole sign of man's being in his senses
“Is, learning to reduce his past expenses.

XXXII.

“She also recommended him to God,
“And no less to God's Son, as well as Mother,
“Warned him against Greek-worship, which looks odd,
“In Catholic eyes; but told him too to smother
“Outward dislike, which don't look well abroad:
“Informed him that he had a little brother
“Born in a second wedlock; and above
“All, praised the Empress's maternal love.

XXXIII.

" She could not too much give her approbation
 " Unto an Empress, who preferred young men
 " Whose age, and, what was better still, whose nation
     " And climate, stopped all scandal (now and then):
 " At home it might have given her some vexation;
 " But where thermometers sunk down to ten
 " Or five, or one, or zero, she could never
 " Believe that virtue thawed before the river."

XXXIV.

Oh for a forty-parson power (10) to chaunt
 Thy praise, Hypocrisy ! Oh for a hymn
 Loud as the Virtues thou dost loudly vaunt,
 Not practise ! Oh for trumps of cherubim !
 Or the ear-trumpet of my good old aunt,
 Who, though her spectacles at last grew dim,
 Drew quiet consolation through its hint,
 When she no more could read the pious print.

XXXV.

She was no hypocrite at least poor soul,
 But went to heaven in as sincere a way
 As any body on the Elected Roll,
 Which portions out upon the judgment day
 Heaven's freeholds, in a sort of doomsday scroll,
 Such as the conqueror William did repay
 His knights with, lotting others properties
 Into some sixty thousand new knights' fees.

XXXVI.

I can't complain, whose ancestors are there,
Erneis, Radulphus—eight-and-forty manors
(If that my memory doth not greatly err)
Were their reward for following Billy's banners;
And though I can't help thinking 'twas scarce fair
To strip the Saxons of their hydes, (5) like tanners;
Yet as they founded churches with the produce.
You'll deem, no doubt, they put it to a good use.

XXXVII.

The gentle Juan flourished, though at times
He felt like other plants—called Sensitive,
Which shrink from touch, as monarchs do from rhymes
Save such as Southee can afford to give.
Perhaps he longed in bitter frosts for climes
In which the Neva's ice would cease to live
Before May-day: perhaps, despite his duty,
In royalty's vast arms he sighed for beauty:

XXXVIII.

Perhaps,—but, sans perhaps, we need not seek
For causes young or old: the canker-worm
Will feed upon the fairest, freshest cheek,
As well as further drain the withered form:
Care like a house-keeper, brings every week
His bills in, and however we may storm,
They must be paid: though six days smoothly run,
The seventh will bring blue devils or a dun.

XXXIX.

I don't know how it was, but he grew sick :
 The Empress was alarmed, and her physician
 (The same who physicked Peter) found the tick
 Of his fierce pulse betoken a condition
 Which augured of the dead, however quick
 Itself, and showed a feverish disposition ;
 At which the whole court was extremely troubled,
 The Sovereign shocked, and all his medicines doubled.

XL.

Low were the whispers, manifold the rumours.
 Some said he had been poisoned by Potemkin ;
 Others talked learnedly of certain tumours,
 Exhaustion, or disorders of the same kin !
 Some said 'twas a concoction of the humours,
 Which with the blood too readily will claim kin ;
 Others again were ready to maintain,
 " 'Twas only the fatigue of last campaign."

XLI.

But here is one prescription out of many :
 " Sodæ-Sulphat. 3. vi. 3. s. Mannæ optim.
 " Aq. fervent. F. 3. iſs. 3ij. tinct. Sennæ
 " Haustus" (And here the surgeon came and cupped him)
 " R. Pulv. Com. gr. iii. Ipecacuanhæ"
 (With more beside, if Juan had not stopped 'em.)
 " Bolus Potassæ Sulphuret. Suinendus,
 " Et Haustus ter in die capiendus."

XLII.

This is the way physicians mend or end us,
Secundum artem : but although we sneer
In health—when ill, we call them to attend us,
Without the least propensity to jeer :
While that “hiatus maxime deflendus,”
To be filled up by spade or mattock, ’s near,
Instead of gliding graciously down Lethe,
We tease mild Baillie, or soft Abernethy.

XLIII.

Juan demurred at this first notice to
Quit ; and though Death had threatened an ejection,
His youth and constitution bore him through,
And sent the doctors in a new direction
But still his state was delicate : the hue
Of health but flickered with a faint reflection
Along his wasted check, and seemed to gravel
The Faculty—who said that he must travel.

XLIY.

The climate was too cold, they said for him,
Meridian-born, to bloom in. This opinion
Made the chaste Catherine look a little grim,
Who did not like at first to loose her minion :
But when she saw his dazzling eye wax dim,
And drooping like an eagle’s with clipt pinion,
She then resolved to send him on a mission,
But in a style becoming his condition.

XLV.

There was just then a kind of a discussion,
A sort of treaty or negociation
Between the British cabinet and Russian,
Maintained with all the due prevarication
With which great states such things are apt to push on ;
Something about the Baltic's navigation,
Hides, train-oil, tallow, and the rights of Thetis,
Which Britons deem their "uti possidetis."

XLVI.

So Catherine, who had a handsome way
Of fitting out her favourites, conferred
This secret charge on Juan, to display
At once her royal splendour, and reward
His services. He kissed hands the next day,
Received instructions how to play his card,
Was laden with all kinds of gifts and honours,
Which showed what great discernment was the donor's.

XLVII.

But she was lucky, and luck's all. Your Queens
Are generally prosperous in reigning ;
Which puzzles us to know what fortune means.
But to continue : though her years were waning,
Her climacteric teased her like her teens ;
And though her dignity brooked no complaining,
So much did Juan's setting off distress her,
She could not find at first a fit successor.

XLVIII.

But Time the comforter will come at last ;
And four-and-twenty hours, and twice that number
Of candidates requesting to be placed,
Made Catherine taste next night a quiet slumber : —
Not that she meant to fix again in haste,
Nor did she find the quantity encumber,
But always choosing with deliberation,
Kept the place open for their emulation.

XLIX.

While this high post of honour's in abeyance,
For one or two days, reader, we request
You'll mount with our young hero the conveyance
Which wafted him from Pittsburgh : the best
Barouche, which had the glory to display once
The fair Czarina's Autocratic crest,
(When, a new Iphigene, she went to Tauris)
Was given to her favourite, (6) and now bore his.

L.

A bull-dog, and a bull-finck, and an ermine,
All private favourites of Don Juan ; for
(Let deeper sages the true cause determine)
He had a kind of inclination, or
Weakness, for what most people deem mere vermin—
Live animals : an old maid of threescore
For cats and birds more penchant ne'er displayed,
Although he was not old, nor even a maid.

LI.

The animals aforesaid occupied
 Their station : there were valets, secretaries,
 In other vehicles ; but at his side
 Sat little Leila, who survived the parries
 He made 'gainst Cossacque sabres, in the wide
 Slaughter of Ismail. Though my wild Muse varies
 Her note, she don't forget the infant girl
 Whom he preserved, the pure and living pearl.

LII.

Poor little thing ! She was as fair as docile,
 And with that gentle, serious character,
 As rare in living beings as a fossile
 Man, 'midst thy mouldy Mammoths, "grand Cuvier!"
 Ill fitted with her ignorance to jostle
 With this o'erwhelming world, where all must err :
 But she was yet but ten years old, and therefore
 Was tranquil, though she knew not why or wherefore.

LIII-

Don Juan loved her, and she loved him, as
 Nor brother, father, sister, daughter love.
 I cannot tell exactly what it was ;
 He was not yet quite old enough to prove
 Parental feelings, and the other class,
 Called brotherly affection, could not move
 His bosom,—for he never had a sister :
 Ah ! if he had, how much he would have missed her !

LIV.

And still less was it sensual ; for besides
That he was not an ancient debauchee,
(Who like sour fruit, to stir their veins' salt tides,
As acids rouse a dormant Alkali)
Although ('twill happen as our planet guides)
His youth was not the chaste that might be,
There was the purest Platonism at bottom
Of all his feelings—only he forgot 'em.

LV.

Just now there was no peril of temptation ;
He loved the infant orphan he had saved,
As patriots (now and then) may love a nation ;
His pride too felt that she was not enslaved,
Owing to him ;—as also her salvation
Through his means and the church's might be paved.
But one thing's odd, which here must be inserted,
The little Turk refused to be converted.

LVI.

Twas strange enough she should retain the impression
Thro' such a scene of change, and dread, and slaughter ;
But though three bishops told her the transgression,
She showed a great dislike to holy water :
She also had no passion for confession ;
Perhaps she had nothing to confess : no matter ,
Whate'er the cause, the church made little of it—
She still held out that Mahomet was a prophet.

LVII.

In fact, the only Christian she could bear
 Was Juan, whom she seemed to have selected
 In place of what her home and friends once were.
 He naturally loved what he protected :
 And thus they formed a rather curious pair ;
 A guardian green in years, a ward connected
 In neither clime, time, blood, with her defender ;
 And yet this want of ties made their's more tender.

LVIII.

They journeyed on through Poland and through Warsaw,
 Famous for mines of salt and yokes of iron :
 Through Courland also, which that famous farce saw
 Which gave her dukes the graceless name of 'Biron.'(7)
 'Tis the same landscape which the modern Mars saw
 Who marched to Moscow, led by Fame, the Syren !
 To lose by one month's frost some twenty years
 Of conquest, and his guard of grenadiers.

LIX

Let not this seem an anti-climax :—“ Oh !
 “ My Guard ! my old guard ! exclaimed that God of Clay,—
 Think of the thunderer's falling down below
 Carotid-artery-cutting Castlereagh !—
 Alas ! that glory should be chilled by snow !
 But should we wish to warm us on our way
 Through Poland, there is Kosciusko's name
 Might scatter fire through ice, like Hecla's flame.

LX.

From Poland they came on through Prussia Proper,
And Koningsberg the capital, whose vaunt,
Besides some veins of iron, lead, or copper,
Has lately been the great Professor Kant.
Juan, who cared not a tobacco-stopper
About philosophy, pursued his jaunt
To Germany, whose somewhat tardy millions
Have princes who spur more than their postilions.

LXI.

And thence through Berlin, Dresden, and the like,
Until he reached the castellated Rhine:---
Ye glorious Gothic scenes! how much ye strike
All phantasies, not even excepting mine:
A grey wall, a green ruin, rusty pike,
Make my soul pass the equinoctial line
Between the present and past worlds, and hover
Upon their airy confine, half-seas-over.

LXII.!

But Juan posted on through Manheim, Bonn,
Which Drachenfels frowns over like a spectre
Of the good feudal times for ever gone,
On which I have not time just now to lecture.
From thence he was drawn onwards to Cologne,
A city which presents to the inspector
Eleven thousand Maidenheads of bone,
The greatest number flesh hath ever known. (8)

LXIII.

From thence to Holland's Hague and Helvoetsluyts,
That water land of Dutchmen and of ditches,
Where juniper expresses its best juice,
The poor man's sparkling substitute for riches.
Senates and sages have condemned its use—
But to deny the mob a cordial which is
Too often all the clothing, meat or fuel
Good government has left them, seems but cruel.

LXIV.

Here he embarked, and with a flowing sail
Went bounding for the island of the free,
Towards which the impatient wind blew half a gale :
High dash'd the spray, the bows dipped in the sea.
And sea-sick passengers turned somewhat pale ;
But Juan, seasoned as he well might be
By former voyages, stood to watch the skiffs
Which passed, or catch the first glimpse of the cliffs.

LXV.

At length they rose, like a white wall along
The blue sea's border; and Don Juan felt—
What even young strangers feel a little strong
At the first sight of Albion's chalky belt—
A kind of pride that he should be among
Those haughty shop-keepers, who sternly dealt
Their goods and edicts out from pole to pole,
And made the very billows pay them toll.

LXVI.

I have no great cause to love that spot of earth,
Which holds what might have been the noblest nation;
But though I owe it little but my birth,
I feel a mixed regret and veneration
For its decaying fame and former worth.
Seven years (the usual term of transportation)
Of absence lay one's old resentments level,
When a man's country's going to the devil.

LXVII.

Alas! could she but fully, truly, know
How her great name is now throughout abhorred;
How eager all the earth is for the blow
Which shall lay bare her bosom to the sword:
How all the nations deem her their worst foe,
That worse than worst of foes, the once adored
False friend, who held out freedom to mankind,
And now would chain them, to the very mind;—

LXVIII.

Would she be proud, or boast herself the free,
Who is but first of slaves? The nations are
In prison,—but the jailor, what is he?
No less a victim to the bolt and bar.
Is the poor privilege to turn the key
Upon the captive, freedom? He's as far
From the enjoyment of the earth and air
Who watches o'er the chain, as they who wear.

LXIX.

Don Juan now saw Albion's earliest beauties,—

Thy cliffs dear Dover! harbour, and hotel ;
 Thy custom-house with all its delicate duties ;
 Thy waiters running mucks at every bell ;
 Thy packets, all whose passengers are booties
     To those who upon land or water dwell ;
 And last, not least, to strangers uninstructed,
 Thy long, long bills, whence nothing is deducted.

LXX.

Juan, though careless, young, and magnifique,
     And rich in rubles, diamonds, cash, and credit,
 Who did not limit much his bills per week,
     Yet stared at this a little, though he paid it,—
 (His Maggior Duomo, a smart subtle Greek,
     Before him summed the awful scroll and read it :)
 But doubtless as the air, though seldom sunny,
 Is free, the respiration's worth the money.

LXXI.

On with the horses ! Off to Canterbury !
     Tramp, tramp o'er pebble, and splash, splash through puddle ;
 Hurrah ! how swiftly speeds the post so merry !
     Not like slow Germany, wherein they muddle
 Along the road, as if they went to bury
         Their fare ; and also pause besides, to fuddle
 With “ schnapps”—sad dogs ! whom “ Hundsfot” or “ Ferflucter”
 Affect no more than lightning a conductor.

LXXII.

Now there is nothing gives a man such spirits,
Leavening his blood as Cayenne doth a curry,
As going at full speed—no matter where its
Direction be so 'tis but in a hurry,
And merely for the sake of its own merits :
For the less cause there is for all this flurry,
The greater is the pleasure in arriving
At the great end of travel—which is driving.

LXXIII.

They saw at Canterbury the Cathedral ;
Black Edward's helm, and Becket's bloody stone,
Were pointed out as usual by the Bedral,
In the same quaint, uninterested tone :—
There's Glory again for you, gentle reader ! all
Ends in a rusty casque and dubious bone,
Half-solved into those sodas or magnesias,
Which form that bitter draught, the human species.

LXIV.

The effect on Juan was of course sublime :
He breathed a thousand Cressys, as he saw
That casque, which never stooped, except to Time.
Even the bold Churchman's tomb excited awe,
Who died in the then great attempt to climb
O'er kings, who now at least must talk of law,
Before they butcher. Little Leila gazed,
And asked why such a structure had been raised :

LXXV.

And being told it was “ God’s house,” she said
 He was well lodged, but only wondered how
 He suffered Infidels in his homestead,
 The cruel Nazarenes, who had laid low
 His holy temples in the lands which bred
 The True Believers ;—and her infant brow
 Was bent with grief that Mahomet should resign
 A Mosque so noble, flung like pearls to swine.

LXXVI.

On, on ! through meadows, managed like a garden,
 A Paradise of hops and high production ;
 For after years of travel by a bard in
 Countries of greater heat but lesser suction,
 A green field is a sight which makes him pardon
 The absence of that more sublime construction,
 Which mixes up vines, olives, precipices,
 Glaciers, volcanos, oranges, and ices.

LXXVII.

And when I think upon a pot of beer——
 But I won’t weep !—and so drive on, postillions !
 As the smart boys spurred fast in their career,
 Juan admired these highways of free millions ;
 A country in all senses the most dear
 To foreigner or native, save some silly ones,
 Who “ kick against the pricks” just at this juncture,
 And for their pains get only a fresh puncture.

LXXVIII.

What a delightful thing's a turnpike road !
So smooth, so level, such a mode of shaving
The earth, as scarce the eagle in the broad
Air can accomplish, with his wide wings waving.
Had such been cut in Phaeton's time, the god
Had told his son to satisfy his craving
With the York mail ;—but onward as we roll,
“Surgit amari aliquid”—the toll !

LXXIX.

Alas ! how deeply painful is all payment !
Take lives, take wives, take aught except men's purses.
As Machiavel shows those in purple raiment,
Such is the shortest way to general curses.
They hate a murderer much less than a claimant
On that sweet ore, which every body nurses :—
Kill a man's family, and he may brook it,
But keep your hands out of his breeches' pocket.

LXXX.

So said the Florentine : ye monarchs, hearken
To your instructor. Juan now was borne,
Just as the day began to wane and darken,
O'er the high hill which looks with pride or scorn
Toward the great city :—ye who have a spark in
Your veins of Cockney spirit, smile or mourn,
According as you take things well or ill—
Bold Britons, we are now on Shooter's Hill !

LXXXI.

The sun went down, the smoke rose up, as from
 A half-unquenched volcano, o'er a space
 Which well besecmed the “ Devil's drawing-room,”
 As some have qualified that wondrous place.
 But Juan felt, though not approaching home,
 As one who, though he were not of the race,
 Revered the soil, of those true sons the mother,
 Who butchered half the earth, and bullied t'other. (9)

LXXXII.

A mighty mass of brick, and smoke, and shipping,
 Dirty and dusky, but as wide as eye
 Could reach, with here and there a sail just skipping
 In sight, then lost amidst the forestry
 Of masts ; a wilderness of steeples peeping
 On tiptoe, through their Sea-coal canopy ;
 A huge, dun cupola, like a foolscap crown
 On a fool's head—and there is London Town !

LXXXIII.

But Juan saw not this : each wreath of smoke
 Appeared to him but as the magic vapour
 Of some alchymic furnace, from whence broke
 The wealth of worlds (a wealth of tax and paper :)
 The gloomy clouds, which o'er it as a yoke
 Are bowed, and put the sun out like a taper,
 Were nothing but the natural atmosphere,
 Extremely wholesome, though but rarely clear.

LXXXIV.

He paused—and so will I ; as doth a crew
Before they give their broadside. By and by,
My gentle countrymen, we will renew
Our old acquaintance ; and at least I'll try
To tell you truths you will not take as true,
Because they are so :—a male Mrs. Fry,
With a soft besom will I sweep your halls,
And brush a web or two from off the walls.

LXXXV.

Oh, Mrs. Fry ! Why go to Newgate ? Why
Preach to poor rogues ? And wherefore not begin
With C—lt—n, or with other houses ? Try
Your hand at hardened and imperial sin.
To mend the people's an absurdity,
A jargon, a mere philanthropic din,
Unless you make their betters better :—Fie !
I thought you had more religion, Mrs. Fry.

LXXXVI.

Teach them the decencies of good threescore ;
Cure them of tours, Hussar and Highland dresses ;
Tell them that youth once gone returns no more ;
That hired huzzas redeem no land's distresses ;
Tell them Sir W---ll---m C---t---s is a bore,
Too dull even for the dullest of excesses---
The witless Falstaff of a hoary Hal,
A fool whose bells have ceased to ring at all ;—

LXXXVII.

Tell them, though it may be perhaps too late
On life's worn confine, jaded, bloated, sated,
To set up vain pretences of being great,
'Tis not so to be good; and be it stated,
The worthiest kings have ever loved least state;
And tell them—but you won't and I have prated
Just now enough; but by and by I'll prattle
Like Roland's horn in Roncesvalles' battle.

NOTES TO CANTO X.

---

Note 1, page 125, stanza xiii.

Would scarcely join again the “reformadoes.”

“Reformers,” or rather “Reformed.” The Baron Bradwardine in Waverley is authority for the word.

Note 2, page 126, stanza xv.

*The endless soot bestows a tint far deeper
Than can be hid by altering his shirt.*

Query, suit?—PRINTER'S DEVIL.

Note 3, page 127, stanza xviii.

Balgounie's Brig's “black wall.”

The brig of Don near the “auld toun” of Aberdeen, with its one arch and its black deep salmon<sup>7</sup> stream below, is in my memory as yesterday. I still remember, though perhaps I may misquote the awful proverb which made me pause to cross it, and yet lean over it with a childish delight, being an only son, at least by the mother's side. The saying as recollected by me was this, but I have never heard or seen it since I was nine years of age:—

“ Brig of Balgounie, black’s your wa’,
 “ Wi’ a wife’s ae son, and a mear’s ae foal,
 “ Doun ye shall fa’ !”

Note 4, page 132, stanza xxxvi.

*Oh, for a “forty-parson power” to chant
 Thy praise, Hypocrisy!*

A metaphor taken from the “forty-horse power” of a steam-engine. That mad wag, the Reverend S. S. sitting by a brother Clergyman at dinner, observed afterwards that his dull neighbour had a “twelve parson-power” of conversation.

Note 5, page 133, stanza xxxvi.

To strip the Saxons of their hydes, like tanners.

“ Hyde.”---I believe a hyde of land to be a legitimate word, and as such subject to the tax of a quibble.

Note 6, page 137, stanza xl ix.

Was given to her favourite, and now bore his.

The Empress went to the Crimea, accompanied by the Emperor Joseph, in the year—I forget which.

Note 7, page 140, stanza lviii.

Which gave her dukes the graceless name of “Biron.”

In the Empress Ann’s time, Biren her favourite assumed the name and arms of the “Birons” of France, which families are yet extant with that of England. There are still the daughters of Courland of that name; one of them I remember seeing in England in the blessed year of the Allies---the Duchess of S. ---to whom the English Duchess of S---t presented me as a namesake.

Note 8, page 141, stanza lxii.

*Eleven thousand maidenheads of bone,
The greatest number Flesh hath ever known.*

St. Ursula and her eleven thousand virgins were still extant in 1816, and may be so yet as much as ever.

Note 9, page 148, stanza lxxxi.

*Who butchered half the earth, and bullied t'other
India. America.*

CANTO XI.

---

I.

WHEN Bishop Berkeley said "there was no matter,"
And proved it---'twas no matter what he said :
They say his system 'tis in vain to batter,
Too subtle for the airiest human head ;
And yet who can believe it? I would shatter
Gladly all matters down to stone or lead,
Or adamant, to find the world a spirit,
And wear my head, denying that I wear it.

II.

What a sublime discovery 'twas to make the Universe universal Egotism,
That all's ideal---all ourselves: I'll stake the World (be it what you will) that that's no schism.
Oh Doubt!---if thou be'st Doubt, for which some take thee,
But which I doubt extremely---thou sole prism
Of the truth's rays, spoil not my draught of spirit!
Heaven's brandy, though our brain can hardly bear it.

III.

For ever and anon comes Indigestion,
 (Not the most “dainty Ariel”) and perplexes
 Our soarings with another sort of question :
 And that which after all my spirit vexes,
 Is, that I find no spot where man can rest eye on,
 Without confusion of the sorts and sexes,
 Of beings, stars, and this unriddled wonder,
 The world, which at the worst’s a glorious blunder---

IV.

If it be chance ; or if it be according
 To the old Text, still better :--lest it should Turn out so, we’ll say nothing ’gainst the wording,
 As several people think such hazards rude :
 They’re right ; our days are too brief for affording
 Space to dispute what no one ever could Decide, and every body one day will Know very clearly---or at least lie still.

V.

And therefore will I leave off metaphysical
 Discussion, which is neither here nor there :
 If I agree that what is, is ; then this I call
 Being quite perspicuous and extremely fair.
 The truth is, I’ve grown lately rather phthisical :
 I don’t know what the reason is---the air
 Perhaps ; but as I suffer from the shocks
 Of illness, I grow much more orthodox.

VI.

The first attack at once proved the Divinity ;
But that I never doubted nor the devil ;
The next, the Virgin's mystical virginity ;
The third, the usual Origin of Evil :
The fourth, at once established the whole Trinity
On so uncontrovertible a level,
That I devoutly wished the three were four,
On purpose to believe so much the more.

VII.

To our theme :—The man who has stood on the Acropolis,
And looked down over Attica ; or he
Who has sailed where picturesque Constantinople is,
Or seen Tombuctoo, or hath taken tea
In small-eyed China's crockery-ware metropolis,
Or sat amidst the bricks of Nineveh,
May not think much of London's first appearance—
But ask him what he thinks of it a year hence ?

VIII.

Don Juan had got out on Shooter's Hill ;
Sunset the time, the place the same declivity
Which looks along that vale of good and ill
Where London streets ferment in full activity ;
While every thing around was calm and still,
Except the creak of wheels, which on their pivot he Heard,—and that bee-like, bubbling, busy hum
Of cities, that boils over with their scum :—

IX.

I say, Don Juan, wrapt in contemplation,
 Walked on behind his carriage, o'er the summit,
 And lost in wonder of so great a nation,
 Gave way to't, since he could not overcome it.
 " And here," he cried, " is Freedom's chosen station ;
 " Here peals the people's voice, nor can entomb it
 " Racks, prisons, inquisitions ; resurrection
 " Awaits it, each new meeting or election.

X.

" Here are chaste wives, pure lives ; here people pay
 " But what they please ; and if that things be dear,
 " 'Tis only that they love to throw away
 " Their cash, to show how much they have a-year.
 " Here laws are all inviolate ; none lay
 " Traps for the traveller ; every highway's clear :
 " Here —" he was interrupted by a knife
 With, " Damn your eyes ! your money or your life !"

XI.

These freeborn sounds proceeded from four pads,
 In ambush laid, who had perceived him loiter
 Behind his carriage ; and, like handy lads,
 Had seized the lucky hour to reconnoitre,
 In which the heedless gentleman who gads
 Upon the road, unless he prove a fighter,
 May find himself within that Isle of riches
 Exposed to lose his life as well as breeches.

XII.

Juan, who did not understand a word
 Of English, save their shibboleth, “ God damn ! ”
 And even that he had so rarely heard,
 He sometimes thought ’twas only their “ Salâm,”
 Or “ God be with you ! ”—and ’tis not absurd
 To think so ; for half English as I am
 (To my misfortune) never can I say
 I heard them wish “ God with you,” save that way ;—

XIII.

Juan yet quickly understood their gesture,
 And being somewhat choleric and sudden,
 Drew forth a pocket-pistol from his vesture,
 And fired it into one assailant’s pudding—
 Who fell, as rolls an ox o’er in his pasture,
 And roared out, as he writhed his native mud in,
 Unto his nearest follower or heuchman,
 “ Oh Jaek ! I’m floored by that ere bloody Frenchman ! ”

XIV.

On which Jaek and his train set off at speed,
 And Juan’s suit, late scattered at a distance
 Came up, all marvelling at such a deed,
 And offering, as usual, late assistance.
 Juan, who saw the Moon’s late minion bleed
 As if his veins would pour out his existence
 Stood calling out for bandages and lint,
 And wished he had been less hasty with his flint.

XV.

“Perhaps,” thought he, “it is the country’s wont
 “To welcome foreigners in this way: now
 “I recollect some innkeepers who don’t “Differ, except in robbing with a bow,
 “In lieu of a bare blade and brazen front.
 “But what is to be done? I can’t allow
 “The fellow to lie groaning on the road:
 “So take him up; I’ll help you with the load.”

XVI.

But ere they could perform this pious duty,
 The dying man cried, “Hold! I’ve got my gruel!
 “Oh! for a glass of mar: We’ve miss’d our booty;
 “Let me die where I am!” And as the fuel
 Of life shrunk in his heart, and thick and sooty
 The drops fell from his death-wound, and he drew ill
 His breath,—he from his swelling throat untied
 A kerchief, crying “Give Sal that!”—and died.

XVII.

The cravat stained with bloody drops fell down
 Before Don Juan’s feet: he could not tell
 Exactly why it was before him thrown,
 Nor what the meaning of the man’s farewell.
 Poor Tom was once a kiddy upon town,
 A thorough varmint, and a real swell,
 Full flash, all fancy, until fairly diddled,
 His pockets first, and then his body riddled.

XVIII.

Don Juan, having done the best he could
 In all the circumstances of the case,
 As soon as "Crowner's quest" allowed, pursued
 His travels to the capital apace;—
 Esteeming it a little hard he should
 In twelve hours' time, and very little space,
 Have been obliged to slay a freeborn native
 In self-defence: this made him meditative.

XIX.

He from the world had cut off a great man,
 Who in his time had made heroic bustle.
 Who in a row like Tom could lead the van,
 Booze in the ken, or at the spellken hustle?
 Who queer a flat? Who (spite of Bow-street's ban)
 On the high toby-spice so flash the muzzle?
 Who on a lark, with black-eyed Sal (his blowing)
 So prime, so swell, so nutty, and so knowing? (1)

XX.

But Tom's no more—and so no more of Tom.
 Heroes must die; and by God's blessing 'tis
 Not long before the most of them go home.—
 Hail! Thamis, Hail! Upon thy verge it is
 That Juan's chariot, rolling like a drum
 In thunder, holds the way it can't well miss,
 Through Kennington and all the other "tons,"
 Which make us wish ourselves in town at once;—

XXI.

Through Groves, so called as being void of trees,
 (Like lucus from no light); through prospects nained
 Mount Pleasant, as containing nought to please,
 Nor much to climb; through little boxes framed
 Of bricks, to let the dust in at your ease
 With “To be let,” upon their doors proclaimed;
 Through “Rows,” most modestly called “Paradise;”
 Which Eve might quit without much sacrifice;—

XXII.

Through coaches, drays, choked turnpikes, and a whirl
 Of wheels, and roar of voices, and confusion;
 Here taverns wooing to a pint of “purl,”
 There mails fast flying off like a delusion;
 There barbers’ blocks with periwigs in curl
 In windows; here the lamplighter’s infusion
 Slowly distilled into the glimmering glass,
 (For in those days we had not got to gas):—

XXIII.

Through this and much and more, is the approach
 Of travallers to mighty Babylon:
 Whether they come by horse, or chaise, or coach,
 With slight exceptions, all the ways seem one.
 I could say more, but do not choose to encroach
 Upon the Guide-book’s privilege. The sun
 Had set some time, and night was on the ridge
 Of twilight, as the party crossed the bridge.

XXIV.

That's rather fine, the gentle sound of Thamis—
Who vindicates a moment too his stream—
Though hardly heard through multifarious “damme's.”
The lamps of Westminster's more regular gleam,
The breadth of pavement, and yon shrine where Fame is
A spectral resident—whose pallid beam
In shape of moonshine hovers o'er the pile—
Make this a sacred part of Albion's Isle.

XXV.

The Druid's groves are gone---so much the better :
Stone-Henge is not---but what the devil is it?---
But Bedlam still exists with its sage fetter,
That madmen may not bite you on a visit ;
The Bench too seats or suits full many a debtor ;
The Mansion House too (though some people quiz it)
To me appears a stiff yet grand erection ;
But then the Abbey's worth the whole collection.

XXVI.

The line of lights too up to Charing Cross,
Pall Mall, and so forth, have a coruscation
Like gold as in comparison to dross,
Matched with the Continent's illumination,
Whose cities Night by no means deigns to gloss :
The French were not yet a lamp-lighting nation,
And when they grew so---on their new-found lanthorn,
Instead of wicks, they made a wicked man turn.

XXVII.

A row of gentlemen along the streets
 Suspended, may illuminate mankind,
 As also bonfires made of country seats;
 But the old way is best for the purblind:
 The other looks like phosphorus on sheets,
 A sort of ignis-fatuus to the mind,
 Which, though 'tis certain to perplex and frighten,
 Must burn more mildly ere it can enlighten.

XXVIII.

But London's so well lit, that if Diogenes
 Could recommence to hunt his honest man,
 And found him not amidst the various progenies
 Of this enormous city's spreading spawn,
 'Twere not for want of lamps to aid his dodging his Yet undiscovered treasure. What I can,
 I've done to find the same throughout life's journey,
 But see the world is only one attorney.

XXIX.

Over the stones still rattling, up Pall Mall,
 Through crowds and carriages, but waxing thinner
 As thundered knockers broke the long-sealed spell
 Of doors 'gainst duns, and to an early dinner
 Admitted a small party as night fell,--- .
 Don Juan our young diplomatic sinner,
 Pursued his path, and drove past some hotels,
 St. James's Palace and St. James's "Hells." (2)

XXX.

They reached the hotel: forth streamed from the front door

A tide of well-clad waiters, and around
The mob stood, and as usual several score
Of those Pedestrian Paphians who abound
In decent London, when the daylight's o'er;
Commodious but immoral, they are found
Useful, like Malthus, in promoting marriage:—
But Juan now is stepping from his carriage

XXXI.

Into one of the sweetest of hotels,
Especially for foreigners—and mostly
For those whom favour or whom fortune swells,
And cannot find a bill's small items costly.
There many an envoy either dwelt or dwells,
(The den of many a diplomatic lost lie)
Until to some conspicuous square they pass,
And blazon o'er the door their names in brass.

XXXII.

Juan, whose was a delicate commission,
. Private, though publicly important, bore
No title to point out with due precision
The exact affair on which he was sent o'er
'Twas merely known that on a secret mission
A foreigner of rank had graced our shore,
Young, handsome and accomplished, who was said
(In whispers) to have turned his Sovereign's head.

XXXIII.

Some rumour also of some strange adventures
 Had gone before him, and his wars and loves ;
 And as romantic heads are pretty painters,
   And, above all, an Englishwoman's roves
 Into the excursive, breaking the indentures
   Of sober reason, wheresoe'er it moves,
 He found himself extremely in the fashion,
 Which serves our thinking people for a passion.

XXXIV.

I don't mean that they are passionless, but quite
 The contrary ; but then 'tis in the head ;
 Yet as the consequences are as bright
   As if they acted with the heart instead,
 What after all can signify the site
   Of ladies' lucubrations ? So they lead
 In safety to the place for which you start,
 What matters if the road be head or heart ?

XXXV.

Juan presented in the proper place,
 To proper placemen, every Russ credential ;
 And was received with all the due grimace,
   By those who govern in the mood potential,
 Who seeing a handsome stripling with smooth face,
   Thought (what in state affairs is most essential)
 That they as easily might do the youngster,
 As hawks may pounce upon a woodland songster.

XXXVI.

They erred, as aged men will do ; but by
And by we'll talk of that ; and if we don't,
'Twill be because our notion is not high
Of politicians and their double front,
Who live by lies, yet dare not boldly lie :—
Now what I love in women is, they won't
Or can't do otherwise than lie, but do it
So well, the very truth seems falsehood to it.

XXXVII.

And, after all, what is a lie ? 'Tis but
The truth in masquerade ; and I defy
Historians, heroes, lawyers, priests to put
A fact without some leaven of a lie.
The very shadow of true truth would shut
Up annals, revelations, poesy,
And prophecy—except it should be dated
Some years before the incidents related.

XXXVIII.

Praised be all liars and all lies ! Who now
Can tax my mild Muse with misanthropy ?
She rings the world's " Te Deum," and her brow
Blushes for those who will not :—but to sigh
Is idle ; let us like most others bow,
Kiss hands, feet, any part of majesty,
After the good example of " Green Erin,"
Whose Shamrock now seems rather worse for wearing.

XXXIX.

Don Juan was presented, and his dress
 And mien excited general admiration—
 I don't know which was most admired or less :
 One monstrous diamond drew much observation—
 Which Catherine in a moment of “ivresse”
 (In love or brandy's fervent fermentation)
 Bestowed upon him as the public learned ;
 And, to say truth, it had been fairly earned.

XL.

Besides the ministers and underlings,
 Who must be courteous to the accredited
 Diplomatists of rather wavering kings,
 Until their royal riddle's fully read,
 The very clerks,—those somewhat dirty springs
 Of office, or the House of Office, fed
 By foul corruption into streams,—even they
 Were hardly rude enough to earn their pay:

XLI.

And insolence no doubt is what they are
 Employed for, since it is their daily labour,
 In the dear offices of peace or war ;
 And should you doubt, pray ask of your next neighbour,
 When for a passport, or some other bar
 To freedom, he applied (a grief and a bore)
 If he found not this spawn of tax-born riches,
 Like lap-dogs, the least civil sons of b——s.

XLII.

But Juan was received with much “empressement :”—
 These phrases of refinement I must borrow
 From our next neighbours’ land, where, like a chessman,
 There is a move set down for joy or sorrow
 Not only in mere talking, but the press. Man
 In islands is, it seems, downright and thorough,
 More than on Continents—as if the sea
 (See Billingsgate) made even the tongue more freq.

XLIII.

And yet the British “Damme’s” rather Attic:
 Your Continental oaths are but incontinent,
 And turn on things which no Aristocratic
 Spirit would name, and therefore even I won’t anent(3)
 This subject quote ; as it would be schismatic
 In politesse, and have a sound affronting in ’t :—
 But “Damme’s” quite ethereal, though too daring—
 Platonic blasphemy, the soul of swearing.

XLIV.

For downright rudeness, ye may stay at home;
 For true or false politeness (and scarcee that
Now) you may cross the blue deep and white foam—
 The first the emblem (rarely though) of what
 You leave behind, the next of much you come
 To meet. However, ’tis no time to chat
 On general topics : Poems must confine
 Themselves to unity, like this of mine.

XLV.

In the Great World,—which being interpreted
 Meaneth the West or worst end of a city,
 And about twice two thousand people bred
 By no means to be very wise or witty,
 But to sit up while others lie in bed,
 And look down on the Universe with pity,—
 Juan, as an inveterate Patrician,
 Was well received by persons of condition.

XLVI.

He was a bachelor, which is a matter
 Of import both to Virgin and to Bride,
 The former's hymeneal hopes to flatter :
 And (should she not hold fast by love or pride)
 'Tis also of some moment to the latter :
 A rib's a thorn in a wed gallant's side,
 Requires decorum, and is apt to double
 The horrid sin—and, what's still worse, the trouble.

XLVII.

But Juan was a bachelor—of arts,
 And parts, and hearts : he danced and sung, and had
 An air as sentimental as Mozart's
 Softest of melodies ; and could be sad
 Or cheerful, without any “ flaws or starts,”
 Just at the proper time ; and though a lad,
 Had seen the world—which is a curious sight,
 And very much unlike what people write.

XLVIII.

Fair virgins blushed upon him : wedded dames
 Bloomed also in less transitory hues ;
 For both commodities dwell by the Thames,
 The painting and the painted ; youth, ceruse,
 Against his heart preferred their usual claims,
 Such as no gentleman can quite refuse ;
 Daughters admired his dress, and pious mothers
 Enquired his income, and if he had brothers.

XLIX.

The milliners who furnish “drapery Misses” (4)
 Throughout the season, upon speculation
 Of payment ere the honeymoon’s last kisses
 Have waned into a crescent’s coruscation,
 Thought such an opportunity as this is,
 Of a rich foreigner’s initiation,
 Not to be overlooked,—and gave such credit,
 That future bridegrooms swore, and sighed, and paid it.

L.

The Blues, that tender tribe, who sigh o’er sonnets,
 And with the pages of the last Review
 Line the interior of their heads or bonnets,
 Advanced in all their azure’s highest hue :
 They talked bad French of Spanish, and upon its
 Late authors asked him for a hint or two ;
 And which was softest, Russian or Castilian ?
 And whether in his travels he saw Ilion ?

LI.

Juan, who was a little superficial
And not in literature a great Drawcansir,
Examined by this learned and especial
Jury of matrons, scarce knew what to answer:
His duties warlike, loving, or official,
His steady application as a dancer,
Had kept him from the brink of Hippocrene,
Which now he found was blue instead of green.

LII.

However, he replied at hazard, with
A modest confidence and calm assurance,
Which lent his learned lucubrations pith,
And passed for arguments of good endurance.
That prodigy, Miss Araininta Smith,
(Who at sixteen translated "Hercules Furens"
Into as furious English) with her best look,
Set down his sayings in her common-place book.

LIII.

Juan knew several languages---as well
He might---and brought them up with skill in time
To save his fame with each accomplished belle,
Who still regretted that he did not rhyme.
There wanted but this requisite to swell
His qualities (with them) into sublime:
Lady Fitz-Frisky, and Miss Mævia Mannish,
Both longed extremely to be sung in Spanish.

LIV.

However, he did pretty well, and was
Admitted as an aspirant to all
The coteries, and, as in Banquo's glass,
At great assemblies or in parties small,
He saw ten thousand living authors pass,
That being about their average numeral;
Also the eighty "greatest living poets,"
As ever paltry magazine can show it's

LV.

In twice five years the "greatest living poet,"
Like to the champion in the fisty ring,
Is called on to support his claim, or shew it,
Although 'tis an imaginary thing.
Even I---albeit I'm sure I did not know it,
Nor sought of foolscap subjects to be king,---
Was reckoned, a considerable time,
The grand Napoleon of the realms of rhyme.

LVI.

But Juan was my Moscow, and Faliero
My Leipsic, and my Mont Saint Jean seems Cain :
"La Belle Alliance" of dunces down at zero,
Now that the Lion's fall'n, may rise again :
But I will fall at least as fell my hero ;
Nor reign at all, or as a monarch reign ;
Or to some lonely isle of Jailors go,
With turncoat Southey for my turnkey Lowe.

LVII.

Sir Walter reigned before me ; Moore and Campbell
Before and after ; but now grown more holy,
The Muses upon Sion's hill must ramble
With poets almost clergymen, or wholly ;

LVIII.

LIX.

Then there's my gentle Euphues, who, they say,
Sets up for being a sort of moral me ;
He'll find it rather difficult some day
To turn out both, or either, it may be.
Some persons think that Coleridge hath the sway ;
And Wordsworth has supporters, two or three ;
And that deep-mouthed Boëtian, " Savage Landor,"
Has taken for a swan rogue Southey's gander.

LX.

John Keats, who was killed off by one critique,
Just as he really promised something great,
If not intelligible,—without Greek
Contrived to talk about the Gods of late,
Much as they might have been supposed to speak.
Poor fellow! His was an untoward fate:
'Tis strange the mind, that very fiery particle, (5)
Should let itself be snuffed out by an Article.

LXI.

The list grows long of live and dead pretenders
To that which none will gain—or none will know
The conqueror at least; who, ere time renders
His last award, will have the long grass grow
Above his burnt-out brain, and sapless cinders.
If I might augur, I should rate but low
Their chances :---they're too numerous, like the thirty
Mock tyrants, when Rome's annals waxed but dirty.

LXII.

This is the literary lower Empire,
Where the Praetorian bands take up the matter ;---
A “dreadful trade,” like his who “gathers samphire,”
The insolent soldiery to soothe and flatter,
With the same feelings as you'd coax a vampire.
Now, were I once at home, and in good sat
I'd try conclusions with those Janizaries,
And show them what an intellectual war is.

LXIII.

I think I know a trick or two, would turn
Their flanks ;---but it is hardly worth my while
With such small gear to give myself concern :
Indeed I've not the necessary bile ;
My natural temper's really aught but stern,
And even my Muse's worst reproof's a smile ;
And then she drops a brief and modern curt'sey,
And glides away, assured she never hurts ye.

LXIV.

My Juan, whom I left in deadly peril
Amongst live poets and blue ladies, past
With some small profit through that field so sterile.
Being tired in time, and neither least or last
Left it before he had been treated very ill ;
And henceforth found himself more gaily classed
Amongst the higher spirits of the day,
The sun's true son, no vapour, but a ray.

LXV.

His morns he passed in business---which dissected,
Was like all business, a laborious nothing,
That leads to lassitude, the most infected
And Centaur Nessus' garb of mortal clothing,
And on our sofas makes us lie dejected,
And talk in tender horrors of our loathing
All kinds of toil, save for our country's good---
Which grows no better, though 'tis time it should.

LXVI.

His afternoons he passed in visits, luncheons,
Lounging, and boxing; and the twilight hour
In riding round those vegetable puncheons
Called "Parks," where there is neither fruit nor flower
Enough to gratify a bee's slight munchings ;
But after all it is the only "bower,"
(In Moore's phrase) where the fashionable fair
Can form a slight acquaintance with fresh air.

LXVII.

Then dress, then dinner, then awakes the world !
Then glare the lamps, then whirl the wheels, then roar
Through street and square fast flashing chariots hurled
Like harnessed meteors ; then along the floor
Chalk mimics painting ; then festoons are twirled ;
Then roll the brazen thunders of the door,
Which opens to the thousand happy few
An earthly Paradise of "Or Molu."

LXVIII.

There stands the noble Hostess, nor shall sink
With the three thousandth curt'sey ; there the waltz,
The only dance which teaches girls to think,
Makes one in love even with its very faults.
Saloon, room, hall o'erflow beyond their brink,
And long the latest of arrivals halts,
'Midst royal dukes and dames condemned to climb,
And gain an inch of staircase at a time.

LXIX.

Thrice happy he, who, after a survey
 Of the good company, can win a corner,
 A door that's in or boudoir out of the way,
 Where he may fix himself, like small "Jack Horner,"
 And let the Babel round run as it may,
 And look on as a mourner, or a scorner,
 Or an approver, or a mere spectator,
 Yawning a little as the night grows later.

LXX.

But this won't do, save by and by ; and he
 Who, like Don Juan, takes an active share,
 Must steer with care through all that glittering sea
 Of gems and plumes, and pearls and silks, to where
 He deems it is his proper place to be ;
 Dissolving in the waltz to some soft air,
 Or prouderier prancing with mercurial skill
 Where Science marshalls forth her own quadrille.

LXXI.

Or, if he dance not, but hath higher views
 Upon an heiress or his neighbour's bride,
 Let him take care that that which he pursues
 Is not at once too palpably descried.
 Full many an eager gentleman oft rues
 His haste : impatience is a blundering guide
 Amongst a people famous for reflection,
 Who like to play the fool with circumspection.

LXXII.

But, if you can contrive, get next at supper ;
 Or, if forestalled, get opposite and ogle :—
 Oh, ye ambrosial moments ! always upper
 In mind, a sort of sentimental bogle,
 Which sits for ever upon Memory's crupper,
 The ghost of vanished pleasures once in vogue ! Ill
 Can tender souls relate the rise and fall
 Of hopes and fears which shake a single ball.

LXXIII.

But these precautionary hints can touch
 Only the common run, who must pursue,
 And watch, and ward ; whose plans a word too much
 Or little overturns ; and not the few
 Or many (for the number's sometimes such)
 Whom a good mien, especially if new,
 Or fame, or name, for wit, war, sense, or nonsense,
 Permits whate'er they please, or did not long since.

LXXIV.

Our hero, as a hero, young and handsome,
 Noble, rich, celebrated, and a stranger,
 Like other slaves of course must pay his ransom
 Before he can escape from so much danger
 As will environ a conspicuous man. Some
 Talk about poetry, and “ rack and manger,”
 And ugliness, disease, as toil and trouble ;—
 I wish they knew the life of a young noble.

LXXV.

They are young, but know not youth—it is anticipated ;
 Handsome, but wasted, rich without a sous ;
 Their vigour in a thousand arms is dissipated ;
 Their cash comes from, their wealth goes to a Jew ;
 Both senates see their nightly votes participated
     Between the tyrant's and the tribunes' crew ;
 And having voted, dined, drank, gamed, and whored,
 The family vault receives another lord.

LXXVI.

“ Where is the world,” cries Young, at “ eighty ? Where
 “ The world in which a man was born ?” Alas !
 Where is the world of eight years past ? ‘Twas there—
     I look for it—’tis gone, a globe of glass !
 Cracked, shivered, vanished, scarcely gazed on ere
     A silent change dissolves the glittering mass.
 Statesmen, chiefs, orators, queens, patriots, kings,
 And dandies, all are gone on the wind’s wings.

LXXVII.

Where is Napoleon the Grand ? God knows :
 Where little Castlereagh ? The devil can tell :
 Where Grattan, Curran, Sheridan, all those
     Who bound the bar or senate in their spell ?
 Where is the unhappy Queen, with all her woes ?
     And where the daughter, whom the Isles loved well ?
 Where are those martyred saints the five per cents ?
 And where—oh where the devil are the rents !

LXXVIII.

Where's Brummel? Dished. Where's Long Pole Wellesley? Diddled.

Where's Whitbread? Romilly? Where's George the Third?

Where is his will? (That's not so soon unriddled.)

And where is "Fum" the Fourth, our "royal bird?"
Gone down it seems to Scotland, to be fiddled
Unto by Sawney's violin, we have heard:
"Caw me, caw thee"—for six months hath been hatching
This scene of royal itch and loyal scratching.

LXXIX.

Where is Lord This? And where my Lady That?

The Honourable Mistresses and Misses?

Some laid aside like an old Opera hat,

Married, unmarried, and remarried: (this is
An evolution oft performed of late).

Where are the Dublin shouts—and London hisses?
Where are the Grenvilles? Turned as usual. Where
My friends the Whigs? Exactly where they were.

LXXX.

Where are the Lady Carolines and Franceses?

Divorced or doing there anent. Ye annals
So brilliant, where the list of routs and dances is,—

Thou Morning Post, sole record of the panels
Broken in carriages, and all the phantasies
Of fashion,—say what streams now fill those channels?
Some die, some fly, some languish on the continent,
Because the times have hardly left them one tenant.

LXXXI.

Some who once set their caps at cautious Dukes,
 Have taken up at length with younger brothers :
 Some heiresses have bit at sharpers' hooks :
 Some maids have been made wives, some merely mothers ;
 Others have lost their fresh and fairy looks :
 In short, the list of alterations bothers.
 There's little strange in this, but something strange is
 The unusual quickness of these common changes.

LXXXII.

Talk not of seventy years as age ; in seven
 I have seen more changes, down from monarchs to
 The humblest individual under heaven,
 Than might suffice a moderate century through.
 I knew that nought was lasting, but now even
 Change grows too changeable, without being new :
 Nought's permanent among the human race,
 Except the Whigs not getting into place.

LXXXIII.

I have seen Napoleon, who seemed quite a Jupiter,
 Shrink to a Saturn. I have seen a Duke
 (No matter which) turn politician stupider,
 If that can well be, than his wooden look.
 But it is time that I should hoist my "blue Peter,"
 And sail for a new theme ;—I have seen—and shook
 To see it—the King hissed, and then carest !
 But don't pretend to settle which was best.

LXXXIV.

I have seen the landholders without a rap—
I have seen Johanna Southeote—I have seen
The House of Commons turned to a tax-trap—
I have seen that sad affair of the late Queen—
I have seen crowns worn instead of a fool's-cap—
I have seen a Congress doing all that's mean—
I have seen some nations like o'erloaded asses
Kick off their burthens—meaning the high classes.

LXXXV.

I have seen small poets, and great prosers, and
Interminable—not eternal—speakers—
I have seen the funds at war with house and land—
I've seen the country gentlemen turn squeakers—
I've seen the people ridden o'er like sand
By slaves on horseback—I have seen malt liquors
Exchanged for “thin potations” by John Bull---
I have seen John half detect himself a fool---

LXXXVI.

But “Carpe diem,” Juan, “Carpe, carpe !”
To-morrow sees another race as gay
And transient, and devoured by the same harpy.
“Life's a poor player,”—then “play out the play,
“Ye villains !” and above all keep a sharp eye
Much less on what you do than what you say :
Be hypocritical, be cautious, be
Not what you seem, but always what you see.

LXXXVII.

But how shall I relate in other Cantos
 Of what befell our hero, in the land
 Which 'tis the common cry and lie to vaunt as
 A moral country? But I hold my hand---
 For I disdain to write an Atalantis;
 But 'tis as well at once to understand,
 You are not a moral people, and you know it
 Without the aid of too sincere a poet.

LXXXVIII.

What Juan saw and underwent, shall be
 My topic, with of course the due restriction
 Which is required by proper courtesy;
 And recollect the work is only fiction,
 And that I sing of neither mine nor me,
 Though every scribe, in some slight turn of diction, I
 Will hint allusions never meant. Ne'er doubt
This---when I speak, I don't hint but speak out.

LXXXIX.

Whether he married with the third or fourth
 Offspring of some sage husband-hunting Countess,
 Or whether with some virgin of more worth
 (I mean in Fortune's matrimonial bounties)
 He took to regularly peopling earth,
 Of which your lawful awful wedlock fount is,)
 Or whether he was taken in for damages,
 For being too excursive in his homages,---

XC.

Is yet within the unread events of time.

Thus far, go forth, thou lay, which I will back
Against the same given quantity of rhyme,

For being as much the subject of attack
As ever yet was any work sublime,
By those who love to say that white is black.
So much the better!---I may stand alone,
But would not change my free thoughts for a throne.

NOTES TO CANTO XI.

---

Note 1, page 163, stanza xix.

*Who on a lark with black-eyed Sal (his blowing)
So prime, so swell, so nutty, and so knowing?*

The advance of science and of language has rendered it unnecessary to translate the above good and true English, spoken in its original purity by the select mobility and their patrons. The following is a stanza of a song which was very popular, at least in my early days :—

“ On the high toby-spice flash the muzzle,
“ In spite of each gallows old scout ;
“ If you at the spellken can’t hustle,
“ You’ll be hobbled in making a clout,

“ Then your Blowing will wax gallows haughty,
“ When she hears of your scaly mistake,
“ She’ll surely turn snitch for the forty,
“ That her Jack may be regular weight.”

If there be any Gemman so ignorant as to require a traduction, I refer him to my old friend and corporeal pastor and master, John Jackson, Esq., Professor of Pugilism ; who I trust still retains the strength and symmetry of his model of a form, together with his good humour, and athletic as well as mental accomplishments.

Note 2, page 166, stanza xxix.

St. James's Palace and St. James's Hells.

"Hells," gaming-houses. What their number may now be in this life, I know not. Before I was of age I knew them pretty accurately, both "gold" and "silver." I was once nearly called out by an acquaintance because when he asked me where I thought that his soul would be found hereafter, I answered, "In Silver Hell."

Note 3, page 171, stanza xliii.

And therefore even I won't anent

This subject quote.

"Anent" was a Scotch phrase meaning "concerning"—"with regard to." It has been made English by the Scotch Novels; and as the Frenchman said---"If it be not, ought to be English."

Note 4, page 173, stanza lxix.

The milliners who furnish "drapery Misses."

"Drapery Misses."---This term is probably any thing now but a mystery. It was however almost so to me when I first returned from the East in 1811---1812. It means a pretty, a highborn, a fashionable young female, well instructed by her friends, and furnished by her milliner with a wardrobe upon credit, to be repaid, when married, by the husband. The riddle was first read to me by a young and pretty heiress, on my praising the "drapery" of an "untouched" but "pretty virginities" (like Mrs. Anne Page) of the then day, which has now been some years yesterday :---she assured me that the thing was common in London; and as her own thousands, and blooming looks, and rich simplicity of array, put any suspicion in her own case out of the question, I confess I gave some credit to the allegation. If necessary, authorities might be cited, in which case I could quote both "drapery" and the wearers. Let us hope, however, that it is now obsolete.

Note 5, page 177, stanza ix.

*'Tis strange the mind, that very fiery particle,
Should let itself be snuffed out by an Article.*

"Divine Particulam Auræ."

CANTO XII.

DON JUAN.

---

CANTO XII.

---

I.

Of all the barbarous Middle Ages, that
Which is the most barbarous is the middle age
Of man ; it is—I really scarce know what ;
But when we hover between fool and sage,
And don't know justly what we would be,—
A period something like a printed page,
Black letter upon foolscap, while our hair
Grows grizzled, and we are not what we were,—

II.

Too old for youth,—too young, at thirty-five,
To herd with boys, or hoard with good threescore,—
I wonder people should be left alive ;
But since they are, that epoch is a bore :
Love lingers still, although 'twere late to live ;
And as for other love, the illusion's o'er ;
And money, that most pure imagination,
Gleams only through the dawn of its creation

III.

Oh Gold! Why call we misers miserable?
 Theirs is the pleasure that can never pall ;
 Theirs is the best bower-anchor, the chain cable
 Which holds fast other pleasures great and small.
 Ye who but see the saving man at table,
 And scorn his temperate board, as none at all,
 And wonder how the wealthy can be sparing,
 Know not what visions spring from each cheese-paring.

IV.

Love or lust makes man sick, and wine much sicker ;
 Ambition rends, and gaming gains a loss ;
 But making money, slowly first, then quicker,
 And adding still a little through each cross
 (Which will come over things) beats love or liquor,
 The gamester's counter, or the statesman's dross.
 Oh Gold! I still prefer thee unto paper,
 Which makes bank credit like a bark of vapour.

V.

Who hold the balance of the world? Who reign
 O'er Congress, whether royalist or liberal?
 Who rouse the shirtless patriots of Spain?
 (That make old Europe's journals squeak and gibber all.)
 Who keep the world, both old and new, in pain
 Or pleasure? Who make politics run glibber all?
 The shade of Bonaparte's noble daring?—
 Jew Rothschild, and his fellow Christian Baring.

VI.

Those, and the truly liberal Lafitte,
Are the true lords of Europe. Every lean
Is not a merely speculative hit,
But seats a nation or upsets a throne.
Republics also get involved a bit,
Columbia's stock hath holders not unknown
On 'Change ; and even thy silver soil, Peru,
Must get itself discounted by a Jew.

VII.

Why call the miser miserable ? as
I said before : the frugal life is his,
Which in a saint or cynic ever was
The theme of praise: a hermit would not miss
Canonization for the self-same cause,
And wherefore blame gannt Wealth's austerities ?
Because, you'll say, nought calls for such a trial ;—
Then there's more merit in his self-denial.

VIII.

He is your only poet ;—passion, pure
And sparkling on from heap to heap, displays
Possess'd, the ore, of which mere hopes allure
Nations athwart the deep : the golden rays
Flash up in ingots from the mine obscure ;
On him the diamond pours its brilliant blaze,
While the mild emerald's beam shades down the dye:
Of other stones, to soothe the miser's eyes.

IX.

The lands on either side are his : the ship
 From Ceylon, Inde, or far Cathay, unloads
 For him the fragrant producee of each trip ;
 Beneath his cars of Ceres groan the roads,
 And the vine blushes like Aurora's lip ;
 His very cellars might be king's abodes ;
 While he, despising every sensual call,
 Commands—the intellectual lord of all.

X.

Perhaps he hath great projects in his mind,
 To build a college or to found a race,
 A hospital, a church,—and leave behind
 Some dome surmounted by his meagre face :
 Perhaps he fain would liberate mankind
 Even with the very ore which makes them base :
 Perhaps he would be wealthiest of his nation,
 Or revel in the joys of calculation.

XI.

But whether all, or each, or none of these
 May be the hoarder's principle of action,
 The fool will call such mania a disease :—
 What is his own?—Go look at each transaction,
 Wars, revels, loves—do these bring men more ease
 Than the mere plodding through each “vulgar fraction?”
 Or do they benefit mankind? Lean Miser!
 Let spendthrift's heirs enquire of yours---whos' wiser?

XII.

How beauteous are rouleaus ! how charming chests,
 Containing ingots, bags of dollars, coins
 (Not of old Victors, all whose heads and crests
 Weigh not the thin ore where their visage shines,
 But) of fine unelipt gold, where dully rests
 Some likeness, which the glittering cirque confines,
 Of modern, reigning, sterling, stupid stamp :—
 Yes ! ready money is Aladdin's lamp.

XIII.

“Love rules the camp, the court, the grove,”—“for Love
 “Is Heaven, and Heaven is Love :—so sings the bard ;
 Which it were rather difficult to prove,
 (A thing with poetry in general hard.)
 Perhaps there may be something in “the grove,”
 At least it rhymes to “Love ;” But I’m prepared
 To doubt (no less than landlords of their rental)
 If “courts” and “camps” be quite so sentimental.

XIV.

But if Love don’t, Cash does, and Cash alone :
 Cash rules the grove, and fells it too besides ;
 Without cash, camps were thin, and courts were none ;
 Without cash, Malthus tells you “take no brides.”
 So Cash rules Love the ruler, on his own
 High ground, as Virgin Cynthia sways the tides ;
 And as for “Heaven being Love,” why not say honey
 Is wax ? Heaven is not Love, ‘tis Matrimony.

XV.

Is not all love prohibited whatever,
 Excepting marriage? which is love no doubt
 After a sort; but somehow people never
 With the same thought the two words have helped out:
 Love may exist with marriage, and should ever,
 And marriage also may exist without;
 But love sans banns is both a sin and shame,
 And ought to go by quite another name.

XVI.

Now, if the "court" and "camp" and "grove" be not
 Recruited all with constant married men,
 Who never coveted their neighbour's lot,
 I say that line's a lapsus of the pen;—
 Strange too in my "buon camerado" Scott,
 So celebrated for his morals, when
 My Jeffrey held him up as an example
 To me;—of which these morals are a sample.

XVII.

Well, if I don't succeed, I have succeeded,
 And that's enough; succeeded in my youth,
 The only time when much success is needed:
 And my success produced what I in sooth
 Cared most about: it need not now be pleaded—
 Whate'er it was, 'twas mine: I've paid, in truth,
 Of late, the penalty of such success,
 But have not learned to wish it any less.

XVIII.

That suit in Chancery,---which some persons plead
 In an appeal to the unborn, whom they,
 In the faith of their procreative creed,
 Baptize Posterity, or future clay,---
 To me seems but a dubious kind of reed
 To lean on for support in any way ;
 Since odds are that Posterity will know
 No more of them, than they of her, I trow.

XIX.

Why I'm Posterity---and so are you ;
 And whom do we remember ? Not a hundred.
 Were every memory written down all true,
 The tenth or twentieth name would be but blundered :
 Even Plutarch's lives have but picked out a few,
 And 'gainst those few your annalists have thundered ;
 And Mitford in the nineteenth century
 Gives, with Greek truth, the good old Greek the lie. (1)

XX.

Good people all, of every degree,
 Ye gentle readers and ungentle writers,
 In this twelfth Canto 'tis my wish to be
 As serious as if I had for inditers
 Malthus and Wilberforce :---the last set free
 The Negroes, and is worth a million fighters ;
 While Wellington has but enslaved the whites,
 And Malthus does the thing 'gainst which he writes.

XXI.

I'm serious—so are all men upon paper;
 And why should I not form my speculation,
 And hold up to the sun my little taper!
 Mankind just now seem wrapt in meditation
 On Constitutions and Steam-boats of vapour;
 While sages write against all procreation,
 Unless a man can calculate his means
 Of feeding brats the moment his wife weans.

XXII.

That's noble! That's romantic! For my part,
 I think that "Philo-genitiveness" is—
 (Now here's a word quite after my own heart,
 Though there's a shorter a good deal than this.
 If that politeness set it not apart,
 But I'm resolved to say nought that's amiss—
 I say, methinks that "Philo-genitiveness"
 Might meet from men a little more forgiveness.

XXIII.

And now to business. Oh, my gentle Juan!
 Thou art in London—in that pleasant place
 Where every kind of mischief's daily brewing
 Which can await warm youth in its wild race.
 'Tis true that thy career is not a new one;
 Thou art no novice in the headlong chase
 Of early life; but this is a new land
 Which foreigners can never understand.

XXIV.

What with a small diversity of climate,
Of hot or cold, mercurial or sedate,
I could send forth my mandate like a primate
Upon the rest of Europe's social state ;
But thou art the most difficult to rhyme at,
Great Britain, which the Muse may penetrate :
All countries have their " Lions," but in thee
There is but one superb menagerie.

XXV.

But I am sick of politics. Begin
" Paulo Majora." Juan undecided
Amongst the paths of being " taken in,"
Above the ice had like a skaiter glided :
When tired of play, he flirted without sin
With some of those fair creatures who have prided
Themselves on innocent tantalization,
And hate all vice except its reputation.

XXVI.

But these are few, and in the end they make
Some devilish escapade or stir, which shows
That even the purest people may mistake
Their way through virtue's primrose paths of snows ;
And then men stare, as if a new ass spake
To Balaam, and from tongue to ear o'erflows
Quick silver Small Talk, ending (if you note it)
With the kind world's Amen !—“ Who would have thought it ? ”

XXVII

The little Leila, with her orient eyes
 And taciturn Asiatic disposition,
 (Which saw all Western things with small surprise,
   To the surprise of people of condition,
 Who think that novelties are butterflies
   To be pursued as food for inanition)
 Her charming figure and romantic history
 Became a kind of fashionable mystery.

XXVIII.

The women much divided—as is usual
 Amongst the sex in little things or great.
 Think not, fair creatures, that I mean to abuse you all—
   I have always liked you better than I state :
 Since I've grown moral, still I must accuse you all
   Of being apt to talk at a great rate ;
 And now there was a general sensation
   Amongst you, about Leila's education.

XXIX.

In one point only were you settled—and
 You had reason ;—'twas that a young Child of Grace,
 As beautiful as her own native land,
   And far away, the last bud of her race,
 Howe'er our friend Don Juan might command
   Himself for five, four, three, or two years' space,
 Would be much better taught beneath the eye
   Of Peeresses whose follies had run dry.

XXX.

So first there was a generous emulation,
And then there was a general competition
To undertake the orphan's education.
As Juan was a person of condition,
It had been an affront on this occasion
To talk of a subscription or petition ;
But sixteen dowagers, ten unwed she sages,
Whose tale belongs to " Hallam's Middle Ages,"

XXXI.

And one or two sad, separate wives, without
A fruit to bloom upon their withering boughs,
Begged to bring up the little girl, and "out,"—
For that's the phrase that settles all things now,
Meaning a virgin's first blush at a rout,
And all her points as thorough-bred to show :
And I assure you that like virgin honey
Tastes their first season (mostly if they have money).

XXXII.

How all the needy honourable misters,
Each out-at-elbow peer, or desperate dandy,
The watchful mothers and the careful sisters,
Who, by the bye, when clever, are more handy
At making matches, where " tis gold that glisters,"
Than their he relatives) like flies o'er candy
Buzz round "the Fortune" with their busy battery,
To turn her head with waltzing and with flattery !

XXXIII.

Each aunt, each cousin hath her speculation ;
 Nay, married dames will now and then discover
 Such pure disinterestedness of passion,
 I've known them court an heiress for their lover.
 "Tantæne!" Such the virtues of high station !
 Even in the hopeful Isle, whose outlet's "Dover :"
 While the poor rich wretch, object of these cares,
 Has cause to wish her sire had had male heirs.

XXXIV.

Some are soon bagged, but some reject three dozen.
 'Tis fine to see them scattering refusals
 And wild dismay o'er every angry cousin
 (Friends of the party) who begin accusals,
 Such as—"Unless Miss (Blank) meant to have chosen
 "Poor Frederick, why did she accord perusals
 "To his billets? Why waltz with him? Why, I pray,
 "Look yes last night and yet say no to-day?

XXXV.

"Why?—Why?—Besides, Fred. really was attached;
 " 'Twas not her fortune—he has enough without :
 "The time will come she'll wish that she had snatched
 ". "So good an opportunity, no doubt :—
 "But the old marchioness some plan has hatched,
 "As I'll tell Aurea at to-morrow's rout :
 "And after all poor Frederick may do better—
 "Pray did you see her answer to his letter?"

XXXVI.

Smart uniforms and sparkling coronets
Are spurned in turn, until her turn arrives,
After male loss of time, and hearts, and bets
Upon the sweepstakes for substantial wives :
And when at last the pretty creature gets
Some gentleman who fights, or writes, or drives,
It soothes the awkward squad of the rejected,
To find how very badly she selected.

XXXVII.

For sometimes they accept some long pursuer,
Worn out with importunity ; or fall
(But here perhaps the instances are fewer)
To the lot of him who scarce pursued at all.
A hazy widower turned of forty's sure (2)
(If 'tis not vain examples to recall)
To draw a high prize : now, how'er he got her, I
See nought more strange in this than t'other lottery.

XXXVIII.

I, for my part—(one “modern instance” more,
“True 'tis a pity, pity 'tis, 'tis true”)
Was chosen from out an amatory score,
Albeit my years were less discreet than few ;
But though I also had reformed before
Those became one who soon were to be two,
I'll not gainsay the generous public's voice,
That the young lady made a monstrous choice.

XXXIX.

Oh, pardon me digression—or at least
 Peruse ! 'Tis always with a moral end
 That I dissent, like Grace before a feast :
 For like an aged aunt, or tiresome friend,
 A rigid guardian, or a zealous priest,
 My Muse by exhortation means to mend
 All people, at all times and in most places ;
 Which puts my Pegasus to these grave paces.

XL.

But now I'm going to be immoral ; now
 I mean to show things really as they are
 Not as they ought to be : for I avow,
 That till we see what's what in fact, we're far
 From much improvement with that virtuous plough
 Which skims the surface, leaving scarce a scar
 Upon the black loam long manured by vice,
 Only to keep its corn at the old price.

XLI.

But first of little Leila we'll dispose ;
 For like a day-dawn she was young and pure,
 Or, like the old comparison of snows,
 Which are more pure than pleasant to be sure.
 Like many people every body knows,
 Don Juan was delighted to secure
 A goodly guardian for his infant charge,
 Who might not profit much by being at large.

XLII.

Besides, he had found out that he was no tutor :
(I wish that others would find out the same)
And rather wished in such things to stand neuter,
For silly wards will bring their guardians blame :
So when he saw each ancient dame a suitor
To make his little wild Asiatic tame,
Consulting "the Society for Vice
"Suppression," Lady Pinchbeck was his choice.

XLIII.

Olden she was—but had been very young
Virtuous she was—and had been, I believe :
Although the world has such an evil tongue
That—but my chaster ear will not receive
An echo of a syllable that's wrong :
In fact, there's nothing makes me so much grieve
As that abominable tittle tattle,
Which is the cud eschewed by human cattle.

XLIV.

Moreover I've remarked (and I was once
A slight observer in a modest way)
And so may every one except a dunce,
That ladies in their youth a little gay,
Besides their knowledge of the world, and sense
Of the sad consequence of going astray,
Are wiser in their warnings 'gainst the woe
Which the mere passionless can never know.

XLV.

While the harsh Prude indemnifies her virtue
 By railing at the unknown and envied passion,
 Seeking far less to save you than to hurt you,
 Or what's still worse, to put you out of fashion,—
 The kinder veteran with calm words will court you
 Entreating you to pause before you dash on ;
 Expounding and illustrating the riddle
 If Epic Love's beginning, end, and middle.

XLVI.

Now whether it be thus, or that they are stricter,
 As better knowing why they should be so,
 I think you'll find from many a family picture,
 That daughters of such mothers as may know
 The world by experience rather than by lecture,
 Turn out much better for the Smithfield show
 Of vestals brought into the marriage mart,
 Than those bred up by prudes without a heart.

XLVII.

I said that Lady Pinchbeck had been talked about—
 As who has not, if female, young, and pretty ?
 But now no more the ghost of scandal stalked about;
 She merely was deemed amiable and witty,
 And several of her best bon-mots were hawked about ;
 Then she was given to charity and pity,
 And passed (at least the latter years of life)
 For being a most exemplary wife.

XLVIII.

High in high circles, gentle in her own,
She was the mild reprobate of the young
Whenever---which means every day---they'd shown
An awkward inclination to go wrong.
The quantity of good she did's unknown,
Or at the least would lengthen out my song:---
In brief, the little orphan of the East
Had raised an interest in her which encreased.

XLIX.

Juan too was a sort of favourite with her,
Because she thought him a good heart at bottom,
A little spoiled, but not so altogether;
Which was a wonder, if you think who got him,
And how he had been tossed, he scarce knew whither:
Though this might ruin others, it did not him,
At least entirely, for he had seen too many Changes in youth, to be surprised at any.

L.

And these vicissitudes tell best in youth;
For when they happen at a riper age,
People are apt to blame the Fates, forsooth,
And wonder providence is not more sage.
Adversity is the first path to truth:
He who hath proved war, storm, or woman's rage,
Whether his winters be eighteen or eighty,
Hath won the experience which is deemed so weighty.

LI.

How far it profits is another matter.—
 Our hero gladly saw his little charge
 Safe with a lady, whose last grown-up daughter
 Being long married, and thus set at large,
 Had left all the accomplishments she taught her
 To be transmitted, like the Lord Mayor's barge,
 To the next comer: or—as it will tell
 More Muse-like—say like Cytherea's shell.

LII.

I call such things transmission; for there is
 A floating balance of accomplishment
 Which forms a pedigree from Miss to Miss,
 According as their minds or backs are bent.
 Some waltz; some draw; some fathom the abyss
 Of metaphysics; others are content
 With music; the most moderate shine as wits,
 While others have a genius turned for fits.

LIII.

But whether fits, or wits, or harpsichords,
 Theology, Fine Arts, or finer stays
 May be the baits for gentlemen or lords,
 With regular descent, in these our days
 The last year to the new transfers its hoards;
 New vestals claim men's eyes with the same praise
 Of “elegant” et cetera, in fresh batches—
 All matchless creatures and yet bent on matches.

LIV.

But now I will begin my poem.—'Tis
Perhaps a little strange, if not quite new,
That from the first of Cantos up to this
I've not begun what we have to go through.
These first twelve books are merely flourishes.
Preludios, trying just a string or two
Upon my lyre, or making the pegs sure ;
And when so, you shall have the overture.

LV.

My Muses do not care a pinch of rosin
About what's called success, or not succeeding :
Such thoughts are quite below the strain! they have chosen
'Tis a "great moral lesson" they are reading.
I thought, at setting off, about two dozen
Cantos would do ; but at Apollo's pleading,
If that my Pegasus should not be founded,
I think to canter gently through a hundred.

LVI.

Don Juan saw that microcosm on stilts,
Yclept the Great World ; for it is the least,
Although the highest ; but as swords have hilts,
By which their power of mischief is encreased,
When man in battle or in quarrel tilts,
Thus the low world, north, south, or west, or east,
Must still obey the high—which is their handle,
Their moon, their sun, their gas, their farthing candle.

LVII.

He had many friends who had many wives, and was
 Well looked upon by both, to that extent
 Of friendship which you may accept or pass,
 It does nor good nor harm ; being merely meant
 To keep the wheels going of the higher class,
 And draw them nightly when a ticket's sent :
 And what with masquerades, and fêtes, and balls,
 For the first season such a life scarce palls.

LVIII.

A young unmarried man, with a good name
 And fortune, has an awkward part to play ;
 For good society is but a game,
 “The royal game of Goose,” as I may say,
 Where every body has some separate aim,
 An end to answer, or a plan to lay—
 The single ladies wishing to be double,
 The married ones to save the virgins trouble.

LIX.

I don't mean this as general, but particular
 Examples may be found of such pursuits :
 Though several also keep their perpendicular
 Like poplars, with good principles for roots ;
 Yet many have a method more reticular—
 “ Fishers for men,” like Sirens with soft lutes.
 For talk six times with the same single lady,
 And you may get the wedding dresses ready .

LX.

Perhaps you'll have a letter from the mother,
To say her daughter's feelings are trepanned ;
Perhaps you'll have a visit from the brother,
All strut and stays and whiskers, to demand
What " your intentions are ?"—One way or other
It seems the virgin's heart expects your hand ;
And between pity for her case and yours,
You'll add to Matrimony's list of cures.

LXI.

I've known a dozen weddings made even thus,
And some of them high names : I have also known
Young men who—though they hated to discuss
Pretensions which they never dreamed to have shown—
Yet neither frightened by a female fuss,
Nor by mustachios moved, were let alone,
And lived, as did the broken-hearted fair,
In happier plight than if they formed a pair.

LXII.

There's also nightly, to the uninitiated,
A peril—not indeed like love or marriage,
But not the less for this to be depreciated :
It is—I meant and mean not to disparage
The show of virtue even in the vitiated—
It adds an outward grace unto their carriage
But to denounce the amphibious sort of harlot,
“ Couleur de rose,” who's neither white nor scarlet.

LXIII.

Such is your cold coquette, who can't say "No,"
 And won't say "Yes," and keeps you on and off-ing,
 On a lee shore, till it begins to blow—
 Then sees your heart wrecked with an inward scoffing.
 This works a world of sentimental woe,
 And sends new Werters yearly to their coffin;
 But yet is merely innocent flirtation,
 Not quite adultery, but adulteration.

LXIV.

"Ye Gods, I grow a talker!" Let us prate.
 The next of perils, though I place it sternest,
 Is when, without regard to "Church or State,"
 A wife makes or takes love in upright earnest.
 Abroad, such things decide few women's fate—
 (Such, early traveller! is the truth thou learnest)—
 But in Old England when a young bride errs
 Poor thing! Eve's was a trifling case to her's.

LXV.

For 'tis a low, newspaper, humdrum, law-suit
 Country, where a young couple of the same ages
 Can't form a friendship but the world o'erawes it.
 Then there's the vulgar trick of those d—d damages!
 A verdict---grievous foe to those who cause it!—
 Forms a sad climax to romantic homages:
 Besides those soothing speeches of the pleaders,
 And evidences which regale all readers!

LXVI.

But they who blunder thus are raw beginners ;
A little genial sprinkling of hypocrisy
Has saved the fame of thousand splendid sinners,
The loveliest Oligarchs of our Gynecocracy ;
You may see such at all the balls and dinners,
Among the proudest of our Aristocracy,
So gentle, charming, charitable, chaste---
And all by having tact as well as taste.

LXVII.

Juan, who did not stand in the predicament
Of a mere novice, had one safeguard more ;
For he was sick---no, 'twas not the word sick I meant---
But he had seen so much good love before,
That he was not in heart so very weak ;---I meant
But thus much, and no sneer against the shore
Of white cliffs, white necks, blue eyes, bluer stockings,
Tithes, taxes, duns, and doors with double knockings.

LXVIII.

But coming young from lands and scenes romantic,
Where lives not law-suits must be risked for passion,
And Passion's self must have a spice of frantie,
Into a country where 'tis half a fashion,
Seemed to him half commercial, half pedantic,
Howe'er he might esteem this moral nation ;
Besides (alas ! his taste—forgive and pity !)
At first he did not think the women pretty.

LXIX.

I say at first—for he found out at last,
 But by degrees, that they were fairer far
 Than the more glowing dames whose lot is cast
 Beneath the influence of the Eastern star.
 A further proof we should not judge in haste ;
 Yet inexperience could not be his bar
 To taste :—the truth is, if men would confess,
 That novelties please less than they impress.

LXX.

Though travelled, I have never had the luck to Trace up those shuffling negroes, Nile or Niger,
 To that impracticable place Timbuctoo,
 Where Geography finds no one to oblige her
 With such a chart as may be safely stuck to—
 For Europe ploughs in Afric like “bos piger;”
 But if I had been at Timbuctoo, there
 No doubt I should be told that black is fair.

LXXI.

It is. I will not swear that black is white ;
 But I suspect in fact that white is black,
 And the whole matter rests upon eye-sight.
 Ask a blind man, the best judge. You’ll attack
 Perhaps this new position—but I’m right ;
 Or if I’m wrong, I’ll not be ta’en aback :—
 He hath no morn nor night, but all is dark
 Within ; and what sees’t thou ? A dubious spark.

LXXII.

But I'm relapsing into metaphysics,
That labyrinth, whose clue is of the same
Construction as your cures for hectic phthisics,
Those bright moths fluttering round a dying flame :
And this reflection brings me to plain physics,
And to the beauties of a foreign daine,
Compared with those of our pure pearls of price,
Those Polar summers, all sun, and some iee.

LXXIII.

Or say they are like virtuous mermaids, whose
Beginnings are fair faces, ends mere fishes ;
Not that there's not a quantity of those
Who have a due respect for their own wishes.
Like Russians rushing from hot baths to snows (3)
Are they, at bottom virtuous even when vicious :
They warm into a serape, but keep of course,
As a reserve, a plunge into remorse.

LXXIV.

But this has nought to do with their outsides.
I said that Juan did not think them pretty
At the first blush ; for a fair Briton hides
Half her attractions—probably from pity—
And rather calmly into the heart glides,
Than storms it as a foe would take a city ;
But once there (if you doubt this, prithee try)
She keeps it for you like a true ally.

LXXV.

She cannot step as does an Arab barb,
 Or Andalusian girl from mass returning,
 Nor wear as gracefully as Gauls her garb,
 Nor in her eye Ausonia's glance is burning ;
 Her voice, though sweet, is not so fit to warble
 Those bravuras (which I still am learning
 To like, though I have been seven years in Italy,
 And have, or had, an ear that served me prettily ;)—

LXXVI.

She cannot do these things, nor one or two
 Others, in that off-hand and dashing style
 Which takes so much—to give the devil his due,—
 Nor is she quite so ready with her smile,
 Nor settles all things in one interview,
 (A thing approved as saving time and toil ;)—
 But though the soil may give you time and trouble,
 Well cultivated, it will render double.

LXXVII.

And if in fact she takes to a “grande passion,”
 It is a very serious thing indeed :
 Nine times in ten 'tis but caprice or fashion,
 Coquetry, or a wish to take the lead,
 The pride of a mere child with a new sash on,
 Or wish to make a rival's bosom bleed ;
 But the tenth instance will be a Tornado,
 For there's no saying what they will or may do.

LXXVIII.

The reason's obvious : if there's an eclât,
 They lose their caste at once, as do the Parias ;
 And when the delicacies of the law -
 Have filled their papers with their comments various,
 Society, that china without flaw,
 (The hypocrite !) will banish them like Marius,
 To sit amidst the ruins of their guilt :
 For Fame's a Carthage not so soon rebuilt.

LXXIX.

Perhaps this is as it should be ;---it is
 A comment on the Gospel's " Sin no more,
 And be thy sins forgiven :"---but upon this
 I leave the saints to settle their own score.
 Abroad, though doubtless they do much amiss,
 An erring woman finds an opener door
 For her return to virtue—as they call
 That Lady who should be at home to all.

LXXX.

For me, I leave the matter where I find it,
 Knowing that such uneasy Virtue leads
 People some ten times less in fact to mind it,
 And care but for discoveries and not deeds.
 And as for Chastity, you'll never bind it
 By all the laws the strictest lawyer pleads,
 But aggravate the crime you have not prevented,
 By rendering desperate those who had else repented.

LXXXI.

But Juan was no casuist, nor had pondered
 Upon the moral lessons of mankind ;
 Besides, he had not seen of several hundred
 A lady altogether to his mind.
 A little "blasé"—'tis not to be wondered
 At, that his heart had got a tougher rind :
 And though not vainer from his past success,
 No doubt his sensibilities were less.

LXXXII.

He also had been busy seeing sights—
 — The Parliament and all the other houses ;
 Had sate beneath the gallery at nights,
 To hear debates whose thunder roused (not rouses)
 The world to gaze upon those northern lights (4)
 Which flashed as far as where the musk-bull browses :
 He had also stood at times behind the throne
 But Grey was not arrived, and Chatham gone.

LXXXIII.

He saw however at the closing session,
 That noble sight, when really free the nation,
 A king in constitutional possession
 Of such a throne as is the proudest station,
 Though despots know it not—till the progression
 Of freedom shall complete their education.
 'Tis not mere splendour makes the show august
 To eye or heart—it is the people's trust.

LXXXIV.

There too he saw (whate'er he may be now)
A Prince, the prince of princes, at the time
With fascination in his very bow,
And full of promise, as the spring of prime.
Though royalty was written on his brow,
He had then the grace too, rare in every clime,
Of being, without alloy of fop or beau,
A finished gentleman from top to toe.

LXXXV.

And Juan was received, as hath been said,
Into the best society : and there
Occurred what often happens, I'm afraid,
However disciplined and debonair :—
The talent and good humour he displayed,
Besides the marked distinction of his air,
Exposed him as was natural, to temptation,
Even though himself avoided the occasion.

LXXXVI.

But what, and where, with whom, and when, and why,
Is not to be put hastily together ;
And as my object is morality
(Whatever people say) I don't know whether
I'll leave a single reader's eyelid dry,
But harrow up his feelings till they wither,
And hew out a huge monument of pathos,
As Philip's son proposed to do with Athos. (5)

LXXXVII.

Here the twelfth Canto of our introduction
 Ends. When the body of the book's begun,
 You'll find it of a different construction
 From what some people say 'twill be when done :
 The plan at present's simply in concoction.
 I can't oblige you, reader ! to read on ;
 That's your affair, not mine : a real spirit
 Should neither court neglect nor dread to bear it.

LXXXVIII.

And if my thunderbolt not always rattles,
 Remember, reader ! you have had before
 The worst of tempests and the best of battles
 That e'er were brewed from elements or gore,
 Besides the most sublime of—Heaven knows what else—
 An Usurer could scarce expect much more—
 But my best Canto, save one on Astronomy,
 Will turn upon “ Political Economy.”

LXXXIX.

That is your present theme for popularity :
 Now that the Public Hedge hath scarce a stake,
 It grows an act of patriotic charity
 To show the people the best way to break.
My plan (but I, if but for singularity, Reserve it) will be very sure to take.
 Mean time read all the National Debt-sinkers,
 And tell me what you think of your great thinkers.

NOTES TO CANTO XII.

---

Note 1, page 201, stanza xix.

Gives, with Greek truth, the good old Greek the lie.

See Mitford's Greece. "Greciæ Verax." His great pleasure consists in praising tyrants, abusing Plutarch, spelling oddly, and writing quaintly ; and what is strange after all, his is the best Modern History of Greece in any language, and he is perhaps the best of all modern historians whatsoever. Having named his sins, it is but fair to state his virtues—learning, labour, research, wrath and partiality. I call the latter virtues in a writer, because they make him write in earnest.

Note 2, page 207, stanza xxxvii.

A hazy widower turned of forty's sure.

This line may puzzle the commentators more than the present generation.

Note 3, page 219, stanza lxxiii.

Like Russians rushing from hot baths to snows.

The Russians, as is well known, run out from their hot baths to plunge into the Neva ; a pleasant practical antithesis, which it seems does them no harm.

Note 4, page 222, stanza lxxxiii.

The world to gaze upon those northern lights.

For a description and print of this inhabitant of the Polar

Region and native country of the Auroræ Boreales, see Parry's Voyage in search of the North-West Passage.

Note 5, page 223, stanza lxxx.

As Philip's son proposed to do with Athos.

A sculptor projected to hew Mount Athos into a statue of Alexander, with a city in one hand, and I believe a river in his pocket, with various other similar devices. But Alexander's gone, and Athos remains, I trust ere long to look over a nation of free men.

DON JUAN.

CANTO XIII.

---

I.

I now mean to be serious ;---it is time,
Since laughter now-a days is deemed too serious.
A jest at Vice by Virtue's called a crime,
And critically held as deleterious :
Besides, the sad's a source of the sublime,
Although when long a little apt to weary us ;
And therefore shall my lay soar high and solemn
As an old temple dwindled to a column.

II.

The Lady Adeline Amundeville---
('Tis an old Norman name, and to be found
In pedigrees by those who wander still
Along the last fields of that Gothic ground)---
Was high-born, wealthy by her father's will,
And beauteous, even where beauties most abound,
In Britain---which of course true patriots find
The goodliest soil of body and of mind.

III.

I'll not gainsay them; it is not my cue;
 I leave them to their taste, no doubt the best:
 An eye's an eye, and whether black or blue,
 Is no great matter, so 'tis in request:
 'Tis nonsense to dispute about a hue—
 The kindest may be taken as a test.
 The fair sex should be always fair, and no man,
 Till thirty, should perceive there's a plain woman.

IV.

And after that serene and somewhat dull
 Epoch, that awkward corner turned for days
 More quiet, when our moon's no more at full,
 We may presume to criticise or praise;
 Because indifference begins to lull
 Our passions, and we walk in Wisdom's ways;
 Also because the figure and the face
 Hint, that 'tis time to give the younger place.

V.

I know that some would fain postpone this era,
 Reluctant as all placemen to resign
 Their post; but their's is merely a chimera,
 For they have passed life's equinoctial line:
 But then they have their claret and madeira
 To irrigate the dryness of decline;
 And county meetings and the parliament,
 And debt, and what not, for their solace sent.

VI.

And is there not religion, and Reform,
Peace, war, the taxes, and what's called the " Nation!"
The struggle to be Pilots in a storm?
The landed and the monied speculation?
The joys of mutual hate, to keep them warm
Instead of love, that mere hallucination?
Now hatred is by far the longest pleasure;
Men love in haste, but they detest at leisure.

VII.

Rough Johnson, the great moralist, professed,
Right honestly, " he liked an honest hater"---(1)
The only truth that yet has been confess'd
Within these latest thousand years or later.
Perhaps the fine old fellow spoke in jest:---
For my part, I am but a mere spectator,
And gaze where'er the palace or the hovel is,
Much in the mode of Goëthe's Mephistopheles;

VIII.

But neither love nor hate in much excess;
Though 'twas not once at. If I sneer sometimes,
It is because I cannot well do less,
And now and then it also suits my rhymes.
I should be very willing to redress
Men's wrongs, and rather check than punish crimes,
Had not Cervantes in that too true tale
Of Quixote, shown how all such efforts fail.

IX.

Of all tales 'tis the saddest---and more sad,
 Because it makes us smile: his hero's right,
 And still pursues the right;---to curb the bad,
 His only object, and 'gainst odds to fight,
 His guerdon : 'tis his virtue makes him mad !
 But his adventures form a sorry sight;—
 A sorrier still is the great moral taught
 By that real Epic unto all who have thought.

X.

Redressing injury, revenging wrong,
 To aid the damsel and destroy the caitiff;
 Opposing singly the united strong,
 From foreign yoke to free the helpless native;—
 Alas ! Must noblest views, like an old song,
 Be for mere Fancy's sport a theme creative ?
 A jest, a riddle, Faine through thin and thick sought ?
 And Socrates himself but Wisdom's Quixote ?

XI.

Cervantes smiled Spain's Chivalry away ;
 A single laugh demolished the right arm
 Of his own country;—seldom since that day
 Has Spain had heroes. While Romance could charm,
 The world gave ground before her bright array ;
 And therefore have his volumes done such harm,
 That all their glory, as a composition,
 Was dearly purchased by his land's perdition.

XII.

I'm "at my old Lunes"—digression, and forget
The Lady Adeline Amundeville;
The fair most fatal Juan ever met,
Although she was not evil, nor meant ill;
But Destiny and Passion spread the net,
(Fate is a good excuse for our own will)
And caught them;—what do they not catch, methinks?
But I'm not Oedipus, and life's a Sphinx.

XIII.

I tell the tale as it is told, nor dare
To venture a solution: "Davus sum!"
And now I will proceed upon the pair.
Sweet Adeline, amidst the gay world's hum,
Was the Queen-Bee, the glass of all that's fair;
Whose charms made all men speak, and women dumb.
The last's a miracle, and such was reckoned,
And since that time there has not been a second.

XIV.

Chaste was she, to detraction's desperation,
And wedded unto one she had loved well;
A man known in the councils of the nation,
Cool, and quite English; imperturbable,
Though apt to act with fire upon occasion;
Proud of himself and her, the world could tell
Nought against either, and both seemed secure—
She in her virtue, he in his hauteur.

XV.

It chanced some diplomatical relations,
 Arising out of business, often brought
 Himself and Juan in their mutual stations
 Into close contact. Though reserved, nor caught
 By specious seeming, Juan's youth, and patience,
 And talent, on his haughty spirit wrought,
 And formed a basis of esteem, which ends
 In making men what Courtesy calls friends.

XVI.

And thus Lord Henry, who was cautious as
 Reserve and pride could make him, and full slow
 In judging men—when once his judgment was Determined, right or wrong, on friend or foe,
 Had all the pertinacity pride has,
 Which knows no ebb to its imperious flow,
 And loves or hates, disdaining to be guided
 Because its own good pleasure hath decided.

XVII.

His friendships therefore, and no less aversions,
 Though oft well founded, which confirmed but more
 His prepossessions, like the laws of Persians
 And Medes, would ne'er revoke what went before,
 His feelings had not those strange fits, like tertians,
 Of common likings, which make some deplore
 What they should laugh at—the mere ague still
 Of men's regard, the fever or the chill.

XVIII.

“ ‘Tis not in mortals to command success ;
“ But do you more, Sempronius—don’t deserve it ;”
And take my word, you won’t have any less :
Be wary, watch the time, and always serve it ;
Give gently way, when there’s too great a press ;
And for your conscience, only learn to nerve it,—
For, like a racer or a boxer training,
Twill make, if proved, vast efforts without paining.

XXI.

Lord Henry also liked to be superior,
As most men do, the little or the great ;
The very lowest find out an inferior,
At least they think so, to exert their state
Upon : for there are very few things wearier
Than solitary Pride’s oppressive weight,
Which mortals generously would divide,
By bidding others carry while they ride.

XX.

In birth, in rank, in fortune likewise equal,
O’er Juan he could no distinction claim ;
In years he had the advantage of time’s sequel ;
And, as he thought, in country much the same—
Because bold Britons have a tongue and free quill,
At which all modern nations vainly aim ;
And the Lord Henry was a great debater,
So that few members kept the House up later.

XXI.

These were advantages : and then he thought—
 It was his foible; but by no means sinister—
 That few or none more than himself had caught
 Court mysteries, having been himself a minister :
 He liked to teach that which he had been taught,
 And greatly shone whenever there had been a stir ;
 And reconciled all qualities which grace man,
 Always a Patriot, and sometimes a Placeman.

XXII.

He liked the gentle Spaniard for his gravity ;
 He almost honoured him for his docility,
 Because, though young, he acquiesced with suavity,
 Or contradicted but with proud humility.
 He knew the world, and would not see depravity
 In faults which sometimes show the soil's fertility,
 If that the weeds o'erlive not the first crop,—
 For then they are very difficult to stop.

XXIII.

And then he talked with him about Madrid,
 Constantinople, and such distant places ;
 Where people always did as they were bid,
 Or did what they should not with foreign graces.
 Of coursers also spake they : Henry rid
 Well, like most Englishmen, and loved the races :
 And Juan, like a true-born Andalusian,
 Could back a horse, as despots ride a Russian.

XXIV.

And thus acquaintance grew, at noble routs,
And diplomatic dinners, or at other---
For Juan stood well both with Ins and Outs,
As in Freemasonry a higher brother.
Upon his talent Henry had no doubts,
His manner showed him sprung from a high mother;
And all men like to show their hospitality
To him whose breeding marches with his quality.

XXV.

At Blank-Blank Square ;---for we will break no squares
By naming streets: since men are so censorious,
And apt to sow an author's wheat with tares,
Reaping allusions private and inglorious,
Where none were dreamt of, unto love's affairs,
Which were, or are, or are to be notorious,
That therefore do I previously declare,
Lord Henry's mansion was in Blank-Blank Square.

XXVI.

Also there bin (2) another pious reason
For making squares and streets anonymous;
Which is, that there is scarce a single season
Which doth not shake some very splendid house
With some slight heart-quake of domestic treason—
A topic Scandal doth delight to rouse:
Such I might stumble over unawares,
Unless I knew the very chastest squares.

XXVII.

'Tis true, I might have chosen Piccadilly,
 A place where peccadillos are unknown ;
 But I have motives, whether wise or silly,
   For letting that pure sanctuary alone.
 Therefore I name not square, street, place, until I
   Find one where nothing naughty can be shown,
 A vestal shrine of innocence of heart :
 Such are—but I have lost the London Chart.

XXVIII.

At Henry's mansion then, in Blank-Blank Square,
   Was Juan a recherché, welcome guest,
 As many other noble scions were ;
   And some who had but talent for their crest ;
 Or wealth, which is a passport every where ;
   Or even mere fashion, which indeed's the best
 Recommendation ;—and to be well drest
 Will very often supersede the rest.

XXIX.

And since “there's safety in a multitude
   “Of counsellors,” as Solomon has said
 Or some one for him, in some sage, grave mood ;—
   Indeed we see the daily proof displayed
 In Senates, at the Bar, in wordy feud,
   Where'er collective wisdom can parade,
 Which is the only cause that we can guess
 Of Britain's present wealth and happiness :—

XXX.

But as “ there’s safety grafted in the number
“ Of counsellors” for men,—thus for the sex
A large acquaintance lets not Virtue slumber ;
Or should it shake, the choice will more perplex—
Variety itself will more encumber.
‘ Midst many rocks we guard more against wrecks ;
And thus with women ; howsoe’er it shock some’s
Self-love, there’s safety in a crowd of coxcombs.

XXXI.

But Adeline had not the least occasion
For such a shield, which leaves but little merit
To virtue proper, or good education.
Her chief resource was in her own high spirit,
Which judged mankind at their due estimation ;
And for coquetry, she disdained to wear it :
Secure of admiration, its impression
Was faint, as of an every-day possession.

XXXII.

To all she was polite without parade ;
To some she showed attention of that kind
Which flatters, but is flattery conveyed
In such a sort as cannot leave behind
A trace unworthy either wife or maid ;—
A gentle, genial courtesy of mind,
To those who were or passed for meritorious,
Just to console sad Glory for being glorious ;

XXXIII.

Which is in all respects, save now and then,
 A dull and desolate appendage. Gaze
 Upon the shades of those distinguished men,
 Who were or are the puppet-shows of praise,
 The praise of persecution. Gaze again
 On the most favoured ; and amidst the blaze
 Of sunset halos o'er the laurel-browed,
 What can ye recognize ?—A gilded cloud.

XXXIV.

There also was of course in Adeline
 That calm Patrician polish in the address,
 Which ne'er can pass the equinoctial line
 Of any thing which Nature would express ;
 Just as a Mandarin finds nothing fine,—
 At least his manner suffers not to guess
 That any thing he views can greatly please.
 Perhaps we have borrowed this from the Chinese—

XXXV.

Perhaps from Horace : his “ Nil admirari ”
 Was what he called the “ Art of Happiness ; ”
 An art on which the artists greatly vary,
 And have not yet attained to much success.
 However, 'tis expedient to be wary :
 Indifference certes don't produce distress ;
 And rash Enthusiasm in good society
 Were nothing but a moral ineptitude.

XXXVI.

But Adeline was not indifferent: for
(Now for a common place!) beneath the snow,
As a volcano holds the lava more
Within—et cetera. Shall I go on?—No!
I hate to hunt down a tired metaphor:
So let the often used volcano go.
Poor thing! How frequently, by me and others,
It hath been stirred up till its smoke quite smothered.

XXXVII.

I'll have another figure in a trice:—
What say you to a bottle of champagne?
Frozen into a very vinous ice,
Which leaves few drops of that immortal rain,
Yet in the very centre, past all price,
About a liquid glassful will remain;
And this is stronger than the strongest grape
Could e'er express in its expanded shape;

XXXVIII.

'Tis the whole spirit brought to a quintessence;
And thus the chilliest aspects may concentrate
A hidden nectar under a cold presence.
And such are many—though I only meant her,
From whom I now deduce these moral lessons,
On which the Muse has always sought to enter:—
And your cold people are beyond all price,
When once you have broken their confounded ice.

XXXIX.

But after all they are a North-West Passage
 Unto the glowing India of the soul ;
 And as the good ships sent upon that message
   Have not exactly ascertained the Pole
 (Though Parry's efforts look a lucky presage)
   Thus gentlemen may run upon a shoal ;
 For if the Pole's not open, but all frost,
 (A chance still) 'tis a voyage or vessel lost.

XL.

And young beginners may as well commence
 With quiet cruizing o'er the ocean woman ;
 While those who are not beginners, should have sense
   Enough to make for port, ere Time shall summon
 With his grey signal flag : and the past tense,
   The dreary "Fuinus" of all things human,
 Must be declined, while life's thin thread's spun out
 Between the gaping heir and gnawing gout.

XLI.

But Heaven must be diverted : its diversion,
   Is sometimes truculent—but never mind :
 The world upon the whole is worth the assertion
   (If but for comfort) that all things are kind :
 And that same devilish doctrine of the Persian,
   Of the two Principles, but leaves behind
 As many doubts as any other doctrine
 Has ever puzzled faith withal, or yoked her in.

XLII.

The English winter—ending in July,
To recommence in August—now was done.
'Tis the postillion's Paradise: wheels fly;
On roads, East, South, North, West, there is a run.
But for post horses who finds sympathy?
Man's pity for himself, or for his son,
Always premising that said son at college
Has not contracted much more debt than knowledge.

XLIII.

The London winter's ended in July—
Sometimes a little later. I don't err
In this: whatever other blunders lie
Upon my shoulders, here I must aver
My Muse a glass of Weatherology;
For Parliament is our Barometer:
Let Radicals its other acts attack,
Its sessions form our only almanack.

XLIV.

When its quicksilver's, down at zero,—lo!
Coach, chariot, luggage, baggage, equipage!
Wheels whirl from Carlton palace to Soho,
And happiest they who horses can engage;
The turnpikes glow with dust; and Rotten Row
Sleeps from the chivalry of this bright age;
And tradesmen, with long bills and longer faces,
Sigh—as the postboys fasten on the traces.

XLV.

They and their bills, “ Arcadians both,” (3) are left
 To the Greek Kalends of another session.
 Alas! to them of ready cash bereft,
 What hope remains? Of hope the full possession,
 Or generous draft, conceded as a gift,
 At a long date—till they can get a fresh one,—
 Hawked about at a discount, small or large;—
 Also the solace of an overcharge.

XLVI.

But these are trifles. Downward flies my Lord
 Nodding beside my Lady in his carriage.
 Away! away! “ Fresh horses!” are the word,
 And changed as quickly as hearts after marriage,
 The obsequious landlord hath the change restored;
 The postboys have no reason to disparage
 Their fee; but ere the watered wheels may hiss hence,
 The ostler pleads for a small reminiscence.

XLVII.

’Tis granted; and the valet mounts the dickey—
 That gentleman of lords and gentlemen;
 Also my lady’s gentlewoman, tricky,
 Tricked out, but modest more than poet’s pen
 Can paint, “ Cosi Viaggino i Ricchi!”
 (Excuse a foreign slipslop now and then,
 If but to show I’ve travell’d; and what’s travel,
 Unless it teaches one to quote and cavil?

XLVIII.

The London winter and the country summer
Were well nigh over. 'Tis perhaps a pity,
When nature wears the gown that doth become her,
To lose those best months in a sweaty city,
And wait until the nightingale grows dumber,
Listening debates not very wise or witty,
Ere patriots their true country can remember ;
But there's no shooting (save grouse) till September.

XLIX.

I've done with my tirade. The world was gone ;
The twice two thousand, for whom earth was made
Were vanished to be what they call alone,—
That is, with thirty servants for parade,
As many guests or more ; before whom groan
As many covers, duly, daily laid.
Let none accuse Old England's hospitality—
Its quantity is but condensed to quality.

L.

Lord Henry and the Lady Adeline
Departed, like the rest of their compeers,
The peerage, to a mansion very fine ;
The Gothic Babel of a thousand years.
None than themselves could boast a longer line,
Where time through heroes and through beauties
steers ;
And oaks, as olden as their pedigree,
Told of their sires, a tomb in every tree.

LI.

A paragraph in every paper told
 Of their departure : such is modern fame :
 'Tis pity that it takes no further hold
 Than an advertisement, or much the same ;
 When, ere the ink be dry, the sound grows cold.
 The Morning Post was foremost to proclaim—
 “ Departure, for his country seat, to-day,
 “ Lord H. Amundeville and Lady A.

LII.

“ We understand the splendid host intends
 “ To entertain, this autumn, a select
 “ And numerous party of his noble friends ; “ ’Midst whom we have heard, from sources quite correct,
 “ The Duke of D— the shooting seasons spends,
 “ With many more by rank and fashion decked ;
 “ Also a foreigner of high condition,
 “ The Envoy of the secret Russian Mission.”

LIII.

And thus we see---who doubts the Morning Post ?
 (Whose articles are like the “ Thirty Nine,”
 Which those most swear to who believe them most)---
 Our gay Russ Spaniard was ordained to shine,
 Decked by the rays reflected from his host,
 With those who, Pope says, “ greatly daring dine.”
 'Tis odd, but true,—last war the News abounded
 More with these dinners than the killed or wounded ;—

LIV.

As thus: "On Thursday there was a grand dinner;
" Present, Lords A. B. C"—Earls, dukes, by name
Announced with no less pomp than victory's winner:
Then underneath, and in the very same
Column: Date, "Falmouth. There has lately been here
" The Slap-Dash Regiment, so well known to fame;
" Whose loss in the late action we regret:
" The vacancies are filled up—see Gazette."

LV.

To Norman Abbey whirled the noble pair,—
An old, old monastery once, and now
Still older mansion, of a rich and rare
Mixed Gothic, such as artists all allow
Few specimens yet left us can compare
Withal: it lies perhaps a little low,
Because the monks preferred a hill behind,
To shelter their devotion from the wind.

LVI.

It stood embosom'd in a happy valley,
Crown'd by high woodlands, where the Druid oak
Stood like Caractacus in act to rally
His host, with broad arms 'gainst the thunder-stroke;
And from beneath his boughs were seen to sally
The dappled foresters---as day awoke,
The branching stag swept down with all his herd,
To quaff a brook which murmured like a bird.

LVII.

Before the mansion lay a lucid lake,
 Broad as transparent, deep, and freshly fed
 By a river, which its soften'd way did take
 In currents through the calmer water spread
 Around : the wild fowl nestled in the brake
 And sedges, brooding in their liquid bed :
 The woods sloped downwards to its brink, and stood
 With their green faces fix'd upon the flood.

LVIII.

Its outlet dash'd into a steep cascade,
 Sparkling with foam, until again subsiding
 Its shriller echoes---like an infant made
 Quiet---sank into softer ripples, gliding
 Into a rivulet ; and thus allay'd
 Pursued its course, now gleaming, and now hiding
 Its windings through the woods ; now clear, now blue,
 According as the skies their shadows threw.

LIX.

A glorious remnant of the Gothic pile,
 (While yet the church was Rome's) stood half apart
 In a grand arch, which once screened many an aisle.
 These last had disappear'd--a loss to art :
 The first yet frowned superbly o'er the soil,
 And kindled feelings in the roughest heart,
 Which mourn'd the power of time's or tempest's march,
 In gazing on that venerable arch.

LX.

Within a niche, nigh to its pinnacle,
Twelve saints had once stood sanctified in stone ;
But these had fallen, not when the friars fell,
But in the war which struck Charles from his throne,
When each house was a fortalice—as tell
The annals of full many a line undone,---
The gallant Cavaliers, who fought in vain
For those who knew not to resign or reign.

LXI.

But in a higher niche, alone, but crown'd,
The Virgin Mother of the God-born child,
With her son in her blessed arms, look'd round,
Spared by some chance when all beside was spoil'd ;
She made the earth below seem holy ground.
This may be superstition, weak or wild,
But even the faintest relics of a shrine
Of any worship, wake some thoughts divine.

LXII.

A mighty window, hollow in the centre,
Shorn of its glass of thousand colourings,
Through which the deepen'd glories once could enter,
Streaming from off the sun like seraph's wings,
Now yawns all desolate : now loud, now fainter,
The gale sweeps through its fretwork, and oft sings
The owl his anthem, where the silenced quire
Lie with their hallelujahs quench'd like fire.

LXIII.

But in the noon tide of the moon, and when
 The wind is winged from one point of heaven,
 There moans a strange unearthly sound, which then
 Is musical-- a dying accent driven
 Through the huge arch, which soars and sinks again.
 Some deem it but the distant echo given
 Back to the Night wind by the waterfall,
 And harmonized by the old choral wall :

LXIV.

Others, that some original shape, or form
 Shaped by decay perchance, hath given the power
 (Though less than that of Memnon's statue, warm
 In Egypt's rays, to harp at a fixed hour)
 To this grey ruin, with a voice to charm.
 Sad, but serene, it sweeps o'er tree or tower:
 The cause I know not, nor can solve; but such
 The fact:—I've heard it,—once perhaps too much.

LXV.

Amidst the court a Gothic fountain play'd,
 Symmetrical, but deck'd with carvings quaint—
 Strange faces, like to men in masquerade,
 And here perhaps a monster, there a saint:
 The spring gush'd through grim mouths, of granite made,
 And sparkled into basins, where it spent
 Its little torrent in a thousand bubbles,
 Like man's vain glory, and his vainer troubles.

LXVI.

The mansion's self was vast and venerable,
With more of the monastic than has been
Elsewhere preserved ; the cloisters still were stable,
The cells too and refectory, I ween :
An exquisite small chapel had been able,
Still unimpair'd, to decorate the scene ;
The rest had been reform'd, replaced or sunk,
And spoke more of the baron than the monk.

LXVII.

Huge halls, long galleries, spacious chambers, join'd
By no quite lawful marriage of the Arts,
Might shock a Connoisseur ; but when combined,
Form'd a whole which, irregular in parts,
Yet left a grand impression on the mind,
At least of those whose eyes are in their hearts.
We gaze upon a giant for his stature,
Nor judge at first if all be true to nature.

LXVIII.

Steel Barons, molten the next generation
To silken rows of gay and garter'd Earls,
Glanced from the walls in goodly preservation ;
And Lady Marys blooming into girls,
With fair long locks, had also kept their station :
And countesses mature in robes and pearls :
Also some beauties of Sir Peter Lely,
Whose drapery hints we may admire them freely.

LXIX.

Judges in very formidable ermine
 Were there, with brows that did not much invite
 The accused to think their Lordships would determine
 His cause by leaning much from might to right :
 Bishops, who had not left a single sermon ;
 Attorneys-General, awful to the sight,
 As hinting more (unless our judgments warp us)
 Of the "Star Chamber" than of "Habeas Corpus."

LXX.

Generals, some all in armour, of the old
 And iron time, ere lead had ta'en the lead ;
 Others in wigs of Marlborough's martial fold,
 Huger than twelve of our degenerate breed :
 Lordlings with staves of white, or keys of gold ;
 Nimrods, whose canvas scarce contain'd the steed ;
 And here and there some stern high Patriot stood,
 Who could not get the place for which he sued.

LXXI.

But ever and anon, to soothe your vision,
 Fatigued with these hereditary glories,
 There rose a Carlo Dolce or a Titian,
 Or wilder groupe of savage Salvatore's : (4)
 Here danced Albano's boys, and here the sea shone
 In Vernet's ocean lights ; and there the stories
 Of martyrs awed, as Spagnoletto tainted
 His brush with all the blood of all the sainted.

LXXII.

Here sweetly spread a landscape of Loraine:

There Rembrandt made his darkness equal light,
Or gloomy Caravaggio's gloomier stain

Bronzed o'er some lean and stoic Anchorite:—
But lo! a Teniers woos, and not in vain,

Your eyes to revel in a livelier sight:
His bell-mouthed goblet makes me feel quite Danish (5)
Or Dutch with thirst—What ho! a flask of Rhenish.

LXXIII.

Oh, reader! If that thou canst read,—and know,

'Tis not enough to spell, or even to read,
To constitute a reader; there must go

Virtues of which both you and I have need.
Firstly, begin with the beginning—(though

That clause is hard); and secondly, proceed;
Thirdly, commence not with the end—or, sinning
In this sort, end at least with the beginning.

LXXIV.

But, reader, thou hast patient been of late,

While I, without remorse of rhyme, or fear,
Have built and laid out ground at such a rate,

Dan Phœbus takes me for an auctioneer.
That Poets were so from their earliest date,

By Homer's "Catalogue of Ships," is clear;
But a mere modern must be moderate—
I spare you then the furniture and plate.

LXXV.

The mellow Autumn came, and with it came
 The promised party, to enjoy its sweets.
 The corn is cut, the manor full of game;
 The pointer ranges, and the sportsman beats
 In russet jacket:—lynx-like is his aim,
 Full grows his bag, and wonderful his feats.
 Ah, nutbrown Partridges! Ah, brilliant Pheasants!
 And ah, ye Poachers!—’Tis no sport for peasants.

LXXVI.

An English Autumn, though it hath no vines,
 Blushing with Bacchant coronals along
 The paths, o'er which the far festoon entwines
 The red grape in the sunny lands of song,
 Hath yet a purchased choice of choicest wines;
 The claret light, and the madeira strong.
 If Britain mourn her bleakness, we can tell her
 The very best of vineyards is the cellar.

LXXVII.

Then, if she hath not that serene decline,
 Which makes the Southern Autumn's day appear
 As if 'twould to a second spring resign
 The season, rather than to winter drear,—
 Of in-door comforts still she hath a mine,—
 The sea-coal fires, the earliest of the year;
 Without doors too she may compete in mellow,
 As what is lost in green is gained in yellow.

LXXVIII.

And for the effeminate villeggiatura—
Rife with more horns than hounds—she hath the chase,
So animated that it might allure a
Saint from his beads to join the jocund race;
Even Nimrod's self might leave the plains of Dura, (6)
And wear the Melton jacket for a space:—
If she hath no wild boars, she hath a tame
Preserve of Bores, who ought to be made game.

LXXIX.

The noble guests, assembled at the Abbey,
Consisted of—we give the sex the pas—
The Duchess of Fitz-Fulke; the Countess Crabbeey;
The ladies Scilly, Busey;—Miss Eclât,
Miss Bombazeen, Miss Mackstay, Miss O'Tabbey,
And Mrs. Rabbi, the rich banker's squaw;
Also the Honourable Mrs. Sleep,
Who look'd a white lamb, yet was a black sheep:

LXXX.

With other Countesses of Blank—but rank;
At once the “lie” and the “élite” of crowds;
Who pass like water filtered in a tank,
All purged and pions from their native clouds;
Or paper turned to money by the Bank:
No matter how or why, the passport shrouds
The “passé” and the passed; for good society
Is no less fained for tolerance than piety:

LXXXI.

That is, up to a certain point; which point
 Forms the most difficult in punctuation.
 Appearances appear to form the joint
 On which it hinges in a higher station;
 And so that no explosion cry “Aroint
 “Thee, Witch!” or each Medea has her Jason;
 Or (to the point with Horace and with Pulci)
 “Omne tulit punctum, quæ miscuit utile dulci.”

LXXXII.

I can’t exactly trace their rule of right,
 Which hath a little leaning to a lottery.
 I’ve seen a virtuous woman put down quite
 By the mere combination of a coterie;
 Also a so-so matron boldly fight
 Her way back to the world by dint of plottery,
 And shine the very Siria of the spheres,
 Escaping with a few slight, scarless sneers.

LXXXIII.

I have seen more than I’ll say:—but we will see
 How our villeggiatura will get on.
 The party might consist of thirty-three
 Of highest caste—the Brahmins of the ton.
 I have named a few, not foremost in degree,
 But ta’en at hazard as the rhyme may run.
 By way of sprinkling, scatter’d amongst these,
 There also were some Irish absentees.

LXXXIV.

There was Parolles too, the legal bully,
Who limits all his battles to the bar
And senate: when invited elsewhere, truly
He shows more appetite for words than war.
There was the young bard Rackrhyme, who had newly
Came out and glimmer'd as a six-weeks' star.
There was Lord Pyrrho too, the great freethinker;
And Sir John Pottledewp, the mighty drinker.

LXXXV.

There was the Duke of Dash, who was a—Duke,
“Aye, every inch a” duke; there were twelve peers
Like Charlemagne's—and all such peers in look
And intellect, that neither eyes nor ears
For commoners had ever them mistook.
There were the six Miss Rawbolds—pretty dears!
All song and sentiment; whose hearts were set
Less on a convent than a coronet.

LXXXVI.

There were four 'Honourable Misters, whose
Honour was more before their names than after;
There was the preux Chevalier de la Ruse,
Whom France and Fortune lately deign'd to waft here,
Whose chiefly harmless talent was to amuse:
But the clubs found it rather serious laughter.
Because—such was his magic power to please—
The dice seem'd charm'd too with his repartees.

LXXXVII.

There was Dick Dubious the metaphysician,
 Who loved philosophy and a good dinner ;
 Angle, the soi-disant mathematician ;
 Sir Henry Silvercup, the great race-winner.
 There was the Reverend Rodomont Precisian,
 Who did not hate so much the sin as sinner ;
 And Lord Augustus Fitz-Plantagenet,
 Good at all things, but better at a bet.

LXXVIII.

There was Jack Jargon the gigantic guardsman ;
 And General Fireface, famous in the field,
 A great tactician, and no less a swordsman,
 Who ate, last war, more Yankees than he kill'd.
 There was the waggish Welch Judge, Jefferies Hardsman
 In his grave office so completely skill'd,
 That when a culprit came for condemnation,
 He had his Judge's joke for consolation.

LXXXIX.

Good company's a chess-board—there are kings,
 Queen's, bishops, knights, rooks, pawns ; the world's
 a game ;
 Save that the puppets pull at their own strings ;
 Methinks gay Punch hath something of the same.
 My Muse, the butterfly hath but her wings,
 Not stings, and flits through ether without aim,
 Alighting rarely :—were she but a hornet,
 Perhaps there might be vices which would mourn it.

XC.

I had forgotten—but must not forget—
An Orator, the latest of the session,
Who had deliver'd well a very set
Smooth speech, his first and maidenly transgression
Upon debate: the papers echoed yet
With this début, which made a strong impression,
And ranked with what is every day display'd---
“The best first speech that ever yet was made.”

XCI.

Proud of his “Hear hims!” proud too of his vote
And lost virginity of oratory,
Proud of his learning (just enough to quote)
He revell'd in his Ciceronian glory:
With memory excellent to get by rote,
With wit to hatch a pun or tell a story,
Graced with some merit and with more effrontery,
‘His Country's pride,’ he came down to the country.

XCII.

These also were two wits by acclamation,
Longbow from Ireland, Strongbow from the Tweed,
Both lawyers and both men of education;
But Strongbow's wit was of more polish'd breed:
Longbow was rich in an imagination,
As beautiful and bounding as a steed,
But sometimes stumbling over a potatoe,---
While Strongbow's best things might have come from Cato.

XCIII.

Strongbow was like a new-tuned harpsichord ;
 But Longbow wild as an Æolian harp,
 With which the winds of heaven can claim accord,
 And make a music, whether flat or sharp.
 Of Strongbow's talk you would not change a word ;
 At Longbow's phrases you might sometimes carp :
 Both wits—one born so, and the other bred,
 This by his heart—his rival by his head.

XCIV.

If all these seem an heterogeneous mass
 To be assembled at a country seat,
 Yet think, a specimen of every class
 Is better than a humdrum tête-à-tête.
 The days of Comedy are gone, alas !
 When Congreve's fool could vie with Moliere's l'ête
 Society is smooth'd to that excess,
 That manners hardly differ more than dress.

XCV.

Our ridicules are kept in the back-ground---
 Ridiculous enough, but also dull ;
 Professions too are no more to be found
 Professional ; and there is nought to cull
 Of folly's fruit : for, though your fools abound,
 They're barren and not worth the pains to pull.
 Society is now one polish'd horde,
 Form'd of two mighty tribes, the Bores and Bored.

XCVI.

But from being farmers, we turn gleaners, gleaning
The scanty but right-well thrashed ears of truth ;
And, gentle reader ! when you gather meaning,
You may be Boaz, and I—modest Ruth.
Further I'd quote, but Scripture intervening,
Forbids. A great impression in my youth
Was made by Mrs. Adams, where she cries
“ That Scriptures out of church are blasphemies.” (7)

XCVII.

But what we can we glean in this vile age
Of chaff, although our gleanings be not grist.
I must not quite omit the talking sage,
Kit-Cat, the famous conversationist,
Who, in his common-place book, had a page
Prepared each morn for evenings. “ List, oh list !”—
“ Alas, poor Ghost !”—What unexpected woes
Await those who have studied their bon mots !

XCVIII.

Firstly, they must allure the conversation
By many windings to their clever clinch ;
And secondly, must let slip no occasion,
Nor bate (abate) their hearers of an inch,
But take an ell—and make a great sensation,
If possible : and thirdly, never flinch
When some smart talker puts them to the test,
But seize the last word, which no doubt's the best.

XCIX.

Lord Henry and his Lady were the hosts ;
 The party we have touch'd on were the guests :
 Their table was a board to tempt even ghosts
     To pass the Styx for more substantial feasts.
 I will not dwell upon ragoûts or roasts,
     Albeit all human history attests,
 That happiness for man—the hungry sinner !
 Since Eve ate apples, much depends on dinner.

C.

Witness the lands which “ flow'd with milk and honey,”
     Held out unto the hungry Israelites :
 To this we have added since, the love of money,
     The only sort of pleasure which requites.
 Youth fades, and leaves our days no longer sunny ;
     We tire of Mistresses and Parasites ;
 But oh, Ambrosial Cash ! Ah ! who would lose thee ?
 When we no more can use, or even abuse thee !

CI.

The gentlemen got up betimes to shoot,
     Or hunt : the young, because they liked the sport—
 The first thing boys like, after play and fruit :
     The middle-aged, to make the day more short ;
 For ennui is a growth of English root,
     Though nameless in our language :—we retort
 The fact for words, and let the French translate
     That awful yawn which sleep can not abate.

CII.

The elderly walked through the library,
And tumbled books, or criticised the pictures,
Or sauntered through the gardens piteously,
And made upon the hot-house several strictures,
Or rode a nag, which trotted not too high,
Or on the morning papers read their lectures,
Or on the watch their longing eyes would fix,
Longing at sixty for the hour of six.

CIII.

But none were "géné :" the great hour of union
Was rung by dinner's knell ; till then all were
Masters of their own time—or in communion,
Or solitary, as they chose to bear
The hours, which how to pass is but to few known.
Each rose up at his own, and had to spare
What time he chose for dress, and broke his fast
When, where, and how he chose for that repast.

CIV.

The ladies—some rouged, some a little pale—
Met the morn as they might. If fine, they rode,
Or walked ; if foul, they read, or told a tale,
Sung, or rehearsed the last dance from abroad ;
Discussed the fashion which might next prevail,
And settled bonnets by the newest code,
Or cramm'd twelve sheets into one little letter,
To make each correspondent a new debtor.

CV.

For some had absent lovers, all had friends.

The earth has nothing like a She epistle,
And hardly heaven—because it never ends.

I love the mystery of a female missal,
Which, like a creed, ne'er says all it intends,

But full of cunning as Ulysses' whistle,
When he allured poor Dolon :—you had better
Take care what you reply to such a letter.

CVI.

Then there were billiards ; cards too, but no dice ;—

Save in the Clubs no man of honour plays---
Boats when 'twas water, skaiting when 'twas ice,
And the hard frost destroy'd the scenting days :
And angling too, that solitary vice,

Whatever Izaak Walton sings or says :
The quaint, old, cruel coxcomb, in his gullet
Should have a hook, and a small trout to pull it. (8)

CVII.

With evening came the banquet and the wine ;

The conversazione ; the duet,
Attuned by voices more or less diyine,
(My heart or head aches with the memory yet,) The four Miss Rawbolds in a glee would shine ;
But the two youngest loved more to be set
Down to the harp--because to music's charms
They added graceful necks, white hands and arms.

CVIII.

Sometimes a dance (though rarely on field days,
For then the gentlemen were rather tired)
Display'd some sylph-like figures in its maze :
Then there was small-talk ready when required ;
Flirtation—but decorous ; the mere praise
Of charms that should or should not be admired.
The hunters fought t'heir fox-hunt o'er again,
And then retreated soberly—at ten.

CIX.

The politicians, in a nook apart,
Discuss'd the world, and settled all the spheres ;
The wits watched every loop-hole for their art,
To introduce a bon mot head and ears :
Small is the rest of those who would be smart,
A moment's good thing may have cost them years
Before they find an hour to introduce it,
And then, even then, some bore may make them lose it.

CX.

But all was gentle and aristocratic
In this was party ; polish'd, smooth and cold,
As Phidian forms cut out of marble Attic.
There now are no 'Squire Westerns as of old ;
And our Sophias are not so emphatic,
But fair as then, or fairer to behold.
We have no accomplish'd blackguards, like Tom Jones,
But gentlemen in stays, as stiff as stones.

CXI.

They separated at an early hour ;
That is, ere midnight—which is London's noon :
But in the country ladies seek their bower
A little earlier than the waning Moon.
Peace to the slumbers of each folded flower—
May the rose call back its true colours soon !
Good hours of fair cheeks are the fairest tinters,
And lower the price of rouge—at least some winters.

Note 7, page 261, stanza xcvi.

"That Scriptures out of church are blasphemies."

"Mrs. Adams answered Mr. Adams, that it was blasphemous to talk of Scripture out of church." This dogma was broached to her husband---the best Christian in any book----See Joseph Andrews, in the latter chapters.

Note 8, page 264, stanza cvi.

*The quaint, old, cruel coxcomb, in his gullet
Should have a hook, and a small trout to pull it.*

It would have taught him humanity at least. This sentimental savage, whom it is a mode to quote (amongst the novelists) to show their sympathy for innocent sports and old songs, teaches how to sew up frogs, and break their legs by way of experiment, in addition to the art of angling, the cruellest, the coldest, and the stupidest of pretended sports. They may talk about the beauties of nature, but the angler merely thinks of his dish of fish; he has no leisure to take his eyes from off the streams, and a single bite is worth to him more than all the scenery around. Besides, some fish bite best on a rainy day. The whale, the shark, and the tunny fishery have somewhat of noble and perilous in them; even net fishing, trawling, &c. are more humane and useful---but angling! No angler can be a good man.

"One of the best men I ever knew ;---as humane, delicate-minded, generous, and excellent a creature as any in the world, was an angler: true, he angled with painted flies, and would have been incapable of the extravagances of I. Walton."

The above addition was made by a friend in reading over the MS.---"Audi alteram partem"---I leave it to counterbalance my own observation.

CANTO XIV.

---

I.

If from great Nature's or our own abyss
Of thought, we could but snatch a certainty,
Perhaps mankind might find the path they miss—
But then 'twould spoil much good philosophy.
One system eats another up, and this
Much as old Saturn ate his progeny ;
For when his pious consort gave him stones
In lieu of sons, of these he made no bones

II.

But system doth reverse the Titan's breakfast,
And eats her parents, albeit the digestion
Is difficult. Pray tell me, can you make fast,
After due search, your faith to any question ?
Look back o'er ages, ere unto the stake fast
You bind yourself, and call some mode the best one.
Nothing more true than not to trust your senses ;
And yet what are your other evidences

III.

For me, I know nought ; nothing I deny,
 Admit, reject, contemn ; and what know you,
 Except perhaps that you were born to die ?
 And both may after all turn out untrue.
 An age may come, Font of Eternity,
 When nothing shall be either old or new.
 Death, so call'd, is a thing which makes men weep,
 And yet a third of life is pass'd in sleep.

IV.

A sleep without dreams, after a rough day
 Of toil, is what we covet most ; and yet
 How clay shrinks back from more quiescent clay !
 The very suicide that pays his debt
 At once without instalments (an old way
 Of paying debts, which creditors regret)
 Lets out impatiently his rushing breath,
 Less from disgust of life than dread of death.

V.

'Tis round him, near him, here, there, every where ;
 And there's a courage which grows out of fear,
 Perhaps of all most desperate, which will dare
 The worst to know it :—when the mountains rear
 Their peaks beneath your human foot, and there
 You look down o'er the precipice, and drear
 The gulf of rock yawns,—you can't gaze a minute
 Without an awful wish to plunge within it.

VI.

'Tis true, you don't—but, pale and struck with terror,
 Retire: but look into your past impression!
 And you will find, though shuddering at the mirror
 Of your own thoughts, in all their self confession,
 The lurking bias, be it truth or error,
 To the unknown; a secret prepossession,
 To plunge with ally our fears—but where? You know not,
 And that's the reason why you do—or do not.

VII.

But what's this to the purpose? you will say.
 Gent. Reader, nothing; a mere speculation,
 For which my sole excuse is—'tis my way,
 Sometimes with and sometimes without occasion
 I write what's uppermost, without delay;
 This narrative is not meant for narration,
 But a mere airy and fantastic basis,
 To build up common things with common places.

VIII.

You know, or don't know, that great Bacon saith,
 " Fling up a straw, 'twill show the way the wind blows;"
 And such a straw, borne on by human breath,
 Is Poesy, according as the mind glows;
 A paper kite, which flies 'twixt life and death,
 A shadow which the onward Soul behind throws:
 And mine's a bubble not blown up for praise,
 But just to play with, as an infant plays.

IX.

The world is all before me, or behind ;
 For I have seen a portion of that same,
 And quite enough for me to keep in mind ;—
 Of passions too, I have proved enough to blame,
 To the great pleasure of our friends, mankind,
 Who like to mix some slight alloy with fame :
 For I was rather famous in my time.
 Until I fairly knock'd it up with rhyme.

X.

I have brought this world about my ears, and eke
 The other ; that's to say, the Clergy—who
 Upon my head have bid their thunders break
 In pious libels by no means a few.
 And yet I can't help scribbling once a week,
 Tiring old readers, nor discovering new.
 In youth I wrote, because my mind was full,
 And now because I feel it growing dull.

XI.

But “ why then publish ? ”—There are no rewards
 Of fame or profit, when the world grows weary.
 I ask in turn,—why do you play at cards ?
 Why drink ? Why read ?—To make some hour less dreary.
 It occupies me to turn back regards
 On what I've seen or ponder'd, sad or cheery ;
 And what I write I cast upon the stream,
 To swim or sink—I have had at least my dream.

XII.

I think that were I certain of success,
I hardly could compose another line :
So long I've battled either more or less,
That no-defeat can drive me from the Nine.
This feeling 'tis not easy to express,
And yet 'tis not affected, I opine.
In play, there are two pleasures for your choosing—
The one is winning, and the other losing.

XIII.

Besides, my Muse by no means deals in fiction :
She gathers a repertory of facts,
Of course with some reserve and slight restriction,
But mostly sings of human things and acts—
And that's one cause she meets with contradiction ;
For too much truth, at first sight, ne'er attracts ;
And were her object only what's call'd glory,
Withmore ease too she'd tell a different story.

XIV.

Love, war, a tempest—surely there's variety ;
Also a seasoning slight of lucubration ;
A bird's-eye view too of that wild, Society ;
A slight glance thrown on men of every station.
If you have nought else, here's at least satiety
Both in performance and in preparation ;
And though these lines should only line portmanteaus,
Trade will be all the better for these Cantos.

XV.

The portion of this world which I at present
 Have taken up to fill the following sermon,
 Is one of which there's no description recent :
 The reason why, is easy to determine :
 Although it seems both prominent and pleasant,
 There is a sameness in its gems and ermine,
 A dull and family likeness through all ages,
 Of no great promise for poetic pages.

XVI.

With much to excite, there's little to exalt ;
 Nothing that speaks to all men and all times ;
 A sort of varnish over every fault ;
 A kind of common-place, even in their crimes :
 Factitious passions, wit without much salt,
 A want of that true nature which sublimes
 Whate'er it shows with truth ; a smooth monotony
 Of character, in those at least who have got any.

XVII.

Sometimes indeed, like soldiers off parade,
 They break their ranks and gladly leave the drill ;
 But then the roll-call draws them back afraid,
 And they must be or seem what they were : still
 Doubtless it is a brilliant masquerade ;
 But when of the first sight you have had your fill,
 It palls—at least it did so upon me,
 This Paradise of Pleasure and Ennui.

XVIII.

When we have made our love, and gamed our gaming,
 Drest, voted, shone, and, may be, something more ;
 With dandies dined ; heard senators declaiming ;
 Seen beauties brought to market by the score ;
 Sad rakes to sadder husbands chastely taming ;
 There's little left but to be bored or bore.
 Witness those "ci-devant jeunes hommes" who stem
 The stream, nor leave the world which leaveth them.

XIX.

'Tis said—indeed a general complaint—
 That no one has succeeded in describing
 The Monde, exactly as they ought to paint.
 Some say, that Authors only snatch, by bribing
 The porter, some slight scandals strange and quaint,
 To furnish matter for their moral gibing ;
 And that their books have but one style in common—
 My lady's prattle, filtered through her woman.

XX.

But this can't well be true, just now ; for writers
 Are grown of the Beau Monde a part potential :
 I've seen them balance even the scale with fighters,
 Especially when young, for that's essential.
 Why do their sketches fail them as inditers
 Of what they deem themselves most consequential---
 The real portrait of the highest tribe?
 'Tis that, in fact, there's little to describe.

XXI.

"Haud ignara loquor;" these are Nugæ, "quarum Pars parva fui," but still Art and part.
 Now I could much more easily sketch a harem,
 A battle, wreck, or history of the heart,
 Than these things ; and besides, I wish to spare 'em,
 For reasons which I choose to keep apart.
"Vetabo Cereris sacrum qui vulgaret"--
 Which means that vulgar people must not share it.

XXII.

And therefore what I throw off is ideal--
 Lower'd, leaven'd, like a history of Freemasons ;
 Which bears the same relation to the real,
 As Captain Parry's voyage may do to Jason's.
 The grand Arcanum's not for men to see all ;
 My music has some mystic diapasons ;
 And there is much which could not be appreciated
 In any manner by the uninitiated.

XXIII.

Alas ! Worlds fall---and Woman, since she fell'd
 The World (as, since that history, less polite
 Than true, hath been a creed so strictly held)
 Has not yet given up the practice quite.
 Poor Thing of Usages ! Coerc'd, compell'd,
 Victim when wrong, and martyr oft when right
 Condemn'd to child-bed, as men for their sins
 Have shaving too entailed upon their chins,--

XXIV.

A daily plague, which in the aggregate
May average on the whole with parturition.
But as to women, who can penetrate
The real sufferings of their she condition?
Man's very sympathy with their estate
Has much of selfishness and more suspicion.
Their love, their virtue, beauty, education,
But form good housekeepers, to breed a nation.

XXV.

All this were very well and can't be better;
But even this is difficult, Heaven knows!
So many troubles from her birth beset her,
Such small distinction between friends and foes,
The gilding wears so soon from off her fetter,
That—but ask any woman if she'd choose
(Take her at thirty, that is) to have been
Female or male? a school-boy or a Queen?

XXVI.

“ Petticoat Influence” is a great reproach,
Which even those who obey would fain be thought
To fly from, as from hungry pikes a roach;
But, since beneath it upon earth we are brought
By various joltings of life's hackney coach,
I for one venerate a petticoat—
A garment of a mystical sublimity,
No matter whether russet, silk, or dimity.

XXVII.

Much I respect, and much I have adored,
 In my young days, that chaste and goodly veil,
 Which holds a treasure, like a Miser's hoard,
 And more attracts by all it doth conceal—
 A golden scabbard on a Damasque sword,
 A loving letter with a mystic seal,
 A cure for grief--for what can ever rankle
 Before a petticoat and peeping uncle ?

XXVIII.

And when upon a silent, sullen day,
 With a Sirocco, for example, blowing,
 When even the sea looks dim with all its spray,
 And sulkily the river's ripple's flowing,
 And the sky shows that very ancient gray,
 The sober, sad antithesis to glowing,—
 'Tis pleasant, if then any thing is pleasant,
 To catch a glimpse even of a pretty peasant.

XXIX.

We left our heroes and our heroines
 In that fair clime which don't depend on climate,
 Quite independent of the Zodiac's signs,
 Though certainly more difficult to rhyme at,
 Because the sun and stars, and aught that shines,
 Mountains, and all we can be most sublime at,
 Are there oft dull and dreary as a dun—
 Whether a sky's or tradesman's, is all one.

XXX.

And in-door life is less poetical ;
And out of door hath showers, and mists, and sleet,
With which I could not brew a pastoral,
But be it as it may, a bard must meet
All difficulties, whether great or small,
To spoil his undertaking or complete,
And work away like spirit upon matter,
Embarrass'd somewhat both by fire and water.

XXXI.

Juan—in this respect at least like saints---
Was all things unto people of all sorts,
And lived contentedly, without complaints,
In camps, in ships, in cottages, or courts---
Born with that happy soul which seldom faints,
And mingling modestly in toils or sports.
He likewise could be all things to all women,
Without the coxcomtry of certain She Men.

XXXII.

A fox-hunt to a foreigner is strange ;
'Tis also subject to the double danger
Of tumbling first, and having in exchange
Some pleasant jesting at the awkward stranger
But Juan had been early taught to range
The wilds, as doth an Arab turn'd Avenger.
So that his horse, or charger, hunter, hack,
Knew that he had a rider on his back

XXXIII.

And now in this new field, with some applause,
 He clear'd hedge, ditch, and double post, and rail,
 And never craned, (1) and made but few "faux pas,"
 And only fretted when the scent 'gan fail.
 He broke, 'tis true, some statutes of the laws
 Of hunting—for the sagest youth is frail ;
 Rode o'er the hounds, it may be, now and then,
 And once o'er several country gentlemen.

XXXIV.

But on the whole, to general admiration
 He acquitted both himself and horse : the 'squires
 Marvell'd at merit of another nation ;
 The boors cried "Dang it ! who'd have thought it?"—
 Sires,
 The Nestors of the sporting generation,
 Swore praises, and recall'd their former fires ;
 The huntsman's self relented to a grin,
 And rated him almost a whipper-in.

XXXV.

Such were his trophies ;—not of spear and shield,
 But leaps, and bursts, and sometimes foxes' brushes ;
 Yet I must own,—although in this I yield
 To patriot sympathy a Briton's blushes,—
 He thought at heart like courtly Chesterfield,
 Who, after a long chase o'er hills, dales, bushes,
 And what not, though he rode beyond all price,
 Ask'd next day, " If men ever hunted twice? "

XXXVI.

He also had a quality uncommon
To early risers after a long chace,
Who wake in winter ere the cock can summon
December's drowsy day to his dull race,---
A quality agreeable to woman,
When her soft, liquid words run on apace,
Who likes a listener, whether Saint or Sinner,---
He did not fall asleep just after dinner.

XXXVII.

But, light and airy, stood on the alert,
And shone in the best part of dialogue,
By humouring always what they might assert,
And listening to the topics most in vogue ;
Now grave, now gay, but never dull or pert ;
And smiling but in secret---cunning rogue !
He ne'er presumed to make an error clearer ;---
In short, there never was a better hearer.

XXXVIII.

And then he danced ;---all foreigners excel
The serious Angles in the eloquence
Of pantomime ;---he danced, I say, right well,
With emphasis, and also with good sense---
A thing in footing indispensable :
He danced without theatrical pretence,
Not like a ballet-master in the van
Of his drill'd nymphs, but like a gentleman.

XXXIX.

Chaste were his steps, each kept within due bound,
 And elegance was sprinkled o'er his figure ;
 Like swift Camilla, he scarce skimm'd the ground,
 And rather held in than put forth his vigour ;
 And then he had an ear for music's sound,
 Which might defy a crotchet critic's rigour.
 Such classic pas---sans flaws—set off our hero,
 He glanced like a personified Bolero;

XL.

Or, like a flying Hour before Aurora,
 In Guido's famous fresco, which alone
 Is worth a tour to Rome, although no more a
 Remnant were there of the old world's sole throne.
 The “tout ensemble” of his movements wore a
 Grace of the soft Ideal, seldom shown,
 And ne'er to be described ; for to the dolour
 Of bards and prosers, words are void of colour.

XLI.

No marvel then he was a favourite ;
 A full-grown Cupid, very much admired ;
 A little spoilt, but by no means so quite ;
 At least he kept his vanity retired.
 Such was his tact, he could alike delight
 The chaste, and those who are not so much inspired.
 The Duchess of Fitz-Fulke, who loved “tracasserie,”
 Began to treat him with some small “agacherie.”

XLII.

She was a fine and somewhat full-blown blonde,

Desirable, distinguish'd, celebrated

For several winters in the grand, grand Monde.

I'd rather not say what might be related
Of her exploits, for this were ticklish ground;

Besides there might be falsehood in what's stated:
Her late performance had been a dead set
At Lord Augustus Fitz-Plantagenet.

XLIII.

This noble personage began to look

A little black upon this new flirtation;
But such small licences must lovers brook,

Mere freedoms of the female corporation.
Woe to the man who ventures a rebuke!

'Twill but precipitate a situation
Extremely disagreeable, but common
To calculators when they count on woman.

XLIV.

The circle smil'd, then whisper'd, and then sneer'd;

The misses bridled, and the matrons frown'd;

Some hoped things might not turn out as they fear'd;

Some would not deem such women could be found;

Some ne'er believed one half of what they heard;

Some look'd perplex'd, and others look'd profound;
And several pitied with sincere regret
Poor Lord Augustus Fitz-Plantagenet.

XLV.

But what is odd, none ever named the Duke,
 Who, one might think, was something in the affair.
 True, he was absent, and 'twas rumour'd, took
 But small concern about the when, or where,
 Or what his consort did : if he could brook
 Her gaieties, none had a right to stare :
 Theirs was that best of unions, past all doubt,
 Which never meets, and therefore can't fall out.

XLVI.

But, oh that I should ever pen so sad a line !
 Fired with an abstract love of virtue, she,
 My Dian of the Ephesians, Lady Adeline,
 Began to think the Duchess' conduct free ;
 Regretting much that she had chosen so bad a line,
 And waxing chiller in her courtesy,
 Looked grave and pale to see her friend's fragility,
 For which most friends reserve their sensibility.

XLVII.

There's nought in this bad world like sympathy :
 'Tis so becoming to the soul and face ;
 Sets to soft music the harmonious sigh,
 And robes sweet Friendship in a Brussels lace.
 Without a friend, what were humanity,
 To hunt our errors up with a good grace ?
 Consoling us with—"Would you had thought twice!"
 "Ah ! if you had but follow'd my advice!"

XLVIII.

Oh, Job! you had two friends: one's quite enough,
Especially when we are ill at ease;
They are but bad pilots when the weather's rough,
Doctors less famous for their cures than fees.
Let no man grumble when his friends fall off,
As they will do like leaves at the first breeze t
When your affairs come round, one way or t'other,
Go to the coffee-house, and take another. (2)

XLIX.

But this is not my maxim: had it been,
Some heart-aches had been spared me; yet I care not—
I would not be a tortoise in his screen
Of stubborn shell, which waves and weather wear not.
'Tis better on the whole to have felt and seen
That which humanity may bear, or bear not:
'Twill teach discernment to the sensitive,
And not to pour their ocean in a sieve.

L.

Of all the horrid, hideous notes of woe,
Sadder than owl-songs or the midnight blast,
Is that portentous phrase, "I told you so,"
Utter'd by friends, those prophets of the past,
Who, 'stead of saying what you now should do,
Own they foresaw that you would fall at last,
And solace your slight lapse 'gainst "bonos mores,"
With a long memorandum of old stories.

LI.

The Lady Adeline's serene severity
 Was not confined to feeling for her friend,
 Whose fame she rather doubted with posterity,
 Unless her habits should begin to mend ;
 But Juan also shared in her austerity,
 But mix'd with pity, pure as e'er was penn'd :
 His inexperience moved her gentle ruth,
 And (as her junior by six weeks) his youth.

LII.

These forty days' advantage of her years—
 And her's were those which can face calculation,
 Boldly referring to the list of peers
 And noble births, nor dread the enumeration—
 Gave her a right to have maternal fears
 For a young gentleman's fit education,
 Though she was far from that leap year, whose leap,
 In female dates, strikes Time all of a heap.

LIII.

This may be fixed at somewhere before thirty—
 Say seven-and-twenty; for I never knew
 The strictest in chronology and virtue
 Advance beyond, while they could pass for new.
 Oh, Time ! Why dost not pause ? Thy scythe, so dirty
 With rust, should surely cease to hack and hew.
 Reset it ; shave more smoothly, also slower,
 If but to keep thy credit as a mower.

LIV.

But Adeline was far from that ripe age,
Whose ripeness is but bitter at the best :
'Twas rather her experience made her sage,
For she had seen the world, and stood its test.
As I have said in—I forget what page ;
My Muse despises reference, as you have guess'd
By this time ;—but strike six from seven-and-twenty,
And you will find her sum of years in plenty.

LV.

At sixteen she came out ; presented, vaunted,
She put all coronets into commotion :
At seventeen too the world was still enchanted
With the new Venus of their brilliant ocean :
At eighteen, though below her feet still panted
A hecatomb of suitors with devotion,
She had consented to create again
That Adam, called “the Happiest of Men.”

LVI.

Since then she had sparkled through three glowing winters,
Admired, adored ; but also so correct,
That she had puzzled all the acutest hinters,
Without the apparel of being circumspect :
They could not even glean the slightest splinters
From off the marble, which had no defect.
She had also snatch'd a moment since her marriage
To bear a son and heir —and one miscarriage.

LVII.

Fondly the wheeling fire-flies flew around her,
Those little glitters of the London night;
But none of these possess'd a sting to wound her—
She was a pitch beyond a coxcomb's flight.
Perhaps she wish'd an aspirant profounder ;
But whatsoe'er she wished, she acted right ;
And whether coldness, pride, or virtue, dignify
A woman, so she's good, what does it signify ?

LVIII.

I hate a motive like a lingering bottle,
Which with the landlord makes too long a stand,
Leaving all claretless the unmoistened throttle,
Especially with politics on hand ;
I hate it, as I hate a drove of cattle,
Who whirl the dust as Simooms whirl the sand ;
I hate it, as I hate an argument,
A Laureate's ode, or servile Peer's "Content."

LIX.

'Tis sad to hack into the roots of things,
They are so much intertwined with the earth :
So that the branch a goodly verdure flings,
I reck not if an acorn gave it birth :
To trace all actions to their secret springs
Would make indeed some melancholy mirth ;
But this is not at present my concern,
And I refer you to wise Oxenstiern. (3)

LX.

With the kind view of saving an eclât,
Both to the Duchess and diplomatist,
The Lady Adeline, as soon's she saw
That Juan was unlikely to resist—
(For foreigners don't know that a faux pas
In England ranks quite on a different list
From those of other lands unblest with Juries,
Whose verdict for such sin a certain cure is;)—

LXI.

The Lady Adeline resolved to take
Such measures as she thought might best impede
The further progress of this sad mistake.
She thought with some simplicity indeed ;
But innocence is bold even at the stake,
And simple in the world, and doth not need
Nor use those palisades by dames erected,
Whose virtue lies in never being detected.

LXII.

It was not that she fear'd the very worst:
His Grace was an enduring, married man,
And was not likely all at once to burst
Into a scene, and swell the clients' clan
Of Doctors' Commons ; but she dreaded first
The magic of her Grace's talisman,
And next a quarrel (as he seemed to fret)
With Lord Augustus Fitz-Plantagenet,

LXIII.

Her Grace too pass'd for being an Intrigante,
 And somewhat méchante in her amorous sphere;
 One of those pretty, precious plagues, which haunt
 A lover with caprices soft and dear,
 That like to make a quarrel when they can't
 Find one, each day of the delightful year;
 Bewitching, torturing, as they freeze or glow,
 And—what is worst of all—won't let you go :

LXIV.

The sort of thing to turn a young man's head
 Or make a Werter of him in the end.
 No wonder then a purer soul should dread
 This sort of chaste liaison for a friend;
 It were much better to be wed or dead,
 Thau wear a heart a woman loves to rend.
 'Tis best to pause, and think, ere you rush on,
 If that a "bonne fortune" be really "bonne."

LXV.

And first, in the o'erflowing of her heart,
 Which really knew or thought it knew no guile,
 She called her husband now and then apart,
 And bade him counsel Juan. With a smile
 Lord Henry heard her plans of artless art
 To wean Don Juan from the Siren's wile;
 And answer'd, like a Statesman or a Prophet,
 In such guise that she could make nothing of it.

LXVI.

Firstly, he said, “ he never interfered
“ In any body’s business but the king’s :”
Next, that “ he never judged from what appear’d,
“ Without strong reason, of those sorts of things :”
Thirdly, that “ Juan had more brain than beard,
“ And was not to be held in leading strings ; ”
And fourthly, what need hardly be said twice,
“ That good but rarely came from good advice.

LXVII.

And, therefore, doubtless to approve the truth
Of the last axiom, he advised his spouse
To leave the parties to themselves, forsooth,
At least as far as bien-séance allows :
That time would temper Juan’s faults of youth ;
That young men rarely made monastic vows ;
That opposition only more attaches—
But here a messenger brought in dispatches :

LXVIII.

And being of the Council called “ the Privy,”
Lord Henry walk’d into his cabinet
To furnish matters for some future Livy
To tell how he reduced the nation’s debt ;
And if their full contents I do not give ye,
It is because I do not know them yet,
But I shall add them in a brief appendix,
To come between mine epic and its index.

LXIX.

But ere he went, he added a slight hint,
Another gentle common-place or two,
Such as are coined in conversation's mint,
And pass, for want of better, though not new :
Then broke his packet, to see what was in't,
And having casually glanced it through,
Retired ; and, as he went out, calmly kissed her,
Less like a young wife than an aged sister.

LXX.

He was a cold, good, honourable man,
Proud of his birth, and proud of every thing ;
A goodly spirit for a state divan,
A figure fit to walk before a king ;
Tall, stately, form'd to lead the courtly van
On birth-days, glorious with a star and string ;
The very model of a Chamberlain—
And such I mean to make him when I reign.

LXXI.

But there was something wanting on the whole—
I don't know what, and therefore cannot tell—
Which pretty women—the sweet souls !—call Soul.
Certes it was not body ; he was well
Proportion'd, as a poplar or a pole,
A handsome man, that human miracle ;
And in each circumstance of love or war
Had still preserved his perpendicular.

LXXII.

Still there was something wanting, as I've said—
That undefinable "Je ne sais quoi,"
Which, for what I know, may of yore have led
To Homer's Iliad, since it drew to Troy
The Greek Eve, Helen, from the Spartan's bed ;
Though on the whole, no doubt, the Dardan boy
Was much inferior to King Menelaus ;—
But thus it is some women will betray us.

LXXIII.

There is an awkward thing which much perplexes,
Unless like wise Tiresias we had proved
By turns the difference of the several sexes :
Neither can show quite how they would be loved.
The sensual for a short time but connects us—
The sentimental boasts to be unmoved ;
But both together form a kind of Centaur,
Upon whose back 'tis better not to venture.

LXXIV.

A something all-sufficient for the heart
Is that for which the Sex are always seeking ;
But how to fill up that same vacant part ?
There lies the rub—and this they are but weak in.
Frail mariners afloat without a chart,
They run before the wind through high seas breaking ;
And when they have made the shore through ev'ry shock,
'Tis odd, or odds, it may turn out a rock.

LXXV.

There is a flower called "Love in Idleness,"
 For which see Shakspeare's ever blooming garden ;—
 I will not make his great description less,
 And beg his British Godship's humble pardon,
 If in my extremity of rhyme's distress,
 I touch a single leaf where he is warden ;—
 But though the flower is different, with the French
 Or Swiss Rousseau, cry, "Voilà la Pervenche !"

LXXVI.

Eureka ! I have found it ! What I mean
 To say is, not that Love is Idleness,
 But that in Love such Idleness has been
 An accessory, as I have cause to guess.
 Hard labour's an indifferent go-between ;
 Your men of business are not apt to express
 Much passion, since the merchant-ship, the Argo,
 Convey'd Medea as her Supercargo.

LXXVII.

"Beatus ille procul ! from negotiis,"
 Saith Horace ; the great little poet's wrong ;
 His other maxim, "Noscitur a sociis,"
 Is much more to the purpose of his song ;
 Though even that were sometimes too ferocious,
 Unless good company he kept too long ;
 But, in his teeth, whate'er their state or station,
 Thrice happy they who have an occupation !

LXXVIII.

Adam exchanged his Paradise for ploughing,
Eve made up millinery with fig leaves—
The earliest knowledge from the tree so knowing,
As far as I know, that the Church receives :
And since that time it need not cost much showing,
That many of the ills o'er which man grieves,
And still more women, spring from not employing
Some hours to make the reignant worth enjoying.

LXXIX.

And hence high life is oft a dreary void,
A rack of pleasures, where we must invent
A something wherewithal to be annoy'd.
Bards may sing what they please about Content ;
Contented, when translated, means but cloyed ;
And hence arise the woes of sentiment,
Blue devils, and Blue-stockings, and Romances
Reduced to practice and perform'd like dances.

LXXX.

I do declare, upon an affidavit,
Romances I ne'er read like those I have seen ;
Nor if unto the world I ever gave it,
Would some believe that such a tale had been :
But such intent I never had, nor have it ;
Some truths are better kept behind a screen,
Especially when they would look like lies ;
I therefore deal in generalities.

LXXXI.

" An oyster may be cross'd in Love,"—and why?
 Because he mopeh idly in his shell,
 And heaves a lonely subterraqueous sigh,
 Much as a monk may do within his cell :
 And à propos of monks, their piety
 With sloth hath found it difficult to dwell ;
 Those vegetables of the Catholic creed
 Are apt exceedingly to run to seed.

LXXXII.

Oh, Wilberforce ! thou man of black renown,
 Whose merit none enough can sing or say,
 Thou hast struck one immense Colossus down,
 Thou moral Washington of Africa !
 But there's another little thing, I own,
 Which you should perpetrate some summer's day,
 And set the other half of earth to rights :
 You have freed the blacks—now pray shut up the whites.

LXXXIII.

Shut up the bald-coot bully Alexander ;
 Ship off the Holy Three to Senegal ;
 Teach them that " sauce for goose is sauce for gander,"
 And ask them how they like to be in thrall ?
 Shut up each high heroic Salamander,
 Who eats fire gratis (since the pay's but small) ;
 Shut up—no, not the King, but the Pavilion,
 Or else 'twill cost us all another million.

LXXXIV.

Shut up the world at large, let Bedlam out ;
And you will be perhaps surprised to find
All things pursue exactly the same route,
As now with those of soi-disant sound mind.
This I could prove beyond a single doubt,
Were there a jot of sense among mankind ;
But till that point d'appui is found, alas !
Like Archimedes, I leave earth as 'twas.

LXXXV.

Our gentle Adeline had one defect—
Her heart was vacant, though a splendid mansion ;
Her conduct had been perfectly correct,
As she had seen nought claiming its expansion.
A wavering spirit may be easier wreck'd,
Because 'tis frailer, doubtless, than a staunch one ;
But when the latter works its own undoing,
It's inner crash is like an earthquake's ruin.

LXXXVI.

She loved her lord, or thought so ; but that love
Cost her an effort, which is a sad toil,
The stone of Sisyphus, if once we move
Our feelings 'gainst the nature of the soil.
She had nothing to complain of, or reprove,
No bickerings, no connubial turmoil :
Their union was a model to behold,
Serene, and noble,—conjugal, but cold.

LXXXVII.

There was no great disparity of years,
Though much in temper; but they never clash'd :
They moved like stars united in their spheres,
Or like the Rhone by Leman's waters wash'd,
Where mingled and yet separate appears
The river from the lake, all bluely dash'd
Through the serene and placid glassy deep,
Which fain would lull its river-child to sleep.

LXXXVIII.

Now when she once had ta'en an interest
In any thing, however she might flatter
Herself that her intentions were the best—
Intense intentions are a dangerous matter :
Impressions were much stronger than she guess'd,
And gather'd as they run like growing water
Upon her mind ; the more so, as her breast
Was not at first too readily impress'd.

LXXXIX.

But when it was, she had that lurking demon
Of double nature, and thus doubly named—
Firmness yclept in heroes, kings, and seamen,
That is, when they succeed ; but greatly blamed
As obstinacy, both in men and women,
Whene'er their triumph pales, or star is tamed :—
And 'twill perplex the casuists in morality
To fix the due bounds of this dangerous quality

XC.

Had Bonaparte won at Waterloo,
It had been firmness ; now 'tis pertinacity :
Must the event decide between the two ?
I leave it to your people of sagacity
To draw the line between the false and true,
If such can e'er be drawn by man's capacity :
My business is with Lady Adeline,
Who in her way too was a heroine.

XCI.

She knew not her own heart ; then how should I ?
I think not she was then in love with Juan :
If so, she would have had the strength to fly
The wild sensation, unto her a new one :
She merely felt a common sympathy
(I will not say it was a false or true one)
In him, because she thought he was in danger—
Her husband's friend, her own, young, and a stranger.

XCI.

She was, or thought she was, his friend—and this
Without the farce of friendship, or romance
Of Platonism, which leads so oft amiss
Ladies who have studied friendship but in France,
Or Germany, where people purely kiss.
To thus much Adeline would not advance ;
But of such friendship as man's may to man be,
She was as capable as woman can be.

XCIII.

No doubt the secret influence of the sex
 Will there, as also in the ties of blood,
 An innocent predominance annex,
 And tune the concord to a finer mood.
 If free from passion, which all friendship checks,
 And your true feelings fully understood,
 No friend like to a woman earth discovers,
 So that you have not been nor will be lovers.

XCIV.

Love bears within its breast the very germ
 Of change ; and how should this be otherwise ?
 That violent things more quickly find a term
 Is shown through nature's whole analogies ;
 And how should the most fierce of all be firm ?
 Would you have endless lightning in the skies ?
 Methinks Love's very title says enough :
 How should "the tender Passion" e'er be tough ?

XCV.

Alas ! by all experience, seldom yet
 (I merely quote what I have heard from many)
 Had lovers not some reason to regret
 The passion which made Solomon a Zany.
 I've also seen some wives (not to forget
 The marriage state, the best or worst of any)
 Who were the very paragons of wives,
 Yet made the misery of at least two lives.

XCVI.

I've also seen some female friends ('tis odd,
 But true—as, if expedient, I could prove)
 That faithful were through thick and thin, abroad,
 At home, far more than ever yet was Love—
 Who did not quit me w'en Oppression trod
 Upon me; whom no scandal could remove;
 Who fought, and fight, in absence too, my battles,
 Despite the snake Society's loud rattles.

XCVII.

Whether Don Juan and chaste Adeline
 Grew friends in this or any other sense,
 Will be discuss'd hereafter, I opine:
 At present I am glad of a pretence
 To leave them hovering, as the effect is fine,
 And keeps the atrocious reader in suspense;
 The surest way for ladies and for books
 To bait their tender or their tenter hooks.

XCVIII.

Whether they rode, or walk'd or studied Spanish
 To read Don Quixote in the original,
 A pleasure before which all others vanish;
 Whether their talk was of the kind call'd "small,"
 Ar serious, are the topics I must banish
 To the next Canto; where perhaps I shall
 Say something to the purpose, and display
 Considerable talent in my way.

XCIX.

Above all, I beg all men to forbear
 Anticipating aught about the matter :
 They'll only make mistakes about the fair,
 And Juan too, especially the latter.
 And I shall take a much more serious air
 Than I have yet done, in this Epic Satire.
 It is not clear that Adeline and Juan
 Will fall ; but if they do, 'twill be their ruin.

C.

But great things spring from little :—Would you think,
 That in our youth, as dangerous a passion
 As e'er brought man and woman to the brink
 Of ruin, rose from such a slight occasion,
 As few would ever dream could form the link
 Of such a sentimental situation ?
 You'll never guess, I'll bet you millions, milliards—
 It all sprung from 'a harmless game at billiards.

CI.

'Tis strange—but true ; for Truth is always strange,
 Stranger than Fiction : if it could be told,
 How much would novels gain by the exchange !
 How differently the world would men behold !
 How oft would vice and virtue places change !
 The new world would be nothing to the old,
 If some Columbus of the moral seas
 Would show mankind their soul's Antipodes,

CII.

What “ Antres vast and desarts idle,” then
Would be discover’d in the human soul !
What Icebergs in the hearts of mighty men,
With Self-love in the centre as their Pole !
What Anthropophagi is nine of ten
Of those who hold the kingdoms in controul !
Were things but only call’d by their right name,
Cæsar himself would be ashamed of Fame.

NOTES TO CANTO XIV.

---

Note 1, page 282, stanza xxxiii.

And never craned, and made but few faux pas.

Craning.—“To crane,” is, or was, an expression used to denote a Gentleman’s stretching out his neck over a hedge, “to look before he leaped”—a pause in his “vaulting ambition,” which in the field doth occasion some delay and execration in those who may be immediately behind the equestrian sceptic. “Sir, if you don’t choose to take the lead, let me”—was a phrase which generally sent the aspirant on again; and to good purpose: for though “the horse and rider” might fall, they made a gap, through which, and over him and his steed, the field might follow.

Note 2, page 287, stanza xlvi.

Go to the coffee-house, and take another.

In Swift’s or Horace Walpole’s letters I think it is mentioned, that somebody regretting the loss of a friend, was answered by an universal Pylades: “When I lose one, I go to the Saint James’s Coffee-house, and take another.”

I recollect having heard an anecdote of the same kind. Sir W. D. was a great gamester. Coming in one day to the club of which he was a member, he was observed to look melancholy. “What is the matter, Sir William?” cried Hare of facetious memory. “Ah!” replied Sir W. “I have just lost poor Lady D.” “Lost! What at—Quinze or Hazard?” was the consolatory rejoinder of the querist.

Note 3, page 290, stanza lix.

And I refer you to wise Oxenstiern.

The famous Chancellor Oxenstiern said to his son, on the latter expressing his surprise upon the great effects arising from petty causes in the presumed mystery of politics: " You see by this, my son, with how little wisdom the kingdoms of the world are governed."

DON JUAN.

---

CANTO XV.

---

I.

AH!—What should follow slips from my reflection;
Whatever follows ne'ertheless may be
As àpropos of hope or retrospection
As though the lurking thought had follow'd free.
All present life is but an interjection,
An “Oh!” or “Ah!” of joy or misery,
Or a “Ha! ha!” or “Bah!”—a yawn, or “Pooh!”
Of which perhaps the latter is most true.

II.

But, more or less, the whole's a syncopé
Or a singultus—emblems of emotion,
The grand antithesis to great ennui,
Wherewith we break our bubbles on the ocean,
That watery outline of eternity,
Or miniature at least; as is my notion,
Which ministers unto the soul's delight,
In seeing matters which are out of sight

III.

But all are better than the sigh supprest,
 Corroding in the cavern of the heart,
 Making the countenance a mask of rest,
 And turning human nature to an art.
 Few men dare show their thoughts of worst or best;
 Dissimulation always sets apart
 A corner for herself; and therefore fiction
 Is that which passes with least contradiction.

IV.

Ah! who can tell? Or rather, who can not
 Remember, without telling, passion's errors?
 The drainer of oblivion, even the sot,
 Hath got blue devils for his morning mirrors:
 What though on Lethe's stream he seem to float,
 He cannot sink his tremors or his terrors;
 The ruby glass that shakes within his hand,
 Leaves a sad sediment of time's worst sand.

V.

And as for Love—Oh, Love!—We will proceed.
 The Lady Adeline Amundeville,
 A pretty name as one would wish to read,
 Must perch harmonious on my tuneful quill.
 There's music in the sighing of a reed;
 There's music in the gushing of a rill;
 There's music in all things, if men had ears:
 Their earth is but an echo of the spheres.

VI.

The Lady Adeline, right honourable,
And honour'd, ran a risk of growing less so ;
For few of the soft sex are very stable
In their resolves—alas ! that I should say so !
They differ as wine differs from its label,
When once deeanited ;—I presume to guess so,
But will not swear : yet both upon occasion
Till old, may undergo adulteration.

VII.

But Adeline was of the purest vintage,
The unmixed essenee of the grape ; and yet
Bright as a new Napoleon from its mintage,
Or glorious as a diamond richly set ;
A page where time should hesitate to print age,
And for which nature might forego her debt—
Sole creditor whose process doth involve in't
The luck of finding every body solvent.

VIII.

Oh, Death ! thou dunnest of all duns ! thou daily
Knockest at doors, at first with modest tap,
Like a meek tradesman when approaching palely
Some splendid debtor he would take by sap :
But oft denied, as patience 'gins to fail, he
Advances with exasperated rap,
And (if let in) insists, in terms unhandsome,
On ready money or “ a draft on Ransom.”

IX.

Whate'er thou takest, spare awhile poor beauty !
 She is so rare, and thou hast so much prey.
 What though she now and then may slip from duty,
     The more's the reason why you ought to stay.
 Gaunt Gourmand ! with whole nations for your booty,
     You should be civil in a modest way:
 Suppress then some slight feminine diseases,
 And take as many heroes as Heaven pleases.

X.

Fair Adeline, the more ingenuous
     Where she was interested (as was said)
 Because she was not apt, like some of us,
     To like too readily, or too high bred
 To show it—points we need not now discuss—
     Would give up artlessly both heart and head
 Unto such feelings as seem'd innocent,
 For objects worthy of the sentiment.

XI.

Some parts of Juan's history, which Rumour,
     That live Gazette, had scatter'd to disfigure,
 She had heard ; but women hear with more good humour
     Such aberrations than we men of rigour.
 Besides, his conduct, since in England, grew more
     Strict, and his mind assumed a manlier vigour;
 Because he had, like Alcibiades,
 The art of living in all climes with ease.

XII.

His manner was perhaps the more seductive,
Because he ne'er seem'd anxious to seduce :
Nothing affected, studied, or constructive
Of coxcombry or conquest : no abuse
Of his attractions marr'd the fair perspective,
To indicate a Cupidon broke loose,
And seem to say, "resist us if you can"—
Which makes a dandy while it spoils a man.

XIII.

They are wrong—that's not the way to set about it ;
As, if they told the truth, could well be shown.
But right or wrong, Don Juan was without it ;
In fact, his manner was his own alone :
Sincere he was—at least you could not doubt it,
In listening merely to his voice's tone.
The Devil hath not in all his quiver's choice
An arrow for the heart like a sweet voice.

XIV.

By nature soft, his whole address held off
Suspicion : though not timid, his regard
Was such as rather seem'd to keep aloof,
To shield himself, than put you on your guard :
Perhaps 'twas hardly quite assured enough,
But modesty's at times its own reward,
Like virtue ; and the absence of pretension
Will go much further than there's need to mention.

XV.

Serene, accomplish'd, cheerful but not loud ;
 Insinuating without insinuation ;
 Observant of the foibles of the crowd,
 Yet ne'er betraying this in conversation ;
 Proud with the proud, yet courteously proud,
 So as to make them feel he knew his station
 And theirs :—without a struggle for priority,
 He neither brook'd nor claim'd superiority.

XVI.

That is, with men : with women he was what
 They pleased to make or take him for ; and thier
 Imagination's quite enough for that :
 So that the outline's tolerably fair,
 They fill the canvass up—and “ verbum sat.”
 If once their phantasies be brought to bear
 Upon an object, whether sad or playful,
 They can transfigure brighter than a Raphael.

XVII.

Adeline, no deep judge of character,
 Was apt to add a colouring from her own.
 'Tis thus the good will amiably err,
 And eke the wise, as has been often shown.
 Experience is the chief philosopher,
 But saddest when his science is well known :
 And persecuted sages teach the schools
 Their folly in forgetting there are fools.

XVIII.

Was it not so, great Locke? and greater Bacon?
Great Socrates? And thou Diviner still, (1)
Whose lot it is by man to be mistaken,
And thy pure creed made sanction of all ill?
Redeeming worlds to be by bigots shaken,
How was thy toil rewarded? We might fill
Volumes with similar sad illustrations,
But leave them to the conscience of the nations.

XIX.

I perch upon an humbler promontory,
Amidst life's infinite variety:
With no great care for what is nicknamed glory,
But speculating as I cast mine eye
On what may suit or may not suit my story,
And never straining hard to versify,
I rattle on exactly as I'd talk
With any body in a ride or walk.

XX.

I don't know that there may be much ability
Shown in this sort of desultory rhyme;
But there's a conversational facility,
Which may round off an hour upon a time.
Of this I'm sure at least, there's no servility
In mine irregularity of chime,
Which rings what's uppermost of new or hoary,
Just as I feel the "Improvisatore."

XXI.

“ Omnia vult belle Matho dicere—dic aliquando

Et bene, dic neutrum, dic aliquando male.”

The first is rather more than mortal can do;

The second may be sadly done or gaily;

The third is still more difficult to stand to;

The fourth we hear, and see, and say too, daily:

The whole together is what I could wish

To serve in this conundrum of a dish.

XXII.

A modest hope—but modesty's my forte,

And pride my feeble:—let us ramble on.

I meant to make this poem very short,

But now I can't tell where it may not run.

No doubt, if I had wish'd to pay my court

To critics, or to hail the setting sun

Of tyranny of all kinds, my concision

Were more:—but I was born for opposition.

XXIII.

But then 'tis mostly on the weaker side:

So that I verily believe if they

Who now are basking in their full-blown pride,

Were shaken down, and “ dogs had had their day,”

Though at the first I might perchance deride

Their tumble, I should turn the other way,

And wax an Ultra-Royalist in loyalty,

Because I hate even democratic royalty.

XXIV.

I think I should have made a decent spouse,
If I had never proved the soft condition :
I think I should have made monastic vows,
But for my own peculiar superstition :
'Gainst rhyme I never should have knock'd my brows,
Nor broken my own head, nor that of Priscian,
Nor worn the motley mantle of a poet,
If some one had not told me to forego it.

XXV.

But "laissez aller"—Knights and dames I sing,
Such as the times may furnish. 'Tis a flight
Which seems at first to need no lofty wing,
Plumed by Longinus or the Stagyrite :
The difficulty lies in colouring
(Keeping the due proportions still in sight)
With Nature manners which are artificial,
And rend'ring general that which is especial.

XXVI.

The difference is, that in the days of old
Men made the manners ; manners now make men—
Pinned like a flock, and fleeced too in their fold,
At least nine, and a ninth beside of ten,
Now this at all events must render cold
Your writers, who must either draw again
Days better drawn before, or else assume
The present, with their common-place costume.

XXVII.

We'll do our best to make the best on't :—March !

March, my Muse ! If you cannot fly, yet flutter ;
And when you may not be sublime, be arch,

Or starch, as are the edicts statesmen utter.

We surely shall find something worth research :

Columbus found a new world in a cutter,
Or brigantine, or pink, of no great tonnage,
While yet America was in her non-age.

XXVIII.

When Adeline, in all her growing sense

Of Juan's merits and his situation,
Felt on the whole an interest intense—

Partly perhaps because a fresh sensation,
Or that he had an air of innocence,

Which is for innocence a sad temptation,—
As women hate half measures, on the whole,
She 'gan to ponder how to save his soul.

XXIX.

She had a good opinion of advice,

Like all who give and eke receive it gratis,
For which small thanks are still the market price,

Even where the article at highest rate is.

She thought upon the subject twice or thrice,

And morally decided, the best state is
For morals, marriage ; and this question carried,
She seriously advised him to get married.

XXX.

Juan replied, with all becoming deference,
He had a predilection for that tie ;
But that at present, with immediate reference
To his own circumstances, there might lie
Some difficulties, as in his own preference,
Or that of her to whom he might apply ;
That still he'd wed with such or such a lady,
If that they were not married all already.

XXXI.

Next to the making matches for herself,
And daughters, brothers, sisters, kith or kin,
Arranging them like books on the same shelf,
There's nothing women love to dabble in
More (like a stock-holder in growing pelf)
Than match-making in general : 'tis no sin
Certes, but a preventative, and therefore
That is, no doubt, the only reason wherefore.

XXXII.

But never yet (except of course a miss
Unwed, or mistress never to be wed,
Or wed already, who object to this)
Was there chaste dame who had not in her head
Some drama of the marriage unities,
Observed as strictly both at board and bed,
As those of Aristotle, though sometimes
They turn out melodramas or pantomimes.

XXXIII.

They generally have some only son,
 Some heir to a large property, some friend
 In an old family, some gay Sir John,
 Or grave Lord George, with whom perhaps might end
 A line, and leave posterity undone,
 Unless a marriage was applied to mend
 The prospect and their morals : and besides,
 They have at hand a blooming glut of brides.

XXXIV.

From these they will be careful to select,
 For this an heiress, and for that a beauty ;
 For one a songstress who hath no defect,
 For t'other one who promises much duty ;
 For this a lady no one can reject,
 Whose sole accomplishments were quite a booty ;
 A second for her excellent connections ;
 A third, because there can be no objections.

XXXV.

When Rapp the harmonist embargoed marriage (2)
 Of his harmonious settlement—(which flourishes
 Strangely enough as yet without miscarriage,
 Because it breeds no more mouths than it nourishes,
 Without those sad expenses which disparage
 What Nature naturally most encourages)—
 Why call'd he “ Harmony” a state sans wedlock ?
 Now here I have got the preacher at a dead lock.

XXXVI.

Because he either meant to sneer at harmony
 Or marriage, by divorcing them thus oddly
 But whether reverend Rapp learn'd this in Germany
 Or no, 'tis said his sect is rich and godly,
 Pious and pure, beyond what I can term any
 Of ours, although they propagate more broadly.
 My objection's to his title, not his ritual,
 Although I wonder how it grew habitual.

XXXVII.

But Rapp is the reverse of zealous matrons,
 Who favour, malgré Malthus, generation—
 Professors of that genial art, and patrons
 Of all the modest part of propagation,
 Which after all at such a desperate rate runs,
 That half its produce tends to emigration,
 That sad result of passions and potatoes—
 Two weeds which pose our economic Catos.

XXXVIII.

Had Adeline read Malthus? I can't tell;
 I wish she had: his book's the eleventh commandment,
 Which says, “thou shalt not marry”—unless well:
 This he (as far as I can understand) meant:
 'Tis not my purpose on his views to dwell,
 Nor canvass what “so eminent a hand” meant; (3)
 But certes it conducts to lives ascetic,
 Or turning marriage into arithmetic.

XXXIX.

But Adeline, who probably presumed
 That Juan had enough of maintenance,
 Or separate maintenance, in case 'twas doom'd—
 As on the whole it is an even chance
 That bridegrooms after they are fairly groom'd,
 May retrograde a little in the dance
 Of marriage—(which might form a painter's fame,
 Like Holbein's “Dance of Death”—but 'tis the same);—

XL.

But Adeline determined Juan's wedding
 In her own mind, and that's enough for woman.
 But then, with whom? There was the sage Miss Reading,
 Miss Raw, Miss Flaw, Miss Showman, and Miss
 Knowman,
 And the two fair coheiresses Giltbedding.
 She deemed his merits something more than common :
 All these were unobjectionable matches,
 And might go on, if well wound up, like watches.

XLI.

There was Miss Millpond, smooth as summer's sea,
 That usual paragon, an only daughter,
 Who seem'd the cream of equanimity,
 Till skimm'd---and then there was some milk and water,
 With a slight shade of Blue too it might be,
 Beneath the surface ; but what did it matter?
 Love's riotous, but marriage should have quiet,
 And, being consumptive, live on a milk diet.

XLII.

And then there was the Miss Audacia Shoestring,
A dashing demoiselle of good estate,
Whose heart was fix'd upon a star or bluestring ;
But whether English Dukes grew rare of late,
Or that she had not harp'd upon the true string,
By which such sirens can attract our great,
She took up with some foreign younger brother,
A Russ or Turk---the one's as good as t'other.

XLIII.

And then there was---but why should I go on,
Unless the ladies should go off?---there was
Indeed a certain fair and fairy one,
Of the best class, and better than her class,---
Aurora Raby, a young star who shone
O'er life, too sweet an image for such glass,
A lovely being, scarcely form'd or moulded,
A Rose with all its sweetest leaves yet folded ;

XLIV.

Rich, noble, but an orphan ; left an only
Child to the care of guardians good and kind ;
But still her aspect had an air so lonely !
Blood is not water ; and where shall we find
Feelings of youth like those which overthrown lie
By death, when we are left, alas ! behind,
To feel, in friendless palaces, a home
Is wanting, and our best ties in the tomb ?

XLV.

Early in years, and yet more infantine
 In figure, she had something of sublime
 In eyes which sadly shone, as seraphs' shine.
 All youth—but with an aspect beyond time ;
 Radiant and grave—as pitying man's decline ;
 Mournful—but mournful of another's crime,
 She look'd as if she sat by Eden's door,
 And grieved for those who could return no more.

XLVI.

She was a Catholic too, sincere, austere,
 As far as her own gentle heart allow'd,
 And deem'd that fallen worship far more dear
 Perhaps because 'twas fallen : her sires were proud
 Of deeds and days when they had fill'd the ear
 Of nations, and had never bent or bow'd
 To novel power ; and as she was the last,
 She held their old faith and old feelings fast.

XLVII.

She gazed upon a world she scarcely knew
 As seeking not to know it ; silent, lone,
 As grows a flower, thus quietly she grew,
 And kept her heart serene within its zone.
 There was awe in the homage which she drew ;
 Her spirit seem'd as seated on a throne
 Apart from the surrounding world, and strong
 In its own strength—most strange in one so young !

XLVIII.

Now it so happen'd, in the catalogue
Of Adeline, Aurora was omitted,
Although her birth and wealth had given her vogue
Beyond the charmers we have already cited ;
Her beauty also seem'd to form no clog
Against her being mention'd as well fitted,
By many virtues to be worth the trouble
Of single gentlemen who would be double.

XLIX.

And this omission, like that of the bust
Of Brutus at the pageant of Tiberius,
Made Juan wonder, as no doubt he must.
This he express'd half smiling and half serious ;
When Adeline replied with some disgust,
And with an air, to say the least, imperious,
She marvell'd " what he saw in such a baby
" As that prim, silent, cold Aurora Raby ?"

L.

Juan rejoined—" She was a Catholic ;
" And therefore fittest, as of his persuasion ;
" Since he was sure his mother would fall sick,
" And the Pope thunder excommunication,
" If—" But here Adeline, who seem'd to pique
Herself extremely on the inoculation
Of others with her own opinion, stated—
As usual—the same reason which she late did.

LI.

And wherefore not? A reasonable reason;
 If good, is none the worse for repetition;
 If bad, the best way's certainly to tease on
     And amplify: you lose much by concision,
 Whereas insisting in or out of season
     Convinces all men, even a politician;
 Or—what is just the same—it wearies out.
 So the end's gain'd, what signifies the route?

LII.

Why Adeline had this slight prejudice—
 For prejudice it was—against a creature
 As pure as sanctity itself from vice,
     With all the added charm of form and feature,
 For me appears a question far too nice,
     Since Adeline was liberal by Nature;
 But Nature's Nature, and has more caprices
 Than I have time, or will, to take to pieces.

LIII.

Perhaps she did not like the quiet way
     With which Aurora on those baubles look'd,
 Which charm most people in their earlier day:
     For there are few things by mankind less brook'd,
 And womankind too, if we so may say,
     Than finding thus their genius stand rebuked,
 Like "Anthony's by Cæsar," by the few
 Who look upon them as they ought to do.

LIV.

It was not envy—Adeline had none ;
Her place was far beyond it, and her mind.
It was not scorn—which could not light on one
Whose greatest fault was leaving few to find.
It was not jealousy, I think :—but shun
Following the “ ignes fatui” of mankind.
It was not—but ’tis easier far, alas !
To say what it was not, than what it was.

LV.

Little Aurora deem’d she was the theme
Of such discussion. She was there a guest,
A beauteous ripple of the brilliant stream
Of rank and youth, though purer than the rest,
Whieh flow’d on for a moment in the beam
Time shied a moment o’er each sparkling crest.
Had she known this, she would have calmly smiled—
She had so much, or little of the child.

LVI.

The dashing and proud air of Adeline
Imposed not upon her : she saw her blaze
Mueh as she would have seen a glowworm shine,
Then turn’d unto the stars for loftier rays ;
Juan was something she could not divine,
Being no Sibyl in the new world’s ways ;
Yet she was nothing dazzled by the meteor,
Because she did not pin her faith on feature.

LVII.

His fame too,—for he had that kind of fame
Which sometimes plays the deuce with womankind,
A heterogeneous mass of glorious blame,
Half virtues and whole vices being combined;
Faults which attract because they are not tame;
Follies trick'd out so brightly that they blind:—
These seals upon her wax made no impression,
Such was her coldness or her self-possession.

LVIII.

Juan knew nought of such a character—
High, yet resembling not his lost Haidée
Yet each was radiant in her proper sphere:
The Island girl, bred up by the lone sea,
More warm, as lovely, and not less sincere,
Was Nature's all; Aurora could not be
Nor would be thus;—the difference in them
Was such as lies between a flower and gem.

LIX.

Having wound up with this sublime comparison,
Methinks we may proceed upon our narrative,
And, as my friend Scott says “ I sound my Warison; ”
Scott, the superlative of my comparative—
Scott, who can paint your Christian knight or Saracen,
Serf, Lord, Man, with such skill as none would share
it, if
There had not been one Shakspeare and Voltaire,
Of one or both of whom he seems the heir.

LX.

I say, in my slight way I may proceed
To play upon the surface of Humanity.
I write the world, nor care if the world read,
At least for this I cannot spare its vanity.
My Muse hath bred, and still perhaps may breed
More foes by this same scroll: when I began it, I Thought that it might turn out so—now I know it,
But still I am, or was, a pretty poet.

LXI.

The conference or congress (for it ended
As congresses of late do) of the Lady
Adeline and Don Juan rather blended
Some acids with the sweets—for she was heady;
But, ere the matter could be marr'd or mended,
The silvery bell rung, not for “dinner ready,”
But for that hour, called half-hour, given to dress,
Though ladies’ robes seem scant enough for less.

LXII.

Great things were now to be achieved at table,
With massy plate for armour, knives and forks
For weapons; but what Muse since Homer’s able
(His feasts are not the worst part of his works)
To draw up in array a single day-bill
Of modern dinners? where more mystery lurks
In soups or sauces, or a sole ragout,
Than witches, b—ches, or physicians brew.

LXIII.

There was a goodly “ soupe à la bonne femme,”
 Though God knows whence it came from; there was too
 A turbot for relief of those who cram,
 Relieved with dindon à la Parigeux;
 There also was—the sinner that I am!
 How shall I get this gourmand stanza through?—
 Soupe à la Beauveau, whose relief was Dory,
 Relieved itself by pork, for greater glory.

LXIV.

But I must crowd all into one grand mess
 Or mass; for should I stretch into detail,
 My Muse would run much more into excess,
 Than when some squeamish people deem her frail.
 But though a “ bonne vivante,” I must confess
 Her stomach’s not her peccant part: this tale
 However doth require some slight refection,
 Just to relieve her spirits from dejection.

LXV.

Fowls à la Condé, slices eke of salmon,
 With sauces Genevoises, and haunch of venison;
 Wines too which might again have slain young Ammon—
 A man like whom I hope we shan’t see many soon;
 They also set a glazed Westphalian ham on,
 Wheron Apicius would bestow his benison;
 And then there was Champagne with foaming whirls,
 As white as Cleopatra’s melted pearls.

LXVI.

Then there was God knows what “ à l’Allemande,”
 “ A l’Espagnole,” “ timballe,” and Salpicón”—
 With things I can’t withstand or understand,
 Though swallow’d with much zest upon the whole ;
 And “ entremets” to piddle with at hand,
 Gently to lull down the subsiding soul ;
 While great Lucullus’ (Rôle triumphal) muffles—(There’s Fume)—young Partridge fillets, deck’d with truffles.(4)

LXVII.

What are the fillets on the victor’s brow
 To these ? They are rags or dust. Where is the arch
 Which nodded to the nation’s spoils below ?
 Where the triumphal chariot’s haughty march ?
 Gone to where victories must like dinners go.
 Further I shall not follow the research :
 But oh ! ye modern heroes with your cartridges,
 When will your names lend lustre even to partridges ?

LXVIII.

Those truffles too are no bad accessaries,
 Follow’d by “ Petits puits d’Amour”—a dish
 Of which perhaps the cookery rather varies,
 So every one may dress it to his wish,
 According to the best of dictionaries,
 Which encyclopedise both flesh and fish ;
 But even sans “ confitures,” it no less true is,
 There’s pretty picking in those “ petits puits.”(5)

LXIX.

The mind is lost in mighty contemplation
 Of intellect expended on two courses ;
 And indigestion's grand multiplication
 Requires arithmetic beyond my forces.
 Who would suppose, from Adam's simple ration,
 That cookery could have call'd forth such resources,
 As form a science and a nomenclature
 From out the commonest demands of nature ?

LXX.

The glasses jingled, and the palates tingled ;
 The diners of celebrity dined well ;
 The ladies with more moderation mingled
 In the feast, pecking less than I can tell ;
 Also the younger men too ; for a springald
 Can't like ripe age in gourmandise excel,
 But thinks less of good eating than the whisper
 When seated next him) of some pretty lisper.

LXXI.

Alas ! I must leave undescribed the gibier,
 The salmi, the consommé, the purée,
 All which I use to make my rhymes run glibber
 Than could roast beef in our rough John Bull way :
 I must not introduce even a spare rib here,
 " Bubble and squeak" would spoil my liquid lay :
 But I have dined, and must forego, alas !
 The chaste description even of a " Becasse,"

LXXII.

And fruits, and ice, and all that art refines
From nature for the service of the goût,---
Taste or the gout,---pronounce it as inclines
Your stomach ! Ere you dine, the French will do ;
But after, there are sometimes certain signs
Which prove plain English truer of the two.
Hast ever had the gout? I have not had it---
But I may have, and you too, Reader, dread it.

LXXIII.

The simple olives, best allies of wine,
Must I pass over in my bill of fare ?
I must, although a favourite “plat” of mine
In Spain, and Lucca, Athens, every where :
On them and bread ’twas oft my luck to dine,
The grass my table-cloth, in open air,
On Sunium or Hymettus, like Diogènes,
Of whom half my philosophy the progeny is.

LXXIV.

Amidst this tumult of fish, flesh, and fowl,
And vegetables, all in masquerade,
The guests were placed according to their roll,
But various as the various meats display'd :
Don Juan sat next an “à l'Espagnole”
No damsel, but a dish, as hath been said ;
But so far like a lady, that 'twas drest
Superbly, and contained a world of zest.

LXXV.

By some odd chance too he was placed between
 Aurora and the Lady Adeline—
 A situation difficult, I ween,
 For man therein, with eyes and heart, to dine.
 Also the conference which we have seen
 Was not such as to encourage him to shine ;
 For Adeline, addressing few words to him,
 With two transcendant eyes seemed to look through him.

LXXVI.

I sometimes almost think that eyes have ears :
 This much is sure, that out of earshot, things
 Are somehow echoed to the pretty dears,
 Of which I can't tell whence their knowledge springs ;
 Like that same mystic music of the spheres,
 Which no one hears so loudly though it rings.
 'Tis wonderful how oft the sex have heard
 Long dialogues which pass'd without a word !

LXXVII.

Aurora sat with that indifference
 Which piques a preux Chevalier---as it ought :
 Of all offences that's the worst offence,
 Which seems to hint you are not worth a thought.
 Now Juan, though no coxcomb in pretence,
 Was not exactly pleased to be so caught ;
 Like a good ship entangled among ice,
 And after so much excellent advice.

LXXVIII.

To his gay nothings, nothing was replied,
Or something which was nothing, as urbanity
Required. Aurora scarcely look'd aside,
Nor even smiled enough for any vanity.
The devil was in the girl ! Could it be pride ?
Or modesty, or absence, or inanity ?
Heaven knows ! But Adeline's malicious eyes
Sparkled with her successful prophesies.

LXXIX.

And look'd as much as if to say, " I said it ;"—
A kind of triumph I'll not recommend,
Because it sometimes, as I've seen or read it,
Both in the case of lover and of friend,
Will pique a gentleman, for his own credit,
To bring what was a jest to a serious end :
For all men prophesy what is or was,
And hate those who won't let them come to pass.

LXXX.

Juan was drawn thus into some attentions,
Slight but select, and just enough to express,
To females of perspicuous comprehensions,
That he would rather make them more than less.
Aurora at the last (so history mentions,
Though probably much less a fact than guess)
So far relax'd her thoughts from their sweet prison,
As once or twice to smile, if not to listen.

LXXXI.

From answering, she began to question : this
 With her was rare ; and Adeline, who as yet
 Thought her predictions went not much amiss,
 Began to dread she'd thaw to a coquette—
 So very difficult, they say, it is
 To keep extremes from meeting, when once set
 In motion ; but she here too much refined—
 Aurora's spirit was not of that kind.

LXXXII.

But Juan had a sort of winning way,
 A proud humility, if such there be,
 Which show'd such deference to what females say,
 As if each charming word were a decree,
 His tact too temper'd him from grave to gay,
 And taught him when to be reserved or free :
 He had the art of drawing people out,
 Without their seeing what he was about.

LXXXIII.

Aurora, who in her indifference
 Confounded him in common with the crowd
 Of flutterers, though she deem'd he had more sense
 Than whispering foplings, or than witlings loud,—
 Commenced (from such slight things will great commence)
 To feel that flattery which attracts the proud
 Rather by deference than compliment,
 And wins even by a delicate dissent.

LXXXIV.

And then he had good looks ;—that point was carried
    Nem. con. amongst the women, which I grieve
To say leads oft to crim. con. with the married—
    A case which to the Juries we may leave,
Since with digressions we too long have tarried.

Now though we know of old that looks deceive,
And always have done, somehow these good looks
Make more impression than the best of books.

LXXXV.

Aurora, who look'd more on books than faces,
    Was very young, although so very sage,
Admiring more Minerva than the Graces,
    Especially upon a printed page.
But Virtue's self, with all her tightest laces,
    Has not the natural stays of strict old age ;
And Socrates, that model of all duty,
    Own'd to a penchant, though discreet, for beauty.

LXXXVI.

And girls of sixteen are thus far Socratic,
    But innocently so, as Socrates :
And really, if the sage sublime and Attic
    At seventy years had phantasies like these,
Which Plato in his dialogues dramatic
    Has shown, I know not why they should displease
In virgins—always in a modest way,
    Observe ; for that with me's a “ sine quâ. ” (6)

LXXXVII.

Also observe, that like the great Lord Coke,
 (See Littleton) whene'er I have expressed
 Opinions two, which at first sight may look
 Twin opposites, the second is the best.
 Perhaps I have a third too in a nook,
 Or none at all—which seems a sorry jest ;
 But if a writer should be quite consistent,
 How could he possibly show things existent ?

LXXXVIII.

If people contradict themselves, can I
 Help contradicting them and every body,
 Even my veracious self!—but that's a lie ;
 I never did so, never will,—how should I ?
 He who doubts all things, nothing can deny ;
 Truth's fountains may be clear—her streams are muddy,
 And cut through such canals of contradiction,
 That she must often navigate o'er fiction.

LXXXIX.

Apologue, fable, poesy, and parable,
 Are false, but may be render'd also true
 By those who sow them in a land that's arable.
 'Tis wonderful what fable will not do !
 'Tis said it makes reality more bearable :
 But what's reality ? Who has its clue ?
 Philosophy ? No ; she too much rejects.
 Religion ? Yes; but which of all her sects ?

XC.

Some millions must be wrong, that's pretty clear:
Perhaps it may turn out that all were right.
God help us! Since we have need on our career
To keep our holy beacons always bright,
'Tis time that some new Prophet should appear,
Or old indulge man with a second sight.
Opinions wear out in some thousand years,
Without a small refreshment from the spheres.

XCI.

But here again, why will I thus entangle
Myself with metaphysics? None can hate
So much as I do any kind of wrangle:
And yet, such is my folly, or my fate,
I always knock my head against some angle
About the present, past, or future state.
Yet I wish well to Trojan and to Tyrian,
For I was bred a moderate Presbyterian.

XCII.

But though I am a temperate Theologian,
And also meek as a Metaphysician,
Impartial between Tyrian and Trojan,
As Eldon on a lunatic commission,—
In politics, my duty is to show John
Bull something of the lower world's condition.
It makes my blood boil like the springs of Hecla,
To see men let these scoundrel Sovereigns break law.

XCIII.

But politics, and policy, and piety,
 Are topics which I sometimes introduce,
 Not only for the sake of their variety,
 But as subservient to a moral use;
 Because my business is to dress society
 And stuff with sage that very verdant goose.
 And now, that we may furnish with some matter all
 Tastes, we are going to try the supernatural

XCIV.

And now I will give up all argument;
 And positively henceforth no temptation.
 Shall "fool me to the top up of my bent;"—
 Yes I'll begin a thorough reformation.
 Indeed I never knew what people meant
 By deeming that my Muse's conversation
 Was dangerous;—I think she is as harmless
 As some who labour more and yet may charm less.

XCV.

Grim reader! did you ever see a ghost?
 No; but you have heard—I understand—be dumb!
 And don't regret the time you may have lost,
 For you have got that pleasure still to come:
 And do not think I mean to sneer at most
 Of these things, or by ridicule benumb
 That source of the sublime and the mysterious:—
 For certain reasons, my belief is serious.

XCVI.

Serious? You laugh:—you may; that will I not;
My smiles must be sincere or not at all.
I say I do believe a haunted spot
Exists—and where? That shall I not recal,
Because I'd rather it should be forgot.
“Shadows the soul of Richard” may appal.
In short, upon that subject I've some qualms very
Like those of the Philosopher of Malmsbury.(7)

XCVII.

The night (I sing by night—sometimes an owl,
And now and then a nightingale)---is dim,
And the loud shriek of sage Minerva's fowl
Rattles around me her discordant hymn:
Old portraits from old walls upon me scowl—
I wish to heaven they would not look so grim;
The dying embers dwindle in the grate—
I think too that I have sate up too late:

XCVIII.

And therefore, though 'tis by no means my way
To rhyme at noon---when I have other things
To think of, if I ever think,---I say
I feel some chilly midnight shudderings.
And prudently postpone, until mid-day,
Treating a topic which alas! but brings
Shadows;---but you must be in my condition
Before you learn to call this superstition.

XCIX.

Between two worlds life hovers like a star,
'Twixt night and morn, upon the horizon's verge :
How little do we know that which we are !
    How less what we may be ! The eternal surge
Of time and tide rolls on, and bears afar
Our bubbles ; as the old burst, new emerge,
Lash'd from the foam of ages ; while the graves
Of empires heave but like some passing waves.

NOTES TO CANTO XV.

---

Note 1, page 317, stanza xviii.

*And thou Diviner still,
Whose lot it is by man to be mistaken.*

As it is necessary in these times to avoid ambiguity, I say, that I mean, by "Diviner still," CHRIST. If ever God was Man—or Man God—he was both. I never arraigned his creed, but the use—or abuse—made of it. Mr. Canning one day quoted Christianity to sanction Negro Slavery, and Mr. Wilberforce had little to say in reply. And was Christ crucified, that black men might be scourged? If so, he had better been born a Mulatto, to give both colours an equal chance of freedom, or at least salvation.

Note 2, page 322, stanza xxxv.

*When Rapp the Harmonist embargoed marriage
In his harmonious settlement.*

This extraordinary and flourishing German colony in America does not entirely exclude matrimony, as the "Shakers" do; but lays such restrictions upon it as prevent more than a certain quantum of births within a certain number of years; which births (as Mr. Hulme observes) generally arrive "in a little flock like those of a farmer's lambs, all within the same month perhaps." These Harmonists (so called from the name of their settlement) are represented as a remarkably flourishing, pious, and quiet people: See the various recent writers on America.

Note 3, page 323, stanza xxxviii.

Nor canvass what "so eminent a hand" meant.

Jacob Tonson, according to Mr. Pope, was accustomed to call his writers "able pens"---"persons of honour," and especially "eminent hands." Vide Correspondence, &c. &c.

Note 4, page 333, stanza lxvi.

While great Lucullus' (Rôbe triumphal) muffles---

(There's Fame)—young Partridge fillets, deck'd with truffles.

A dish "à la Lucullus." This hero who conquered the East, has left his more extended celebrity to the transplantation of cherries (which he first brought into Europe) and the nomenclature of some very good dishes;---and I am not sure that (barring indigestion) he has not done more service to mankind by his cookery than by his conquests. A cherry tree may weigh against a bloody laurel: besides, he has contrived to earn celebrity from both.

Note 5, page 333, stanza lxviii.

But even sans "confitures," it no less true is,

There's pretty picking in those "petits puits."

"Petit puits d'amour garnis des confitures," a classical and well-known dish for part of the flank of a second course.

Note 6, page 339, stanza lxxxvi.

For that with me's a "sine quâ."

Subauditur "Non;" omitted for the sake of euphony.

Note 7, page 363, stanza xcvi.

*In short upon that subject I've some qualms very
Like those of the Philosopher of Mulmsbury.*

Hobbes: who, doubting of his own soul, paid that compliment to the souls of other people as to decline their visits, of which he had some apprehension.

CANTO XVI.

---

I.

THE antique Persians taught three useful things,
To draw the bow, to ride, and speak the truth.
This was the mode of Cyrus, best of kings---
A mode adopted since by modern youth.
Bows have they, generally with two strings ;
Horses they ride without remorse or ruth ;
At speaking truth perhaps they are less clever.
But draw the long bow better now than ever.

II.

The cause of this effect, or this defect,
“ For this effect defective comes by cause,”—
Is what I have not leisure to inspect ;
But this I must say in my own applause,
Of all the Muses that I recollect,
Whate'er may be her follies or her flaws
In some things, mine's beyond all contradiction
The most sincere that ever dealt in fiction.

III.

And as she treats all things, and ne'er retreats
 From any thing, this Epic will contain
 A wilderness of the most rare conceits,
 Which you might elsewhere hope to find in vain.
 'Tis true there be some bitters with the sweets,
 Yet mixed so slightly that you can't complain,
 But wonder they so few are, since my tale is
 " De rebus cunctis et quibusdam aliis."

IV.

But of all truths which she has told, the most
 True is that which she is about to tell.
 I said it was a story of a ghost—
 What then? I only know it so befel.
 Have you explored the limits of the coast,
 Where all the dwellers of the earth must dwell?
 'Tis time to strike such puny doubters dumb as
 The sceptics who would not believe Columbus.

V.

Some people would impose now with authority,
 Turpin's or Monmouth Geoffry's Chronicle;
 Men whose historical superiority
 Is always greatest at a miracle.
 But Saint Augustine has the great priority,
 Who bids all men believe the impossible,
Because 'tis so. Who nibble, scribble, quibble, he Quiets at once with "quia impossibile."

VI.

And therefore, mortals, cavil not at all;
Believe:—if 'tis improbable, you must;
And if it is impossible, you shall:
'Tis always best to take things upon trust.
I do not speak profanely, to recal
Those holier mysteries, which the wise and just
Receive as gospel, and which grow more rooted,
As all truths must, the more they are disputed.

VII.

I merely mean to say what Johnson said,
That in the course of some six thousand years,
All nations have believed that from the dead
A visitant at intervals appears:
And what is strangest upon this strange head,
Is, that whatever bar the reason rears
'Gainst such belief, there's something stronger still
In its behalf, let those deny who will.

VIII.

The dinner and the soirée too were done,
The supper too discussed, the dames admired,
The banqueteers had dropped off one by one—
The song was silent, and the dance expired:
The last thin petticoats were vanished, gone
Like fleecy clouds into the sky retired,
And nothing brighter gleamed through the saloon
Than dying tapers--and the peeping moon.

IX.

The evaporation of a joyous day
 Is like the last glass of champagne, without
 The foam which made its virgin bumper gay ;
 Or like a system coupled with a doubt ;
 Or like a soda bottle when its spray
 Has sparkled and let half its spirit out
 Or like a billow left by storms behind,
 Without the animation of the wind :

X.

Or like an opiate which brings troubled rest,
 Or none ; or like—like nothing that I know
 Except itself ;—such is the human breast ;
 A thing, of which similitudes can show
 No real likeness,—like the old Tyrian vest
 Dyed purple, none at present can tell how,
 If from a shell-fish or from cochineal. (1)
 So perish every tyrant's robe piece-meal !

XI.

But next to dressing for a rout or ball,
 Undressing is a woe ; our robe de chambre
 May sit like that of Nessus and recal
 Thoughts quite as yellow, but less clear than amber.
 Titus exclaimed, “ I've lost a day ! ” Of all
 The nights and days most people can remember,
 (I have had of both, some not to be disdained)
 I wish they'd state how many they have gained.

XII.

And Juan, on retiring for the night,
Felt restless, and perplexed, and compromised ;
He thought Aurora Raby's eyes more bright
Than Adeline (such is advice) advised ;
If he had known exactly his own plight,
He probably would have philosophised ;
A great resource to all, and ne'er denied
Till wanted ; therefore Juan only sighed.

XIII.

He sighed ;—the next resource is the full moon,
Where all sighs are deposited ; and now
It happened luckily, the chaste orb shone
As clear as such a climate will allow ;
And Juan's mind was in the proper tone
To hail her with the apostrophe—“ Oh, Thou !”
Of amatory egotism the Tuism,
Which further to explain would be a truism.

XIV.

But lover, poet, or astronomer,
Shepherd, or swain, whoever may behold,
Feel some abstraction when they gaze on her :
Great thoughts we catch from thence (besides a cold
Sometimes, unless my feelings rather err;) )
Deep secrets to her rolling light are told ;
The ocean's tides and mortal's brains she sways.
And also hearts, if there be truth in lays.

XV.

Juan felt somewhat pensive, and disposed
For contemplation rather than his pillow;
The Gothic chamber, where he was enclosed,
Let in the rippling sound of the lake's billow,
With all the mystery by midnight caused;
Below his window waved (of course) a willow;
And he stood gazing out on the cascade
That flashed and after darkened in the shade.

XVI.

Upon his table or his toilet,---which
Of these is not exactly ascertained---
(I state this, for I am cautious to a pitch
Of nicety, where a fact is to be gained)
A lamp burned high, while he leant from a niche,
Where many a Gothic ornament remained,
In chiselled stone and painted glass, and all
That time has left our fathers of their Hall.

XVII.

Then as the night was clear though cold, he threw
His chamber-door wide open---and went forth
Into a gallery, of a sombre hue,
Long, furnished with old pictures of great worth,
Of knights and dames heroic and chaste too,
As doubtless should be people of high birth.
But by dim lights the portraits of the dead
Have something ghastly, desolate, and dread.

XVIII.

The forms of the grim knights and pictured saints
Look living in the moon; and as you turn
Backward and forward to the echoes faint
Of your own footsteps—voices from the urn
Appear to wake, and shadows wild and quaint
Start from the frames which fence their aspects stern,
As if to ask how yon can dare to keep
A vigil there, where all but death should sleep.

XIX.

And the pale smile of Beauties in the grave,
The charms of other days, in starlight gleams
Glimmer on high; their buried locks still wave
Along the canvass; their eyes glance like dreams
On ours, or spars within some dusky cave,
But death is imaged in their shadowy beams.
A picture is the past; even ere its frame
Be gilt, who sate hath ceased to be the same.

XX.

As Juan mused on mutability,
Or on his mistress—terms synonymous—
No sound except the echo of his sigh
Or step ran sadly through that antique house,
When suddenly he heard, or thought so, nigh,
A supernatural agent—or a mouse,
Whose little nibbling rustle will embarrass
Most people as it plays along the arras.

XXI.

It was no mouse, but lo ! a monk, arrayed
In cowl and beads and dusky garb, appeared,
Now in the moonlight, and now lapsed in shade,
With steps that trod as heavy, yet unheard ;
His garments only a slight murmur made ;
He moved as shadowy as the sisters weird,
But slowly ; and as he passed Juan by,
Glanced, without pausing, on him a bright eye.

XXII.

Juan was petrified ; he had heard a hint
Of such a spirit in these halls of old,
But thought, like most men, there was nothing in't
Beyond the rumour which such spots unfold,
Coined from surviving superstition's mint,
Which passes ghosts in currency like gold,
But rarely seen, like gold compared with paper.
And did he see this ? or was it a vapour ?

XXIII.

Once, twice, thrice passed, repassed—the thing of air,
Or earth beneath, or heaven, or t'other place ;
And Juan gazed upon it with a stare,
Yet could not speak or move ; but, on its base
As stands a statue, stood : he felt his hair
Twine like a knot of snakes around his face ;
He taxed his tongue for words, which were not granted,
To ask the reverend person what he wanted.

XXIV.

The third time, after a still longer pause,
The shadow passed away—but where? the hall
Was long, and thus far there was no great cause
To think his vanishing unnatural:
Doors there were many, through which, by the laws
Of physics, bodies whether short or tall
Might come or go; but Juan could not state
Through which the spectre seemed to evaporate.

XXV.

He stood—how long he knew not, but it seemed
An age—expectant, powerless, with his eyes
Strained on the spot where first the figure gleamed;
Then by degrees recalled his energies,
And would have passed the whole off as a dream,
But could not wake; he was, he did surmise,
Walking already, and returned at length
Back to his chamber, shorn of half his strength.

XXVI.

All there was as he left it: still his taper
Burnt, and not blue, as modest tapers use,
Receiving sprites with sympathetic vapour;
He rubbed his eyes, and they did not refuse
Their office: he took up an old newspaper;
The paper was right easy to peruse;
He read an article the king attacking,
And a long eulogy of “Patent Blacking.”

XXVII.

This savoured of this world ; but his hand shook—
He shut his door, and after having read
A paragraph, I think about Horne Tooke,
Undrest, and rather slowly went to bed.
There couched all snugly on his pillow's nook,
With what he had seen his phantasy he fed,
And though it was no opiate, slumber crept
Upon him by degrees, and so he slept.

XXVIII.

He woke betimes ; and, as may be supposed,
Pondered upon his visitant or vision,
And whether it ought not to be disclosed,
At risk of being quizzed for superstition.
The more he thought, the more his mind was posed ;
In the mean time, his valet, whose precision
Was great, because his master brooked no less,
Knocked to inform him it was time to dress.

XXIX.

He dressed ; and like young people, he was wont
To take some trouble with his toilet, but
This morning rather spent less time upon 't ;
Aside his very mirror soon was put;
His curls fell negligently o'er his front,
His clothes were not curbed to their usual cut,
His very neckcloth's Gordian knot was tied
Almost an hair's breadth too much on one side,

XXX.

And when he walked down into the saloon,
He sate him pensive o'er a dish of tea,
Which he perhaps had not discovered soon,
Had it not happened scalding hot to be,
Which made him have recourse unto his spoon ;
So much distract he was, that all could see
That something was the matter—Adeline
The first—but what she could not well divine.

XXXI.

She looked, and saw him pale, and turned as pale
Herself; then hastily looked down, and muttered
Something, but what's not stated in my tale.
Lord Henry said, his muffin was ill buttered;
The Duchess of Fitz-Fulke played with her veil,
And looked at Juan hard, but nothing uttered.
Aurora Raby, with her large dark eyes,
Surveyed him with a kind of calm surprise.

XXXII.

But seeing him all cold and silent still,
And every body wondering more or less,
Fair Adeline enquired, “ If he were ill ? ”
He started, and said, “ Yes—no---rather---yes.”
The family physician had great skill,
And being present, now began to express
His readiness to feel his pulse and tell
The cause, but Juan said, “ He was quite well.”

XXXIII.

“ Quite well; yes ; no.”—These answers were mysterious,
 And yet his looks appeared to sanction both,
 However they might savour of delirious ;
 Something like illness of a sudden growth
 Weighed on his spirit, though by no means serious.
 But for the rest, as he himself seemed loth
 To state the case, it might be ta'en for granted
 It was not the physician that he wanted.

XXXIV.

Lord Henry, who had now discussed his chocolate,
 Also the muffin whereof he complained,
 Said, Juan had not got his usual look elate,
 At which he marvelled since it had not rained ;
 Then asked her Grace what news were of the Duke of late?
Her Grace replied, his Grace was rather pained
 With some slight, light, hereditary twinges
 Of gout, which rusts aristocratic hinges.

XXXV.

Then Henry turned to Juan and addressed
 A few words of condolence on his state:
 “ You look,” quoth he, “ as if you had had your rest
 Broke in upon by the Black Friar of late.”
 “ What Friar?” said Juan ; and he did his best
 To put the question with an air sedate,
 Or careless ; but the effort was not valid
 To hinder him from growing still more pallid.

XXXVI.

“ Oh ! have you never heard of the Black Friar ?
The spirit of these walls ?”—“ In truth not I.”
“ Why Fame—but Fame you know’s sometimes a liar—
Tells an odd story, of which by the bye :
Whether with time the spectre has grown shyer,
Or that our sires had a more gifted eye
For such sights, though the tale is half believed,
The Friar of late has not been oft perceived.

XXXVII.

“ The last time was — ” “ I pray,” said Adeline,—
(Who watched the changes of Don Juan’s brow,
And from its contexts thought she could divine
Connections stronger than he chose to avow
With this same legend)—“ if you but design
To jest, you’ll choose some other theme just now,
Because the present tale has oft been told,
And is not much improved by growing old.”

XXXVIII.

“ Jest,” quoth Milor, “ Why, Adeline, you know
That we ourselves---’twas in the Honey Moon—
Saw——” “ Well, no matter, ’twas so long ago ;
But, come, I’ll set your story to a tune.”
Graceful as Dian when she draws her bow,
She seized her harp, whose strings were kindled soon
As touched, and plaintively began to play
The air of “ ’Twas a Friar of Orders Grey.”

XXXIX.

" But add the words," cried Henry " which you made ;
 For Adeline is half a poetess,"
 Turning round to the rest, he smiling said.

Of course the others could not but express
 In courtesy their wish to see displayed
 By one three talents, for there were no less—
 The voice, the words, the harper's skill, at once
 Could hardly be united by a dunce.

XL.

After some fascinating hesitation,—
 The charming of these charmers, who seem bound,
 I can't tell why, to this dissimulation,---
 Fair Adeline, with eyes fixed on the ground
 At first, then kindling into animation,
 Added her sweet voice to the lyric sound,
 And sang with much simplicity,---a merit
 Not the less precious, that we seldom hear it.

I.

Beware ! beware ! of the Black Friar,
 Who sitteth by Norman stone,
 For he mutters his prayer in the midnight air.
 And his mass of the days that are gone.
 When the Lord of the Hill, Amundeville,
 Made Norman Church his prey,
 And expelled the friars, one friar still
 Would not be driven away.

2.

Though he came in his might, with King Henry's right,
To turn church lands to lay,
With sword in hand, and torch to light
Their walls, if they said nay,
A monk remained, uncursed, unchained,
And he did not seem formed of clay,
For he's seen in the porch, and he's seen in the church,
Though he is not seen by day.

3.

And whether for good, or whether for ill,
It is not mine to say ;
But still to the house of Amundeville
He abideth night and day.
By the marriage bed of their lords, 'tis said,
He flits on the bridal eve ;
And 'tis held as faith, to their bed of death,
He comes---but not to grieve.

4.

When an heir is born, he is heard to mourn,
And when aught is to befall
That ancient line, in the pale moonshine
He walks from hall to hall.
His form you may trace, but not his face,
'Tis shadowed by his cowl ;
But his eyes may be seen from the folds between,
And they seem of a parted soul.

5.

But beware ! beware ! of the Black Friar,
 He still retains his sway,
 For he is yet the Church's heir
 Whoever may be the day.
 Amundeville is lord by day,
 But the monk is lord by night.
 Nor wine nor wassail could raise a vassal
 To question that friar's right.

6.

Say nought to him as he walks the hall,
 And he'll say nought to you ;
 He sweeps along in his dusky pall,
 As o'er the grass the dew.
 Then Grammercy ! for the Black Friar ;
 Heaven sain him ? fair or foul,
 And whatsoe'er may be his prayer,
 Let ours be for his soul.

XLI.

The lady's voice ceased, and the thrilling wires
 Died from the touch that kindled them to sound ;
 And the pause followed, which when song expires,
 Pervades a moment those who listen round ;
 And then of course the circle much admires,
 Nor less applauds as in politeness bound,
 The tones, the feeling, and the execution,
 To the performer's diffident confusien.

XLII.

Fair Adeline, though in a careless way,
As if she rated such accomplishment
As the mere pastime of an idle day,
Pursued an instant for her own content,
Would now and then as 'twere without display,
Yet with display in fact, at times relent
To such performances with haughty smile,
To show she could, if it were worth her while.

XLIII.

Now this (but we will whisper it aside)
Was---pardon the pedantic illustration---
Trampling on Plato's pride with greater pride,
As did the Cynic on some like occasion;
Deeming the sage would be much mortified,
Or thrown into a philosophic passion,
For a spoilt carpet---but the "Attic Bee"
Was much consoled by his own repartee. (2)

XLIV.

Thus Adeline would throw into the shade,
(By doing easily whenc'er she chose,
What dilettanti do with vast parade)
Their sort of half profession; for it grows
To something like this when too oft displayed,
And that it is so, every body knows,
Who have heard Miss That or This, or Lady T' other,
Show off---to please their company or mother.

XLV.

Oh ! the long evenings of duets and trios !
 The admirations and the speculations ;
 The “ Mamma Mia’s ! ” and the “ Amor Mio’s ! ”
 The “ Tanti palpiti’s ” on such occasions :
 The “ Lasciami’s,” and quavering “ Addio’s ! ”
 Amongst our own most musical of nations ;
 With “ Tu mi chamas’s ” from Portingale,
 To soothe our ears, lest Italy should fail. (3)

XLVI.

In Babylon’s bravuras—as the home
 Heart-ballads of Green Erin or Grey Highlands,
 That brings Lochaber back to eyes that roam
 O’er far Atlantic continents or islands,
 The calentures of music which o’ercome
 All mountaineers with dreams that they are nigh lands,
 No more to be beheld but in such visions,—
 Was Adeline well versed, as compositions.

XLVII.

She also had a twilight tinge of “ Blue, ”
 Could write rhymes, and compose more than she wrote ;
 Made epigrams occasionally too
 Upon her friends, as every body ought.
 But still from that sublimer azure hue,
 So much the present dye, she was remote,
 Was weak enough to deem Pope a great poet,
 And what was worse, was not ashamed to show it.

XLVIII.

Aurora—since we are touching upon taste,
 Which now-a-days is the thermometer
 By whose degrees all characters are classed—
 Was more Shakespearian, if I do not err.
 The world beyond this world's perplexing waste
 Had more of her existence, for in her
 There was a depth of feeling to embrace
 Thoughts, boundless, deep, but silent too as space.

XLIX.

Not so her gracious, graceful, graceless Grace,
 The full grown Hebe of Fitz-Fulke, whose mind,
 If she had any, was upon her face,
 And that was of a fascinating kind.
 A little turn for mischief you might trace
 Also thereon,—but that's not much ; we find
 Few females without some such gentle leaven,
 For fear we should suppose us quite in heaven.

L.

I have not heard she was at all poetic,
 Though once she was seen reading the “Bath Guide,”
 And “ Hayley’s Triumphs,” which she deemed pathetic,
 Because, she said, her temper had been tried
 So much, the bard had really been prophetic
 Of what she had gone through with,—since a bride.
 But of all verse, what most insured her praise
 Were sonnets to herself, or “ Bouts rimés.”

LI.

'Twere difficult to say what was the object
 Of Adeline, in bringing this same lay
 To bear on what appeared to her the subject
 Of Juan's nervous feelings on that day.
 Perhaps she merely had the simple project
 To laugh him out of his supposed dismay;
 Perhaps she might wish to confirm him in it,
 Though why I cannot say—at least this minute.

LII.

But so far the immediate effect
 Was to restore him to his self propriety,
 A thing quite necessary to the elect,
 Who wish to take the tone of their society:
 In which you cannot be too circumspect,
 Whether the mode be persiflage or piety,
 But wear the newest mantle of hypocrisy,
 On pain of much displeasing the Gynocracy..

LIII.

And therefore Juan now began to rally
 His spirits, and without more explanation,
 To jest upon such themes in many a sally.
 Her Grace too also seized the same occasion,
 With various similar remarks to tally,
 But wished for a still more detailed narration
 Of this same mystic Friar's curious doings,
 About the present family's deaths and wooings.

LIV.

Of these few could say more than has been said ;
They passed as such things do for superstition
With some, while others, who had more in dread
The theme, half credited the strange tradition ;
And much was talked on all sides on that head ;
But Juan, when cross-questioned on the vision,
Which some supposed (though he had not avowed it)
Had stirred him, answered in a way to cloud it.

LV.

And then, the mid-day having worn to one,
The company prepared to separate ;
Some to their several pastimes, or to none,
Some wondering 'twas so early, some so late.
There was a goodly match too, to be run
Between some greyhounds on my Lord's estate,
And a young race-horse of old pedigree,
Matched for the spring, whom several went to see.

LVI.

There was a picture dealer who had brought
A special Titian, warranted original,
So precious that it was not to be bought,
Though princes the possessor were besieging all.
The king himself had cheapened it, but thought
The Civil List (he deigns to accept, obliging all
His subjects by his gracious acceptance)
Too scanty, in these times of low taxation.

LVII.

But as Lord Henry was a connoisseur,—
 The friend of artists, if not arts,—the owner,
 With motives the most classical and pure,
 So that he would have been the very donor,
 Rather than seller, had his wants been fewer,
 So much he deemed his patronage an honour,
 Had brought the Capo d'opera, not for sale,
 But for his judgment,—never known to fail.

LVIII.

There was a modern Goth, I mean a Gothic
 Bricklayer of Babel, called an architect,
 Brought to survey these grey walls, which though so thick,
 Might have from time acquired some slight defect;
 Who, after rummaging the Abbey through thick
 And thin, produced a plan whereby to erect
 New buildings of correctest conformation,
 And throw down old, which he called restoration.

LIX.

The cost would be a trifle—an “old song”
 Set to some thousands ('tis the usual burthen
 Of that same tune, when people hum it long)—
 The price would speedily repay its worth in
 An edifice no less sublime than strong,
 By which Lord Henry's good taste would go forth in
 Its glory, through all ages shining sunny,
 For Gothic daring shown in English money. (4)

LX.

There were two lawyers busy on a mortgage
Lord Henry wished to raise for a new purchase;
Also a lawsuit upon tenures burgage,
And one on tithes, which sure are Discord's torches,
Kindling Religion till she throws down her gage,
“Untying” squires “to fight against the churches;”<sup>(5)</sup>
There was a prize ox, a prize pig, and ploughman,
For Henry was a sort of Sabine showman.

LXI.

There were two poachers caught in a steel trap
Ready for jail, their place of convalescence;
There was a country girl in a close cap
And scarlet cloak (I hate the sight to see, since—
Since—since—in youth, I had the sad mishap—
But luckily I have paid few parish fees since)
That scarlet cloak, alas! unclosed with Rigour,
Presents the problem of a double figure.

LXII.

A reel within a bottle is a mystery,
One can't tell how it e'er got in or out,
Therefore the present piece of natural history,
I leave to those who are fond of solving doubt,
And merely state, though not for the consistory,
Lord Henry was a justice, and that Scout
The constable, beneath a warrant's banner,
Had bagged this poacher upon Nature's manor.

LXIII.

Now Justices of Peace must judge all pieces
 Of mischief of all kinds, and keep the game
 And morals of the country from caprices
 Of those who have not a licence for the same ;
 And of all things, excepting tithes and leases,
 Perhaps these are most difficult to tame :
 Preserving partridges and pretty wenches
 Are puzzles to the most cautious benches.

LXIV.

The present culprit was extremely pale,
 Pale as if painted so ; her cheek being red
 By nature, as in higher dames less hale
 'Tis white, at least when they just rise from bed.
 Perhaps she was ashamed of seeming frail,
 Poor soul ! for she was country born and bred,
 And knew no better in her immorality
 Than to wax white—for blushes are for quality.

LXV.

Her black, bright, downcast, yet espiegle eye,
 Had gathered a large tear into its corner,
 Which the poor thing at times essayed to dry,
 For she was not a sentimental mourner,
 Parading all her sensibility,
 Nor insolent enough to scorn the scorner,
 But stood in trembling, patient tribulation
 To be called up for her examination.

LXVI.

Of course these groups were scattered here and there,
Not nigh the gay saloon of ladies gent.
The lawyers in the study; and in air
The prize pig, ploughman, poachers; the men sent
From town, viz. architect and dealear, were Both busy (as a general in his tent
Writing dispatches) in their several stations,
Exulting in their brilliant lucubrations.

LXVII.

But this poor girl was left in the great hall,
While Scout, the parish guardian of the frail,
Discussed (he hated beer yclept the “small”)
A mighty mug of moral double ale:
She waited until Justice could recal
Its kind attentions to their proper pale,
To name a thing in nomenclature rather
Perplexing for most virgins—a child’s father.

LXVIII.

You see here was enough of occupation
For the Lord Henry, linked with dogs and horses.
There was much bustle too and preparation
Below stairs on the score of second courses,
Because, as suits their rank and situation,
Those who in counties have great land resources,
Have “public days,” when all men may carouse,
Though not exactly what’s called “open house.”

LXIX.

But once a week or fortnight, uninvited
(Thus we translate a general invitation)
All country gentlemen, esquired or knighted,
May drop in without cards, and take their station
At the full board, and sit alike delighted
With fashionable wines and conversation ;
And as the Isthmus of the grand connection,
Talk o'er themselves, the past and next election.

LXX.

Lord Henry was a great clectioneerer,
Burrowing for boroughs like a rat or rabbit,
But county contests cost him rather dearer,
Because the neighbouring Scotch Earl of Giftgabbit
Had English influence, in the self-same sphere here ;
His son, the Honourable Dick Dicedrabbit,
Was member for the “other Interest” (meaning
The same self-interest, with a different leaning.)

LXXI.

Courteous and cautious therefore in his county,
He was all things to all men, and dispensed
To some civility, to others bounty,
And promises to all—which last commenced
To gather to a somewhat large amount, he
Not calculating how much they condensed ;
But what with keeping some, and breaking others,
His word had the same value as another’s.

LXXII.

A friend to freedom and freeholders—yet
No less a friend to government—he held,
That he exactly the just medium hit
'Twixt place and patriotism—albeit compelled,
Such was his Sovereign's pleasure (though unfit,
    He added modestly, when rebels railed)
To hold some sinecures he wished abolished,
But that with them all law would be demolished.

LXXIII.

He was “ free to confess”—(whence comes this phrase ?
    Is't English? No—'tis only parliamentary)
That innovation's spirit now-a-days
    Had made more progress than for the last century.
He would not tread a factious path to praise,
    Though for the public weal disposed to venture high ;
As for his placee, he could but say this of it,
    That the fatigue was greater than the profit.

LXXIV.

Heaven and his friends, knew that a private life
    Had ever been his sole and whole ambition ;
But eould he quit his king in times of strife
    Which threatened the whole country with perdition ?
When demagogues would with a butcher's knife
    Cut through and through (oh ! damnable ineision !)
The Gordian or the Geardi-an knot, whose strings
    Have tied together Commons, Lords, and Kings.

LXXXV.

Sooner “ come place into the civil list
 And champion him to the utmost”—he would keep it,
 Till duly disappointed or dismissed :
 Profit he cared not for, let others reap it ;
 But should the day come when place ceased to exist,
 The country would have far more cause to weep it ;
 For how could it go on ? Explain who can !
He gloried in the name of Englishman.

LXXXVI.

He was as independent—aye, much more—
 Than those who were not paid for independence,
 As common soldiers, or a common—Shore,
 Have in their several arts or parts ascendance
 O'er the irregulars in lust or gore,
 Who do not give professional attendance.
 Thus on the mob all statesmen are as eager
 To prove their pride, as footmen to a beggar.

LXXXVII.

All this (save the last stanza) Henry said,
 And thought. I say no more—I've said too much ;
 For all of us have either heard or read
 Of—or upon the hustings—some slight such
 Hints from the independent heart or head
 Of the official candidate. I'll touch
 No more on this—the dinner bell hath rung,
 And grace is said ; the grace I should have sung—

LXXVIII.

But I'm too late, and therefore must make play.
'Twas a great banquet such as Albion old
Was wont to boast—as if a glutton's tray
Were something very glorious to behold.
But 'twas a public feast and public day,—
Quite full, right dull, guests hot, and dishes cold,
Great plenty, much formality, small cheer,
And every body out of their own sphere.

LXXIX.

The squires familiarly formal, and
My lords and ladies proudly condescending ;
The very servants puzzling how to hand
Their plates---without it might be too much bending
From their high places by the sideboard's stand---
Yet like their masters fearful of offending.
For any deviation from the graces
Might cost both men and master too---their places.

LXXX.

There were some hunters bold, and coursers keen,
Whose hounds ne'er erred, nor greyhounds deigned
to lurch ;
Some deadly shots too, Septembrizers, seen
Earliest to rise, and last to quit the search
Of the poor partridge through his stubble screen.
There were some massy members of the church,
Takers of tithes, and makers of good matches,
And several who sung fewer psalms than catches.

LXXXI.

There were some country wags too,---and alas !
 Some exiles from the town, who had been driven
 To gaze, instead of pavement, upon grass,
 And rise at nine in lieu of long eleven.
 And lo ! upon that day it came to pass,
 I sate next that o'erwhelming son of heaven,
 The very powerful Parson, Peter Pith,
 The loudest wit I e'er was deafened with.

LXXXII.

I knew him in his livelier London days,
 A brilliant diner out, though but a curate ;
 And not a joke he cut but earned its praise,
 Until preferment, coming at a sure rate,
 (Oh, Providence ! how wondrous are thy ways,
 Who would suppose thy gifts sometimes obdurate ?)
 Gave him, to lay the devil who looks o'er Lincoln,
 A fat fen vicarage, and nought to think on.

LXXXIII.

His jokes were sermons, and his sermons jokes ;
 But both were thrown away amongst the fens ;
 For wit hath no great friend in aguish folks.
 No longer ready ears and short hand-pens
 Imbibed the gay bon-mot, or happy hoax :
 The poor priest was reduced to common sense,
 Or to coarse efforts very loud and long,
 To hammer a hoarse laugh from the thick throng.

LXXXIV.

There is a difference, says the song, “between
A beggar and a queen,” or was (of late
The latter worse used of the two we’ve seen—
But we’ll say nothing of affairs of state)
A difference “ ‘twixt a bishop and a dean,”
A difference between crockery ware and plate
As between English beef and Spartan broth—
And yet great heroes have been bred by both.

LXXXV.

But of all nature’s discrepancies, none
Upon the whole is greater than the difference
Beheld between the country and the town,
Of which the latter merits every preference
From those who have few resources of their own,
And only think, or act, or feel with reference
To some small plan of interest or ambition—
Both which are limited to no condition.

LXXXVI.

But “en avant!” The light loves languish o’er
Long banquets and too many guests, although
A slight repast makes people love much more,
Bacchus and Ceres being, as we know,
Even from our grammar upwards, friends of yore
With vivifying Venus, who doth owe
To these the invention of champagne and truffles:
Temperance delights her, but long fasting ruffles.

LXXXVII.

Dully past o'er the dinner of the day ;
 And Juan took his place, he knew not where,
 Confused, in the confusion, and distract,
 And sitting as if nailed upon his chair ;
 Though knives and forks clanged round as in a fray,
 He seemed unconscious of all passing there,
 Till some one, with a groan, exprest a wish
 (Unheeded twice) to have a fin of fish.

LXXXVIII.

On which, at the third asking of the banns,
 He started ; and perceiving smiles around
 Broadening to grins, he coloured more than once,
 And hastily—as nothing can confound
 A wise man more than laughter from a dunce—
 Inflicted on the dish a deadly wound,
 And with such hurry, that ere he could curb it,
 He had paid his neighbour's prayer with half a turbot.

LXXXIX.

This was no bad mistake, as it occurred,
 The supplicator being an amateur ;
 But others, who were left with scarce a third,
 Were angry—as they well might, to be sure.
 They wondered how a young man so absurd
 Lord Henry at his table should endure ;
 And this, and his not knowing how much oats
 Had fallen last market, cost his host three votes.

XC.

They little knew, or might have sympathised
That he the night before had seen a ghost;
A prologue which but slightly harmonised
With the substantial company engrossed
By matter, and so much materialised,
That one scarce knew at what to marvel most
Of two things—how (the question rather odd is)
Such bodies could have souls, or souls such bodies.

XCI.

But what confused him more than smile or stare
From all the 'squires and 'squires around,
Who wondered at the abstraction of his air,
Especially as he had been renowned
For some vivacity among the fair,
Even in the country circle's narrow bound—
(For little things upon my Lord's estate
Were good small-talk for others still less great)—

XCII.

Was, that he caught Aurora's eye on his,
And something like a smile upon her cheek.
Now this he really rather took amiss :
In those who rarely smile, their smile bespeaks
A strong external motive ; and in this
Smile of Aurora's there was nought to pique
Or hope, or love, with any of the wiles
Which some pretend to trace in ladies' smiles.

XCIII.

'Twas a mere quiet smile of contemplation,
 Indicative of some surprise and pity;
 And Juan grew carnation with vexation,
   Which was not very wise and still less witty,
 Since he had gained at least her observation,
   A most important outwork of the city—
 As Juan should have known, had not his senses
 By last night's ghost been driven from their defences.

XCIV.

But what was bad, she did not blush in turn,
   Nor seem embarrassed—quite the contrary;
 Her aspect was as usual, still—not stern—
   And she withdrew, but cast not down, her eye,
 Yet grew a little pale—with what? concern?
   I know not; but her colour ne'er was high—
 Though sometimes faintly flushed---and always clear
 As deep seas in a Sunny Atmosphere.

XCV.

But Adeline was occupied by fame
   This day; and watching, witching, condescending
 To the consumers of fish, fowl and game,
   And dignity with courtesy so blending,
 As all must blend whose part it is to aim
   (Especially as the sixth year is ending)
 At their lord's, son's, or similar connection's
 Safe conduct through the rocks of re-elections.

XCVI.

Though this was most expedient on the whole,
 And usual---Juan, when he cast a glance
 On Adeline while playing her grand role,
 Which she went through as though it were a dance,
 (Betraying only now and then her soul
 By a look scarce perceptibly askance
 Of weariness or scorn) began to feel
 Some doubt how much of Adeline was real;

XCVII.

So well she acted, all and every part
 By turns---with that vivacious versatility,
 Which many people take for want of heart.
 They err---'tis merely what is called mobility, (6)
 A thing of temperament and not of art,
 Though seeming so, from its supposed facility ;
 And false---though true ; for surely they're sincerest,
 Who are strongly acted on by what is nearest.

XCVIII.

This makes your actors, artists, and romancers,
 Heroes sometimes, though seldom---sages never ;
 But speakers, bards, diplomatists, and dancers,
 Little that's great, but much of what is clever ;
 Most orators, but very few financiers,
 Though all Exchequer Chancellors endeavour,
 Of late years, to dispense with Cocker's rigours,
 And grow quite figurative with their figures.

XCIX.

The poets of arithmetic are they
 Who, though they prove not two and two to be
 Five, as they would do in a modest way,
 Have plainly made it out that four are three,
 Judging by what they take, and what they pay.
 The sinking Fund's unfathomable sea,
 That most unliquidating liquid, leaves
 The debt unsunk, yet sinks all it receives.

C.

While Adeline dispensed her airs and graces,
 The fair Fitz-Fulke seemed very much at ease ;
 Though too well bred to quiz men to their faces,
 Her laughing blue eyes with a glance could seize
 The ridicules of people in all places—
 That honey of your fashionable bees—
 And store it up for mischievous enjoyment ;
 And this at present was her kind employment.

CI.

However, the day closed, as days must close ;
 The evening also waned---and coffee came.
 Each carriage was announced, and ladies rose,
 And curtseying off, as curtsies country dairne,
 Retired : with most unfashionable bows
 Their docile esquires also did the same,
 Delighted with the dinner and their host,
 But with the Lady Adeline the most.

CII.

Some praised her beauty ; others her great grace ;
 The warmth of her politeness, whose sincerity
 Was obvious in each feature of her face,
 Whose traits were radiant with the rays of verity.
 Yes ; she was truly worthy her high place !
 No one could envy her deserved prosperity ;
 And then her dress---what beautiful simplicity
 Draperied her form with curious felicity ! (7)

CIII.

Meanwhile sweet Adeline deserved their praises,
 By an impartial indemnification.
 For all her past exertion and soft phrases,
 In a most edifying conversation,
 Which turned upon their late guests' miens and faces,
 And families, even to the last relation ;
 Their hideous wives, their horrid selves and dresses,
 And truculent distortion of their tresses.

CIV.

True, she said little---'twas the rest that broke
 Forth into universal epigram ;
 But then 'twas to the purpose what she spoke :
 Like Addison's "faint praise," so wont to damu,
 Her own but served to set off every joke,
 As music chimes in with a melodrame.
 How sweet the task to shield an absent friend !
 I ask but this of mine, to——not defend.

CV.

There were but two exceptions to this keen
 Skirmish of wits o'er the departed ; one,
 Aurora, with her pure and placid mien ;
 And Juan too, in general behind none
 In gay remark on what he had heard or seen,
 Sate silent now, his usual spirits gone :
 In vain he heard the others rail or rally,
 He would not join them in a single sally.

CVI.

'Tis true he saw Aurora look as though
 She approved his silence ; she perhaps mistook
 Its motive for that charity we owe
 But seldom pay the absent, nor would look
 Further it might or it might not be so.
 But Juan, sitting silent in his nook,
 Observing little in his reverie,
 Yet saw this much, which he was glad to see.

CVII.

The ghost at least had done him this much good,
 In making him as silent as a ghost,
 If in the circumstances which ensued
 He gained esteem where it was worth the most,
 And certainly Aurora had renewed
 In him some feelings he had lately lost
 Or hardened ; feelings which, perhaps ideal,
 Are so divine, that I must deem them real :—

CVIII.

The love of higher things and better days ;
The unbounded hope, and heavenly ignorance
Of what is called the world, and the world's ways.
The moments when we gather from a glance
More joy than from all future pride or praise,
Which kindle manhood, but can ne'er entrance
The heart in an existence of its own,
Of which another's bosom is the zone.

CIX.

Who would not sigh Αἰ αἱ ταῦ Κυθερίαν !
That hath a memory, or that had a heart ?
Alas ! her star must wane like that of Dian ;
Ray fades on ray, as years on years depart,
Anacreon only had the soul to tie an
Unwithering myrtle round the unblunted dart
Of Eros ; but though thou hast played as many tricks,
Still we respect thee, “ Alma Venus Genetrix !”

CX.

And full of sentiments, sublime as billows
Heaving between this world and worlds beyond,
Don Juan, when the midnight hour of pillows
Arrived, retired to his ; but to despond
Rather than rest. Instead of poppies, willows
Waved o'er his couch ; he meditated, fond
Of those sweet bitter thoughts which banish sleep,
And make the worldling sneer, the youngling weep.

CXI.

The night was as before : he was undrest,
 Saving his night gown, which is an undress ;
 Completely " sans eulotte," and without vest ;
 In short, he hardly could be clothed with less ;
 But apprehensive of his spectral guest,
 He sate, with feelings awkward to express,
 (By those who have not had such visitations)
 Expectant of the ghost's fresh operations.

CXII.

And not in vain listened—Hush ! what's that ?
 I see—I see—Ah, no !---'tis not---yet 'tis---
 Ye powers ! it is the---the---the---Pooh ! the cat !
 The devil may take that stealthy pace of his !
 So like a spiritual pit-a-pat,
 Or tiptoe of an amatory Miss,
 Gliding the first time to a rendezvous,
 And dreading the chaste echoes of her shoe.

CXIII.

Again---what is't ? The wind ? No, no,---this
 It is the sable Friar as before,
 With awful footsteps regular as rhyme,
 Or (as rhymes may be in these days) much more.
 Again, through shadows of the night sublime,
 When deep sleep fell on men, and the world wore
 The starry darkness round her like a girdle
 Spangled with gems---the monk made his blood curdle.

CXIV.

A noise like to wet fingers drawn on glass, (8)
Which sets the teeth on edge ; and a slight clatter
Like showers which on the midnight gusts will pass,
Sounding like very supernatural water,—
Came over Juan's ear, which throbbed, alas !
For immaterialism's a serious matter ;
So that even those whose faith is the most great
In souls immortal, shun them tête-à-tête.

CXV.

Were his eyes open ?---Yes ! and his mouth too.
Surprise has this effect---to make one dumb,
Yet leave the gate which Eloquence slips through
As wide as if a long speech were to come.
Nigh and more nigh the awful echoes drew,
Tremendous to the immortal tympanum :
His eyes were open, and (as was before
Stated) his mouth. What opened next ?---the door.

CXVI.

It opened with a most infernal creak,
Like that of Hell. " Lasciate ogni speranza
Voi che entrate !" The hinge seemed to speak,
Dreadful as Dante's rhima, or this stanza ;
Or---but all words upon such themes are weak :
A single shade's sufficient to entrance a
Hero---for what is substance to a Spirit ?
Or how is't matter trembles to come near it ?

CXVII.

The door flew wide, not swiftly---but, as fly
The sea-gulls, with a steady, sober flight---
And then swung back ; nor close---but stood awry,
Half letting in long shadows on the light,
Which still in Juan's candlesticks burned high,
For he had two, both tolerably bright,---
And in the door-way, darkening Darkness, stood
The sable Friar in his solemn hood.

CXVIII.

Don Juan shook, as erst he had been shaken
The night before ; but being sick of shaking,
He first inclined to think he had been mistaken,
And then to be ashamed of such mistaking ;
His own internal ghost began to awaken
Within him, and to quell his corporal quaking---
Hinting, that soul and body on the whole
Were odds against a disembodied soul.

CXIX.

And then his head grew wrath, and his wrath fierce ;
And he arose, advanced—the shade retreated ;
But Juan, eager now the truth to pierce,
Followed, his veins no longer cold, but heated,
Resolved to thrust the mystery carte and tierce,
At whatsoever risk of being defeated :
The ghost stopped, menaced, then retired, until
He reached the ancient wall, then stood stone still.

CXX.

Juan put forth one arm—Eternal Powers !
It touched no soul, nor body, but the wall,
On which the moonbeams fell in silvery showers
Chequered with all the tracery of the hall ;—
He shuddered, as on doubt the bravest cowers
When he can't tell what 'tis that doth appal.
How odd, a single hobgoblin's non-entity
Should cause more fear than a whole host's identity !(9)

CXXI.

But still the shade remained ; the blue eyes glared,
And rather variably for stony death ;
Yet one thing rather good the grave had spared---
The ghost had a remarkably sweet breath.
A straggling curl showed he had been fair-haired ;
A red lip, with two rows of pearls beneath,
Gleamed forth, as through the casement's ivy shroud
The moon peeped, just escaped from a grey cloud.

CXXII.

And Juan, puzzled, but still curious, thrust
His other arm forth---Wonder upon wonder !
It pressed upon a hard but glowing bust,
Which beat as if there was a warm heart under.
He found, as people on most trials must,
That he had made at first a silly blunder,
And that in his confusion he had caught
Only the wall, instead of what he sought.

CXXIII.

The ghost, if ghost it were, seemed a sweet soul
As ever lurked beneath a holy hood :
A dimpled chin, a neck of ivory stole
Forth into something much like flesh and blood ;
Back fell the sable frock and dreary cowl,
And they revealed---alas ! that ere they should !
In full, voluptuous, but not o'ergrown bulk,
The phantom of her frolic Grace---Fitz-Fulke !

NOTES TO CANTO XVI.

---

If from a shell-fish or from cochineal.

Note 1, page 354, stanza x.

The composition of the old Tyrian purple, whether from a shell-fish or from cochineal, or from kermes, is still an article of dispute ; and even its colour—some say purple, others scarlet: I say nothing.

Note 2, page 367, stanza xlivi.

*For a spoilt carpet---but the “ Attic Bee”
Was much consoled by his own repartee.*

I think that it was a carpet on which Diogenes trod, with---“ Thus I trample on the pride of Plato!”---“ With greater pride,” as the other replied. But as carpets are meant to be trodden upon, my memory probably misgives me, and it might be a robe, or tapestry, or a table-cloth, or some other expensive and uncynical piece of furniture.

Note 3, page 368, stanza xliv.

*With “Tu mi chamas’s” from Portingale,
To soothe our ears, lest Italy should fail.*

I remember that the mayoress of a provincial town, somewhat surfeited with a similar display from foreign parts, did rather indecorously break through the applauses of an intelligent audience---intelligent, I mean, as to music,---for the words, besides being in recondite languages (it was some years before the peace, ere all the world had travelled, and while I was a collegian)---were sorely disguised by the performers;—this mayoress, I say, broke out with, “Rot your Italianos! for my part, I loves a simple ballat!” Rossini will go a good way to bring most people to the same opinion, some day. Who would imagine that he was to be the successor of Mozart? However, I state this with diffidence, as a liege and loyal admirer of Italian music in general, and of much of Rossini’s: but we may say, as the connoisseur did of painting, in the Vicar of Wakefield, “that the picture would be better painted if the painter had taken more pains.”

Note 4, page 372, stanza lix.

“Ausū Romano, ære beneto” is the inscription (and well inscribed in this instance) on the sea walls between the Adriatic and Venice. The walls were a republican work of the Venetians; the inscription, I believe, Imperial; and inscribed by Napoleon the First. It is time to continue to him that title—there will be a second by and by, “Spes altera mundi,” if he live: let him not defeat it like his father. But in any case he will be preferable to the Imbeciles. There is a glorious field for him, if he know how to cultivate it.

Note 5, page 373, stanza ix.

“ Untying” squires “ to fight against the churches.”

“ Though ye untie the winds and bid them fight
“ Against the churches.”—MACBETH.

Note 6, page, 385, stanza xcvi.

They err---’tis merely what is called mobility.

In French “ mobilité.” I am not sure that mobility is English; but it is expressive of a quality which rather belongs to other climates, though it is sometimes seen to a great extent in our own. It may be defined as an excessive susceptibility of immediate impressions—at the same time without losing the past; and is, though sometimes apparently useful to the possessor, a most painful and unhappy attribute.

Note 7, page 387, stanza cii.

“ Curioso felicitas.”—PETRONIUS ARBITER.

Note 8, page 391, stanza cxiv.

A noise like to wet fingers drawn on glass.

See the account of the Ghost of the Uncle of Prince Charles of Saxony raised by Schroepfer—“ Karl—Karl---was---wolt wolt mich ?”

---

Note 9, page 393, stanza cxx.

*How odd, a single hobgoblins' non-entity
Should cause more fear than a whole host's identity!*

"*Shadows to-night
Have struck more terror to the soul of Richard,
Than can the Substance of ten thousand soldiers, &c.&c.*
